Another stable of eight Eastern horses were expected to arrive to-day.

CALIFORNIA JOCKEY CLUB RACES.

The Meeting to Close For One Month, to Resume After That Time—New Horses and Jockeys Enhance the Sport at the Old Track.

TWENTY-FOURTH DAY—FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22.

HE card to-day was a novelty for local turfites in the respect of the distance of the races at least. Only one was below seven furlongs, and there was the usual mile event. The other three were started from the eighth pole. Two of the latter were at light welter-weights, and had a mixed lot of aged and two-year-old horses. Form-players were somewhat at sea, as the ability of the colts to carry added weight and go the further distance was problematical. The fields were unusually large, but were sent away in good shape in reasonably quick time. And the attendance was again up to a crushing magnitude, and good-natured elbowing was the order all the afternoon. Betting was lively, but the bets were small as a rule. Four favorites were again in front at the wire, and the way the talent has been plugging the books is becoming monotonous to the gentlemanly chalk-wielders. Last Chance was the only pick of the talent to go wrong, and he was worsted by a second choice.

Regan, favorite for the first event at seven furlongs over a poor lot of nags, ran around his field and won in a drive with Long d'Or, who challenged him through the stretch. Trentola's chances were spoiled by being pulled up at the start. Rhaetia was a warm second choice, but did not show prominently.

Schnitz laid away second in the next race, at five and a half furlongs, and then won rather handily from Selkirk in the run home. Rowan is not an extraordinary finisher, and Selkirk's speed of the other day was not developed. Last Chance, an odds on favorite with Chorn urging him along, could not get up better than third.

Bernardo opened as favorite for the third race at 2 to 1, but went back to threes. Scimitar was backed down a few points, as was also Soon Enough and Valiente Sea Spray was very prominent the first part of the journey, then Bernardo collared him after the turn into the stretch. Raindrop followed closely, and they looked safe to finish in that order till Scimitar was sent along in the last eighth and drew away, winning in a drive by a half length. Bernardo fell back a little and Raindrop got the place by a length in a drive.

McLight and Mamie Scott were scratched out of the fourth race, at a mile, leaving only four in the field. Of the lot Oakley was a foregone conclusion, and was an even-money favorite at the opening, closing at 7 to 5, with Happy Day at 9 to 5. Hy Dy and Don Caesar were at 5 and 7 to 1. When the bunch reached the half-mile pole Oakley began to draw away and easily opened up a gap of about half a block and won in a gallop. Happy Day and Hy Dy finished as named three lengths apart.

Marty Bergen had his first "leg-up" here on Belle Boyd in the last race, and the combination was played to win. Redington was very well liked, but the stable was afraid he would not do. Belle Boyd was taken out in front at once at flag-fall and held the lead in the stretch, with Redington pushing her all the way. Half way home Abi P. got in front, coming from back in the bunch, and in a hard drive Belle Boyd was lifted along and won by a nose. Redington, third, was two lengths behind Abi P.

Winning jockeys were C. Sloan, W. Martin, J. Chorn, Chevalier and Marty Bergen.

SUMMARIES.

First race—Seven furlongs, selling. Post betting—Regan 2 to 1, Rhaetia 7 to 5, Sir George 6, Long d'Or 7, Skalkaho 15, Trentola 40, Haymarket and Cleveland 100 to 1. Good start. Regan went around his field and won in a drive with Long d'Or. Winner, bg, 3, by Fabulous—Nettie R. Long d'Or (ch g, a, by Rayon D'Or—Blandana) second, driving; imp. Trentola (b h, 5, by Trenton—Gondola) third. Time, 1:30½.

Second race—Five and a half furlongs, selling. Post betting—Last Chance 9 to 10, Schnitz 16 to 5, Lolokulani 7, F. J. Jan 8, Selkirk 15, Johnny Payne 20, Soledad and Fin Slaughter 50, Kitty A. 100 to 1. Good start. Schnitz won through the stretch from Selkirk. Winner, ch c, 3, by Panique—Illia. Selkirk (ch h, a, by Verano—Genovivia), second, driving; Last Chance (ch g, 4, by Prince of Norfolk—Vidette), third. Time, 1:08½.

Third race—Seven furlongs, selling. Post betting—Scimitar 5 to 2, Bernardo 3, Soon Enough 5, Valiente 8, Sea Spray Moran and Raindrop 15, Suffrage and Gussie 20, Nevere 100, Outright 500 to 1. Good start. Scimitar won in last furlong from Raindrop and Bernardo. Winner, br c, 2, by Eothen—Wyandotte; Raindrop (b m, a, by Wildidle—imp. Teardrop) second, driving; Bernardo (br g, a, by imp. Cheviot—Sweet Peggy) third. Time, 1:2½.

Fourth race—One mile, selling. Post betting—Oakley 7 to 5, Happy Day 9 to 5, Hy Dy 5, Don Caesar 7 to 1. Good start. Oakley drew away on the far turn and won away off in a gallop. Winner, blk c, 3, by Sir Dixon—Miss Annie. Happy Day (br g, a, by Emperor—Felicity), second, driving; Hy Dy (br g, a, by Hyder Ali—Addie Warren), third. Time, 1:41½.

Fifth race—Seven furlongs, selling. Post betting—Belle Boyd 9 to 5, Redington 2½, Three Forks 5, Joe K. 7, Abi P. 15, Morgan G. 50, Rey Alla 60, Miss Pollard 70 to 1. Good start. Belle Boyd just lasted out in a driving finish with Abi P. and won by a nose. Winner, ch f, 2, by El Rio Rey—Sylvia. Abi P. (ch m, a, by Three Cheers—Daisy Maid) second, driving; Redington (h g, 2, by Emperor of Norfolk—Angelique) third. Time, 1:29.

TWENTY-FIFTH DAY—SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 23.

Gne could not wish for a better card than was presented to-day. Seven attractive numbers were on the programme, and the way the lovers of the thoroughbred swarmed out to old Bay District was very pleasing to anyone having an interest in the gate receipts. It was estimated that fully 4,000 were present, and when you get 4,000 enthusiasts who have a good thing to play in each race and only twelve books to play in, there is apt to be a little pushing and hauling, but it was all in the very best natured manner. The several fields were sent away with such little delay that the seven races were run off by a few minutes after 5 o'clock. Each one was a good start, excepting, perhaps, one in which one horse got some the worst of the send-off.

The event of the day, as the card read, was the Produce Stakes, for two-year olds, at five and a half furlongs, the first of the California Jockey Club's stakes for 1895-96 to be decided. Guaranteed value to the winner $700, $200 to second and $100 to third. The El Primero stable's pair (Caliente and El Primero) were made favorite over the field. Mt. McGregor II was a good second choice, and Mr. Corrigan's Camelia was just a little better favored than Masoero. There was but slight delay at the post, and the field went away well bunched. Mt. McGregor forged ahead at once and led to the far turn, where Road Warner came up and headed him. Into the stretch McGregor led slightly, with Road Warner close up on the outside. Masoero was in third place, half a length in front of Caliente. Half way home McGregor bored out and despite Willie Martin's efforts could not be stopped. He straightened him out for a few strides then the colt swerved again at the paddock gate. Martin pulled his head around on one side trying to keep him off the outer rail, but he went like a shot close up under the judges' stand. Chorn had nursed Caliente and made his run in the last eighth and while McGregor was losing valuable ground Caliente was going for the money. The horses finished on very even terms on opposite sides of the track, and there was at once a difference of opinion as to who was the winner. Judge Burke thought McGregor was first by a good half length, which opinion was also held by Col. Burns, who watched the finish from under the wire at the inside rail. Judges Trevathan and Brough saw Caliente first, they thought, and so the result was announced. Mt. McGregor was placed second and Caliente third, and Col. Burns expressed his dissatisfaction with the decision, and declared his colt was first by a good neck, if not a full half length. This was the third time the erratic animal had cost Col. Burns quite dearly. On his first start he did not break with the field and was pulled up, and on another occasion he bolted at the paddock gate with Donahue when he seemed to hold the race secure. Caliente, the winner, is the property of the wealthy Sacramentan J. E. Terry, who races under the name of El Primero stable. He has borne his owner's colors to victory before, but his performance to-day stamps him as one of the very best two year-olds of the year in the far West. He carried top weight of 123 pounds, and did not give any evidence of distress. 'He is a chestnut colt, bred by Theodore Winters at Rancho del Sierras, a full brother to Uncle Giles, by El Rio Rey, out of Hettie Humphrey (own sister to Bonanza), by Joe Hooker; second dam Mattie Glenn, a good turf performer and half-sister to Grenada, winner of the Withers, Belmont Travers and many other rich stakes, by imp. Glen Athol. In this colt's veins flows the blood of Lexington, imp. Glencoe, American Eclipse, Melbourne and Stockwell—the best in the world. The time was 1:09.

In point of the interest it afforded, the two-year-old handicap was the race of the day. Ferris Hartman was favorite and La Vienta second choice. Of the other four Instigator was best liked. Ferris Hartman ran in second place till near home, then Chorn moved him up. In a hustling finish the distance between the first five horses did not aggregate a full length, and it was a proverbial blanket finish. Clara Johnson finished second to Ferris Hartman, with Billy McCloskey, Veva and Instigator in the order named, La Vienta pulled up. To bring such horses as Hartman and Clara Johnson so close together was a very clever bit of work on the part of the handicapper, and the whole was an exceptionally good handicap. Instigator got the worst of the send off by two lengths or so. Time, 1:08.

The mile and an eighth handicap furnished a hair-raising finish, and the race was won by Wawona after he had apparently lost it. He had led into the stretch, then gave way to McLight, who came on so strongly that it looked to be all over but the shouting. But just when the shouting began Wawona, who proved to have quite a little in reserve, came again, and got his head in front at the wire. It was a very cleverly-riden race, and shows Tod Sloan has not lost any of his cunning. Time, 1:54½.

Of the other events the first one was taken quite handily by Nervoso, the favorite, with Arctic an easy second over Myron. Chevalier fell from Miss Ruth on the turn into the stretch, but was not seriously injured. Time, 1:09.

Miss Gentry, the speedy daughter of Chesapeake, won a run away race from the old favorite, Jack Richelieu, and then May Day a 15 to 1 shot for place honors, forced him into third position. Time, 1:08.

Sister Mary won on her first start here this winter against the good colts Vincto and Grady. Vincto was not up to a hard race, and Grady was handled in such a way as to make his backers groan. Reidy pulled him up on the quarter turn, then impulsively turned him loose and raced him off his legs by the time the stretch was reached. Vincto passed Grady, but could not reach Sister Mary, who took command turning for home. Charmion came from last and beat the tired Grady for the show. Time, 1:20½.

J. O. C. won the steeplechase over the short course, with Mestor two lengths away, but the winner did not have anything to spare. Gold Dust was third. Adelante was sent over the jumps again, but he does not give any promise of a bright career. Time, 2:23½.

Winning jockeys to day were: T. Sloan two, J. Chorn two, E. Jones, W. Martin and J. Johnson.

SUMMARIES.

First race—Five and a half furlongs, selling. Post betting—Nervoso 2, Miss Ruth 4½, Podiga 4, Arctic 5, Arno 6, Myron 10, Comrade 12, Sylvester 20 to 1. Good start. Nervoso led all the way and won handily. Winner ch g, 3, by imp. Brutus—Nerva. Arctic (b h, 4, by R-hson—Greenleaf) second, driving; Myron (b g, 3, by imp. Midlothian—by Great Tom) third. Time, 1:09.

Second race—Five and a half furlongs. Post betting—Jack Richelieu 7 to 5, Miss Gentry 9 to 5, McFarlane 5, Royal Flush 7, May Day 50 to 1. Good start. Miss Gentry won as she liked. Winner b m, a, by Chesapeake—Sunshine. May Day (ch h, 4, by John A.—Lowena R.) second, driving; Jack Richelieu (b h, 6, by imp. Great Tom—Envenom) third. Time, 1:08.

Third race—The Produce Exchange stakes, for two-year-olds. Post betting—Caliente and El Primero, coupled, 11 to 5, Mt. McGregor II. 5 to 1, Camelia 9½ to 2, Masoero 5, Road Warner 12, Catherine First and La Flecha 15, Castanette 50, Irene E. 100, San Marcus 100, Vicksburg 400 to 1. Good start. Mt. McGregor led in stretch but swerved to outside rail. Caliente finished on inside and was given race, though McGregor was believed by many to have won. Winner, ch c, by El Rio Rey—Hettie Humphrey. Mt. McGregor II. (b c, by Day Star—Miss McGregor) second, driving; Camelia (b f, by Longfellow—Miss Howard) third. Time, 1:09.

Fourth race, six and a half furlongs. Post betting—Sister Mary 4 to 5, Vincto 5 to 2, Grady 7 to 2, Charmion 30 to 1. Good start. Sister Mary won through the stretch handily. Winner, b m, 5, by imp. Woodlands—Sister Vincto (b c, 3, by imp. Brutus—Mollie H.) second, driving; Charmion (ch m, 5, by Tyrant—Unit) third. Time, 1:20½.

Fifth race, five and one-half furlongs, handicap, for two-year-olds. Post betting—Ferris Hartman (115) 7 to 10, La Anita (112) 9 to 2; Instigator (103) 8 Billy McCloskey (104) 10, Clara Johnson (87) 15, Veva (100) 25 to 1. Good start for all but Instigator. Ferris Hartman won in a drive at the wire. Winner b g hy imp. Woodlands—Honora. Clara Johnson (ch f by El Rio Rey—Valarie) second, driving; Billy McCloskey (ch c by Joe Hooker—Jessie R.) third. Time, 1:08.

Sixth race—Steeplechase, about one and a half miles. Post betting—J. O. C. 3 to 5, Mestor 2, Gold Dust, Nellie G. and Wyandotte 20, Adelante 50 to 1. Good start. J. O. C. won easily. Winner ch g, 3, by Apache—Irene. Mestor (h g, 5, by Falsetto—Woodlark) second, driving; Gold Dust (b g, 5, by Oro—Gold Cup) third. Time, 3:23½.

Seventh race—One mile and a furlong handicap. Post betting—McLight (114) 3 to 5, Wawona (97) 7 to 2, Flirtilla (90) 5 and imp. Ivy (87) 20 to 1. Good start. Wawona won by a head from McLight in a drive at the wire. Winner ch g, 4, by imp. Sir Modred—Typhoon; McLight (ch h, 4, by McDuff—Longlight) second, driving; Flirtilla (b r, 3, by Peel—Faustine) third. Time, 1:54½.

TWENTY-SIXTH DAY—MONDAY, NOVEMBER 25.

To-day Vincto showed himself to be a very good horse—not that the fact was not generally known, but he emphasized it when he ran the seven furlongs in 1:26½, record time for the coast, and gave Sister Mary and Potentate a beating. On Saturday he made his first start for several weeks, and could not come up to Sister Mary at six and a half furlongs. He needed a good race or two to make him fit for a battle, and it was hardly expected that he would be quite up to one to day. However, he was equal to the task of driving the fleet mare out when it came to a bruise through the stretch. Martin kept his mount slightly in the lead from the half pole till after the turn was made, with Potentate in second place. Tod began to move up with Vincto on the turn and in the last eighth sent the Boots colt along. Sister Mary looked a winner till the Brutus strider began to close up the gap, and then she had to give in. She finished a length behind Vincto, five lengths in front of Potentate. Neither of the latter like the distance, while a lengthening suits Vincto. Coast record time was hung up, and the good colt was not all out. Ferris Hartman, in at 81 pounds, was thought to have a chance but he did not show it. The winner was at the good odds of 4 to 1, having receded from 2½.

Peter the Second, another Brutus colt, was made favorite, and won at a mile from good ones in good time, at his first start for several months. Dunganen, recently off the cars, was thought to be dangerous, as well as Monterey, and Polaski's chances were not altogether overlooked. Monterey cut out the pace for awhile, then Peter was sent out in front. On the turn home Polaski moved up and Peter fell back so that he seemed to be beaten. But Tod Sloan usually has a little up his sleeve, and did in this case. He loosened up at the drawgate and Peter romped in an easy winner. Polaski was second five lengths away, Fi Fi third three more Montana was fourth.

To take up the races in their order, Sir George, the favorite, won the first dash at five furlongs, and Free Will at 6 to 1, won the second race, at five furlongs, for two-year-olds, from Endymion, the favorite. The third was at the same conditions, and was taken by Gov. Budd, Matt Storn's good colt, in a very easy manner. He was a 3 to 5 favorite with Riot at 11 to 5 for second choice. Dancing Girl, a 4 to 1 shot for place, finished second and Riot third.

Then came the mile race, won by Peter the Second, and after it Victor's record-time run. The last race, at six furlongs, found Hymn and Robin Hood II, on equal terms at 2 to 1 at post time with Jack Richelieu next in favor. The winner turned up in 10 to 1 shot Babe Murphy, a bay filly belonging to L. Ezell, by Elias Lawrence, out of Princess Glenn. She outfooted Hymn in the last sixteenth and won handily by a length in the good time of 1:13½. Montana was a close-up third.

The attendance was again very good and betting lively. Favorites and long-shots divided honors, so the books had a fair day of it.

Tod Sloan took the riding honors, with two wins, while Willie Martin, Garner, Chorn and Cochrane had one each.

SUMMARIES.

First race—Five furlongs, selling. Post betting—Sir George 8 to 5, Trentola 3, Long d'Or, Geo. Rose and Adelaide 7, Orphan Boy and Brigantine 12, Al Broeck 30, R. H. 50 and Great Falls 60 to 1. Good start. Winner, ch h, a, by Spendthrift—imp. Piccadilly. Imp. Trentola (b h, 5, by Trenton—Gondola), second, driving; Geo. Rose, formerly Charity colt (b g, 3, by Three Cheers—Charity), third. Time, 1:02½.

Second race—Five furlongs, selling, for two-year-olds. Post betting—Imp. Endymion 11 to 10, Prince Hooker 4½, Free Will 6, Don Pedro 15, Fireman 20, Mollie Bawn 15 to 1. Good start. Winner, br f, by Brown Fox—Trade Wind, Fireman (br c, by imp. Brutus—Ariola), second, driving, imp. Endymion (ch g, by Euterprise—Sapientia), third. Time, 1:02.

Third race—Five furlongs, selling, for two-year-olds. Post betting—Gov. Budd 3 to 5, Riot 11 to 5, Linda Vista and Dancing Girl 12, Suffrage 25, Lady Gray and Duchesse, formerly Charlotte filly, 50 to 1. Good start. Gov. Budd won handily through the stretch. Winner, b g, by Fresno—Rosa G. Dancing Girl (b f, by St. Carlo—by Hyder Ali) second, driving; Riot (b g, by Hidalgo—Glen Ellen) third. Time, 1:12½.

Fourth race—One mile. Post betting—Peter the Second 4 to 5, Monterey 4½, Dunganven 2½, Polaski and Fi Fi 15, Sheridan and Jim Corbett 100 to 1. Good start. Peter the Second won handily through the stretch. Winner, b c, 3, by imp. Brutus—Bonnie Jean. Polaski (b g, 4, by Capt. Al—Gold Cup) second driving; Fi Fi (br g, 3, by Hidalgo—Veracity) third. Time, 1:26½.

Fifth race—Seven furlongs. Post betting—Sister Mary 13 to 10, Potentate 11 to 5, Victor 4, Ferris Hartman 9, Circe 40, Joe K. 60 to 1. Good start. Victor won handily from Sister Mary in the last eighth. Winner, b c, 3, by imp. Brutus—Mollie H.; Sister Mary (b m, 5, by imp. Woodlands—Sister) second, driving; Potentate (b h, 4, by Hayden—Edwards—Amelia P.) third. Time, 1:26½.

Sixth race—Six furlongs, selling. Post betting—Hymn and Robin Hood II 2, Jack Richelieu 4, Montana 8, Babe Murphy 10, Rose Clark 12 to 1 and Billy S. 15. Good start. Babe Murphy headed Hymn at the forty-yard pole and won easily. Winner, b f, 3, by Elias Lawrence—Princess Glenn; Hymn, b g, 4, by Hymn—Una B. second, driving, Montana (b h, a, by Storey—Uga) third. Time, 1:13½.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY—TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 26.

Long-shots were one, two, three in the Lissak Stakes to-day, and in very fair time, too. The event was a selling race, at five and a half furlongs and had thirteen starters. Of the lot Gratify was conceded the class, with Misa Brummel and Grady exceedingly dangerous, and they were favored in the order named in the betting. Another element that the talent was timid about was Miss Maxim, who had never started here, though bred in this State, but has shown some very creditable performances in the East. After some delay at the post, quite natural with such a large field, the lot was sent away in fair order. There was more or less shifting of positions from the start to the stretch, but when they got straightened out for home Charlie Boots was in front, with Laura F. a good second, Miss Brummel, Marionette and Miss Maxim next in order, all close up. Gratify had never got up, after getting off poorly, and Grady was coming along manfully in ninth position. In the last eighth Earl Cochran, astride his father's entry, Joan, a chestnut filly, by St. Carlo out of Bagatelle, lifted his mount along in a very clever manner and landed her an easy winner by two lengths from Charlie Boots, who could not come fast enough to head her. Marionette was a good third, just a length behind Boots. The placed horses were at 20, 30 and 50 to 1 in the betting, with comparatively few supporters. Such a complete upsetting of all the form in one event is rarely recorded. Of the favored ones in the betting Gratify, Miss Brummel and Grady finished fourth, sixth and eighth respectively. The stakes were worth $700 to the winner. To-day was the first time Joan has started here since April last. She started four times in the East, and was never better than third. She was bred by W. O'B. Macdonough and purchased at a weeding out sale by the present owner.

There were twelve starters in the first race, at five furlongs, selling. Monarch and Selkirk opened at about 3 to 1 and the former was backed down to 11 to 5; the latter closing at 17 to 5. Examiner carried a bundle of money, being forced from 8 to 4½ to 1. Arctic's price shortened from 50 to 5 to 1. The field was sent away almost at once to a ragged start with Beatrice out in front. Sooladain was left at the post, virtually, but soon got under way. Beatrice led into the stretch, with Monarch in second place. In the run home Monarch outfooted all the others and won driving by a head from Sooladain, who made the turn fifth. Selkirk came up rapidly and beat out the quitting Beatrice for the show. Examiner was never in the hunt. Time, 1:01½.

Toano was a 7 to 1 favorite for the second race, at five furlongs, selling. Mt. Roy was a well-played second choice, at 4½ to 1. Toano was held up at the start by Hennessy, and Kathleen showed first and led well through the stretch, when Last Chance, who had laid away second, headed the black mare and won easily by three lengths. Mt. Roy was a rather poor third.

The third race was at five and a half furlongs, with nine starters. McFarlane was a 9 to 5 favorite at post time, and Arctic at 11 to 5. After a delay at the post Arctic was played to an even-money favorite. The lead was held in turn by several in the field, but in the last eighth settled down to a horse race. Chorn, on Arctic, essayed to get through on the rail in very close quarters and had to bore his way through. Arctic got his nose in front at the wire, in a very close finish, with Montalvo second, one half a length in front of Carmel. McFarlane was fourth by half a length.

Scimitar was an 11 to 5 favorite in the fifth race, welter weights at six furlongs, and All Over, Pat Dunne's Hanover colt, carried a good deal of money on a hot tip. The field shifted considerably between the start and the stretch, when Scimitar drew away easily and won by two lengths. All Over, who had been pulled up on the turn, came thundering along and rushed into second place, with Suffrage half a length away. All Over will be fit for good company from now on.

In the next race, at seven and a half furlongs, Rosebud added another to her list of winning brackets, and in a very handy manner. She was favorite in the betting, odds on, with Oakland and Charmion candidates for place honors. Charmion was pace-maker to the drawgate, where Rosebud took command and led to the wire by a head, Charmion, under a hard drive, unable to get up to her. Oakland, third, was a length away.

Another big field went to the post for the last race, with Model a 5 to 2 favorite and Belle Boyd and Fannie Louise on even terms at 4 to 1. Salonica was well liked. Donnelly put up a miserable ride on Fannie Louise, getting her cut off several times. May Day, a 10 to 1 shot, headed Belle Boyd in the last few yards, and E. H. Sherley, off last, made a great run into third place. This closed a day's racing with the largest card ever presented on a California track. Eighty-one entries were filed, sixty-eight of which went to the post. The seven races were run off in three hours, and while the starts were not in every case up to Mr. Ferguson's best work, they were good, considering the size of the fields and the narrow track where most of them were started.

The attendance was very good again, and with only eleven bookmakers on for the balance of the meeting this week, they were all kept humming.

Jockeyship honors were pre-empted by Jerry Chorn, with three wins, a second and unplaced out of five mounts. Cash Sloan, E. Cochran, Donnelly and Coady each had one win.

Four favorites and three long-shots, at 20, 12 and 10 to 1, were the way they broke, which left the talent still ahead of the game during the last four or five days.

SUMMARIES.

First race—Five furlongs, selling. Post betting—Monarch 11 to 5, Selkirk 17 to 5, Examiner 4½, Sooladain 7, Gondola 12, Miss Garvin 15, Beatrice 20, Raphael and Tamalpais 30, Comrade 60, Harry Lewis 100 to 1. Scattering start. Monarch headed Beatrice in the stretch and won in a drive from Sooladain by a head. Winner, b g, 4, by Ironclad—by Bays water. Sooladain (br g, 3, by imp. Greenback—Half Sister) second, driving; Selkirk (ch h, a, by Verano—Genovivia) third. Time, 1:01½.

Second race—Five furlongs, selling. Post betting—Toano 7 to 10, Mt. Roy 4½, Rey Alta 10, Last Chance 12, Red Glenn 15, Julia O. and Kathleen 50 to 1. Perfect start. Kathleen led into the stretch and then was headed by Last Chance, who won easily. Winner, ch g, by Duke of Norfolk—Vedette. Toano (b g, a, by Longfellow—Salara) second, driving; Mt. Roy (b g, 4, by Faustus—Mt. City Belle) third. Time, 1:00½.

Third race—Five and one half furlongs, selling. Post betting—McFarlane 9 to 5, Arctic 11 to 5, Montalvo and Myron 6, Carmel 20, Talbot Clifton 30, Addie M. and Vernon 50. Good start. Arctic bored his way through on the rail at the drawgate and won by a nose. Winner, b h, 4, by Robson—Greenleaf. Montalvo (b h, 4, by Sid—May Belle) second, driving; Carmel (ch h, 4, by Duke of Norfolk—Carmen) third. Time, 1:03½.

Fourth race—Five and one-half furlongs, the Lissak Stakes, selling, for two year olds. Post betting—Gratify 2, Misa Brummel 4½, Grady 5, Laura F. and Miss Maxim 7, St. Lee 15, Joan 20, Charlie Boots 25, Don Gara and Masoero 30, El Primero 40, Marionette 60 and Ecino 100 to 1. Fair start. Joan came on and won easily from the drawgate. Winner, ch f, by St. Carlo—Bagatelle. Charlie Boots (b g, by Alto Mio—Constellation) second, driving; Marionette (ch f, by imp. Mariner—Maranette) third. Time, 1:07½.

Fifth race—Six furlongs, selling, light welter weights. Post betting—Scimitar 11 to 5, All Over 2½, Monitor 3, Veva 6, Morgan G. 12, Joe Cotton 20, Suffrage and Lady Gray 30, and Bill Nye 100 to 1. Good start. Scimitar won through the stretch easily. Winner, br c, 2, by Eothen—Wyandotte. All Over (b c, 3, by Hanover—Decit) second, driving; Suffrage (gr f, 2, by imp. Suwarrow—Franchise) third. Time, 1:15½.

Sixth race—Seven and one half furlongs, selling. Post betting—Rosebud 7 to 10, Oakland 16 to 5, Charmion 5, Raindrop 15, Mary S. 25 to 1. Good start. Rosebud out-footed Charmion in the stretch and won easily. Winner, ch f, 3, by Tyrant—Rosemary. Charmion (ch f, 5, by Tyrant—Unit) second, driving; Oakland (b g, 5, by John A.—Alameda) third. Time, 1:33½.

Seventh race—One mile, selling. Post betting—Model 5 to 2, Fannie Louise 5, Belle Boyd 3, Salonica 4, May Day 10 to 1, Hy Dr 12, Monita 15, Little Rob 20, Sea Spray 40, Charmer 60, E. H. Shirley 80 to 1. Good start. Belle Boyd led almost to the wire, when May Day headed in the last few strides. Winner, ch h, 4, by John A.—Lowena R. E. H. Shirley (br h, 5, by imp. Bonnie Brown—Dispatch), second, driving; Belle Boyd (ch f, 3, by El Rio Rey—Sylvia) third. Time, 1:41½.

TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY—WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 27.

On December 26th racing will be resumed at Bay District. The meeting closed with to-day's races, and during the next month followers of the turf will have the sport served with new surroundings at the Ingleside track. Old Bay District has had many a race for blood over its course, and probably will have many more. It is a popular track with all who are familiar with it, and in going to the new the old love will not be forgotten.

For the last day, seven races were again offered, but with the sloppy condition of the track, the horses could not run a true race and interest waned to a great extent. The handicaps were flat affairs, not through any fault of the weight allotter, but rather through the varying abilities of the contestants to slop through the soft-going. Only one of the seven favorites won, and the bookies are in a fair way to make up their losses of the past week.

The first race was at five and a half furlongs, with eight ordinary nags in. Fijian was a 9 to 5 favorite, but Irma second choice with twos about her. Valparaiso showed first and held a good lead till near the stretch turn, when he began to back up. Fijian, second, gave way to Irma, and Rowan got his mount in front by the time they were straightened out for home. Irma gradually increased her lead, and though Fijian was sent after her, won by a good length easily. Fijian was three lengths in front of Valparaiso for the place.

The second race, at five furlongs, selling, had a bad lot of two-year-old maidens in with your choice of the lot at about 3 to 1 at the opening. San Marcus soon showed in front after a good send-off, and led easily all the way, winning by four lengths, with Pixotto, a new one here, by Brutus, dam by Kelpie, chasing after him, and getting the place by a head from Mabel L. Skalkaho looked as though he should have been an easy second, but Bergen evidently did not like the mud and held up to save a splashing. He should remember there is less out in front than anywhere else.

In the next event, which was at six furlongs, selling, Model was made favorite, notwithstanding her race yesterday, and Hidalgo, Jerry Chorn's black colt, was a well-played second choice. Emma D., the speedy roan mare, was at short odds over the balance, being tipped for a good thing. Model led to the far turn then Clacquer moved up and was sent along about his business and won romping by a length. Model tried to keep him company, but Hidalgo came with a rush and beat her out two lengths for place. Clacquer was as good as 12 to 1 at post time.

The fourth race was at five and a half furlongs, handicap, with five entries. Mainstay at top weight of 108 pounds, was made favorite over Hymn, who opened at even money. Blue Bell (tipped to win in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN) was at the very juicy odds of 15 to 1. She was taken out in front from flag-fall and won all the way. Hueneme was in second position to the stretch, where Mainstay was sent along and headed him. Blue Bell was two lengths away at the wire, with Hueneme two lengths behind Mainstay.

Wawona carried top weight in the mile handicap, taking up three pounds overweight with Bergen, and was made favorite shortly after the odds were posted. Peter II was a consistent second choice. Wawona took the rail on the seven-eighths turn, but Ivy headed him before the backstretch was reached. On the straight Wawona was sent along and gained a head on Ivy, but on the far turn Peter took command and showed the way into the stretch by two lengths. From there on he kept his field off and won easily by a couple of lengths, Wawona and Flirtilla driving for place, which the former secured by a length.

A lot of bad jockeys and worse horses were in the steeplechase, over the short course. Jockeys were played, with not much chance to figure "form," as "the class" lay between a couple of them. Hennessy was popular but his mount was not thought much of, if the betting was any criterion. It was a spilling match, and but four horses finished with riders up, of the eight starters. Nellie G. tried hard to win, but Tom Clarke had too much speed and ran over her at the finish, and Rob Roy then beat her out for place.

Geo. Rose, second choice in the betting, won the last race from R. H. after the latter had led into the stretch. Gold Dust, consistently second up to the wire, backed up to third, with Trentola, the even-money favorite, fourth.

Winning jockeys were Rowan, Burns, C. Sloan, Cochran, T. Sloan, Hennessy and H. Martin.

The seven fields were sent away to good starts to-day, and such quick work was done by Mr. Ferguson that, with the first race called at 2, the result of the last race was posted down town at 5 o'clock.

SUMMARIES.

First race—Five and one-half furlongs, selling. Post betting—Fijian 9 to 5, Irma 2, Long d'Or 5, Valparaiso 9, Encore 10, Al Broeck and Great Falls 40, Esperance 50 to 1. Good start. Irma won through the stretch easily. Winner, b f, 3, by St. Saviour—Ella T. Fijian (h c, 3, by imp. Ill-Used—Affinity) second, driving; Valparaiso (b g, 4, by imp. Cheviot—Varona) third. Time, 1:11.

Second race—Five furlongs, selling. Post betting—San Marcus 16 to 5, Pixotto 7 to 2, Skalkaho 3, Adalade 5, Mabel L. 6, Pembroke 20, Little Pearl 30 to 1. Good start. Won by San Marcus pulling up. Winner, ch g, 2, by St. Carlo—Mistake. Pixotto (ch g, 2, by imp. Brutus—by Kelpie) second, driving; Mabel L. (b f, 2, by Major Ban—Acquito) third. Time, 1:04.

Third race—Six furlongs, selling. Post betting—Model 2, Hidalgo 2½, Emma D. 4½, Clacquer, Rose Clark and Morgan G. 12, Tortoni 60 to 1. Good start. Won in a romp by Clacquer. Winner, ch h, 5, by Three Cheers—Belle of the Lake. Hidalgo (blk c, 3, by Hidalgo—Gracioso) second, driving; Model (ch f, 3, by imp. Sir Modred—Gypsy) third. Time, 1:15½.

Fourth race—Five and one-half furlongs, handicap. Post betting—Hymn (107) 7 to 10, Mainstay (108) 4 to 1, Hueneme (90) 4½, Robin Hood II and Blue Bell 15 to 1. Good start. Blue Bell won all the way. Winner, b h, 4, by Prince of Norfolk—Gem of the Mountains. Mainstay (ch c, 3, by imp. Mariner—Queen Emma) second, driving; Hueneme (blk c, 3, by Sid—Dottie Dimple) third. Time, 1:08½.

Fifth race—One mile, handicap. Post betting—Peter II. (103) 7 to 2, Wawona (105) 9 to 5, Centurion (99) 4 to 1, imp. Ivy (87) 6, Flirtilla (90) 8 to 1. Good start. Peter II won easily through the stretch. Winner, b c, 3, by imp. Brutus—Bonnie Jean, Wawona (ch g, 4, by imp. Sir Modred—Typhoon) second, driving; Flirtilla (b f, 3, by Peel—Faustine) third. Time, 1:15½.

Sixth race—Shortcourse steeplechase. Post betting—Nellie G. and Burmah 5½, Rob Roy 6, Modesto 7, Dick O'Malley and Adelante 8, Tom Clarke 12 and Lady Splendor 100 to 1. Good start. Tom Clarke won easily in the last quarter mile. Winner, br g, 3, by Juliet—Hazel Kirke. Rob Roy (b g, 3, by Robson—Greenleaf) second, driving; Dick O'Malley (b g, 5, by imp. Mariner—Rosy) third. Time, 3:25½.

Seventh race—Five and one-half furlongs. Post betting—Trentola 1, Gold Dust 3, Geo. Rose 3½, Bert 15, Joe Hill 25, R. H. and Geo. Bohnert 30, Mollie Rogers 40 to 1. Good start. Geo. Rose won through the stretch. Winner, b g, 3, by Three Cheers—Charity. R. H. (ch g, a, by Bayswater Jr.—by Oregon Charlie) second driving; Gold Dust (b g, 5, by Oro—Gold Cup) third. Time, 1:11.

EDITED AND CONDUCTED SOLELY BY

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

TRIP No. Two—Very many years, counting back, before I can find a parallel to A. D., 1895, in respect to one feature. From New Year's day until near the close of November only two trips away from home. That is counting the apex of the peninsula of San Francisco, Alameda and Oakland as parts of the "home circle." Not that the desire to travel was overcome but circumstances were untoward, and though great would have been the pleasure to revisit scenes of past enjoyments and add to these new pictures, Fate ordained otherwise.

There is no city or vicinity in my knowledge which presents so many attractive routes as lead from the metropolis of the Pacific. Whatever the direction, interest is awakened nearly as soon as the journey is commenced. That which begins with crossing the bay, whether the trend is too the "mole," on the Oakland side, to Alameda, Tiburon or further north, the water portion of the journey is hugely agreeable, and very few miles of railway travel on any of the routes until the views cannot fail to excite admiration.

In the early springtime Pleasanton was the objective point. I was anxious to see the famous members of the Salisbury string before they started on their Eastern trip. The second voyage had the same port marked for landing, and on both occasions there was right "merrie companie," these on the last trip being J. J. Burke, presiding judge at the Bay District course; Mr. Vreeland, of the New York Mercury; Judge Greene, of Oakland; Dr. C. J. P. Dunn, of "our town;" Mr. Layng, editor of this paper; Mr. Higgins, and the proprietor of Merriwa Stock Farm, R. E. de B. Lopez.

It is quite a striking change from the rich fields which skirt the bay to the glen through which Alameda creek ripples over the stones and brawls and dashes over rocks and boulders. Sunol, sheltered by the hills which rise on either side, the smaller canyons at right angles to the main ravine increasing the arable land, altogether as pretty a spot as one could desire for a tranquil home. The valley in which Pleasanton is located, some call it part of the San Ramon, others a portion of the famous vale of Livermore, whatever it may be termed, there is no doubt of it being one of the best locations for horse-breeding, agriculture in general, horticulture, etc. A few minutes were spent at the Pleasanton Stock Farm. Direct, so much changed in appearance since he held championship honors, big and lusty, ready to show pace and trot at as fast a rate as his limited paddock would admit, and looking curiously at his visitors as if he were cognizant of his right to encomiums.

Diablo, the magnificent sample of the American harness horse, and without calling on others of the trotting-bred division to uphold the fame of the truly American product, I would like to see the best hackney which will be exhibited at the Horse Show led into the amphitheatre with Diablo and let the spectators award the garland. I am well aware that Fashion has decreed—and her mandate must be obeyed by her votaries—that the mutilated cob must take precedence over all others, but she is an uncertain jade and when the fad has run its course, reason and judgment may take the place of a simile imitation of foreign practices, beauty and adaptability for harness uses resuming its sway.

Direct can show a wonderful family, especially when it is taken into consideration that the first of his get came in 1892. A fine looking lot of youngsters by Direct, and the superintendent of the Pleasanton Stock Farm, Mr. Neil, has a happy faculty of describing in few words the prominent points in the history of the many notables which have given this place world-wide celebrity.

But the main object of this visit was to see the trio of imported thoroughbred stallions which are domiciled at Merriwa. I am under the impression that Messrs. Burke and Vreeland had never seen one of Australian breeding, though familiar with the Sir Modreds, Cheviots, Darebins and the few Maxims which have appeared in the East. That they were well pleased was evident, and from the time that Cleveden was led out of his box until the examination of all three came to an end there were words of praise. The big, powerful brother to Chester will attract attention in any gathering of hippic celebrities. The "clean cut" Merriwa will not fail to elicit admiration, if not of as commanding presence as his associates, and then Foul Shot. It is not my intention to institute comparisons or present extended descriptions of these horses. Cleveden and Merriwa have been portrayed in this paper, and are well worthy of all the praises bestowed. Foul Shot is a later importation, in fact his first California season will be that of 1896. Since the death of Maxim he is the only son of Musket in America, and this by odds—as I understand the situation—the most popular family in that far-away country has sent a worthy representative.

A magnificent horse individually. Size, form, color all good. Harmony of proportion, that blending of points so that it is difficult to demonstrate the best of the many which are so essential to a high rate of speed and ability to sustain it "over a distance of ground." And that with weight carrying capacity, but this was to be expected as the racing men of the antipodes are prone to insist upon that desideratum, and when our turfmen follow their lead racing will surely be on a better basis. Looking at Foul Shot it struck me forcibly that with proper selections of American-bred mares, progeny would be secured which could romp over a cup course, and go "four miles and repeat" at a pace that would astonish old-timers and be positive proof that the thoroughbreds have not degenerated, even when the test was on the favorite trial ground of the past, heats of four miles.

In "my mind's eye" there are two mares which I have owned which would be of the right stamp: Columbia, by Bonnie Scotland, her dam by Monarch "which never felt the cut of a whip or the sting of a spur," though he won many long races, her grandam Fashion, by imp. Trustee which it is only necessary to name. The other, Marior, the dam of so many of starting merit. When I bred the dam of Marion, Maggie Mitchell, to Bonnie Scotland, Colonel S. D. Bruce remarked that if the old time races were in vogue that would be a capital admixture, but he was under the impression that a high rate of speed would be wanting, his belief based on the data that the dam of Maggie Charmer was the most noted for staying powers, and her dam, Betsey Malone, invincible at long distances. As Betsey won all her races, twenty-one with one exception, when she fell, and Charmer won twenty eight in forty-three starts speed was not wanting. But the union of Maggie and Bonnie resulted in a colt which A. S. Gage timed through the stretch in 22½ seconds, and had to run around a wide scraper at that, and Marion and Lady Amanda ran the same distance on the Ocean View track then very deep, head-and-head in 23 seconds.

Her work showed that she could go a distance, and in her preparation for a race at three miles, on the Bay District, convinced her trainer that it would take a top sawyer to beat her in the race. She broke down in the very last work intended to give her before the day of the contest. Capacity to go a distance is not an indication of lack of speed, though, of course, there is a wide difference in training a "sprinter" and a "heat-horse," and in asserting that Foul Shot will be likely to get horses of stamina and endurance it does not follow that there will be an absence of that most desired quality in his offspring. In place of that I will be disappointed should he fail in either respect. So much pleased with him that at some future period, and with more time for a closer examination than the late visit afforded, a closer inspection will follow. We saw two mares sent from the Rancho del Sierras to be bred to Foul Shot, one of them by the Duke of Norfolk, the other by El Rio Rey. I was alone in preferring the chances of the El Rio Rey, and while admitting that the other would unquestionably obtain the premium in a show ring, it was not difficult to explain the reasons for my favoritism. It could not be on the score of preference for the family that warped the judgment, both being by sons of Marion, and, therefore, one of these perplexing problems which do not present good grounds for the choice or justify the solution.

Impression, a sort of second sight, perhaps, a feeling akin to that which prompts putting money on a horse that is not thought to be "in the race" and still it wins.

Still, under the fancy that the right selection was made, and when I met Grant, Mr. Winters' manager, I asked him for the breeding of the dams. The better-looking was from Jessie R., by Hubbard, her dam Myrtle, by Lodi, etc., foaled in 1887, the other a three-year-old from Blizzard by Blazes, her dam by imp. King Tom and the next dam by Vandal.

Now Jessie R. is the dam of Uno Grande and Callie Ferguson, while Blizzard is "untied." But she was one of the fastest fillies Mr. Winters told me he ever saw gallop, and her daughter ran a wonderful trial of five-eighths of a mile on the Reno track.

Mr. Lopez is pursuing the right course to perfect Merriwa as a stock farm. A big ditch has been cut through the lower portion, with under drains connecting, which will effectually relieve the fields from a surplus of water during the rainy season. That is all that is required, and though rye-grass does well now, it will do better, and alfalfa will flourish.

There had been quite a frost in the early morning, sunshine and a genial temperature the rest of the day. The cars glided down the grade so easily that the motion was scarcely perceptible, and the sun, sinking towards the horizon, brought out the contrast of light and shadow so as to heighten the effects of glen and mountain scenery. A pleasant trip to me, and from the remarks of the visitors from the other side of our country, California had not lost any of its prestige from what they had seen on that bright November day.

RAYMOND, IN THE HORSE WORLD—Makes the point that as Beautiful Bells was one year younger than Dame Winnie and Sontag four years her junior they were at that much disadvantage. There is another thing to be taken into consideration. Dame Winnie's first foal by a trotting sire came in 1879, a filly by Smuggler which died young. She was barren in 1880. In 1881 Big Jim, 2:23½, by General Benton; 1882, Palo Alto, 2:08½; in 1883 Gertrude Russell, 2:23½; 1884 Diablo, a winner "on the flat," by Shannon, thoroughbred; 1885 barren; 1886 Winna S.; 1887 Paola; 2:18, 1888 and 1889 barren, 1890 Altivo, 2:18½, 1891 Pacheco her last foal. Thus Dame Winnie had seven foals by the trotting sires Electioneer and Gen. Benton. Beautiful Bells, first foal was in 1881 so from that point there was an equality, but she had double as many as Dame Winnie without counting her foals of 1894 and 1895. Five of the seven Dame Winnie obtained records from 2:08½ to 2:23½, the average being 2:18 30. Eight of the fourteen Beautiful Bells "are in the lists" with records ranging from 2:12½ to 2:24½. The average for the fastest five 2:18 55.

"Comparisons are odious" when they do not suit the man who takes the other side of the question, and even with this showing in favor of the thoroughbred dam I am far from claiming that the crown is her due when all the other elements are taken into consideration. Still it is within bounds to claim there are very few trotting-bred mares which will bear comparison and the other which Raymond instances, Sontag Mohawk, is certainly inferior. She has fourteen foals up to and including 1893, the first in 1879, eight of them with records from 2:14½ to 2:29½, and the average of the fastest five in 2:19 05.

Raymond depends on the difference of age to establish his position, or, it will be better to state, uses it to strengthen his argument, but there is no difference in reality on that score, whereas Dame Winnie is far in the lead, proportion being the test, viz: 5 in 7, while Beautiful Bells and Sontag Mohawk are 8 to 14. The last sentence of Raymond's article is as follows: "The writer does not present these instances in any endeavor to belittle Dame Winnie, but simply to show that mares having no near strain of thoroughbred blood have produced speed with more uniformity than did the daughter of Planet."

The proof presented certainly does not sustain the allegation. In connection with Beautiful Bells and Sontag Mohawk is presented Lucia, by Jay Gould, her dam the old time celebrity Lucy, and as she is five years younger than Dame Winnie he makes that a prominent feature in the argument. I have no means of knowing the number of foals from Lucia, though she is entitled to high rank among great brood mares inasmuch as she has six with records from 2:13½ to 2:29, the average of the fastest five being 2:18 90, so that the daughter of Planet leads on that ground. Then of the six credited to Lucia four are by Rumor, and the sire of Rumor was the half thoroughbred, Tattler. Then the sire of Beautiful Bells was a half thoroughbred, The Moor, so that "the strains" was not very far off in her case.

If even there were several trotting bred mares which could show a better proportion than five fast trotters, in seven foals so fast as to average better than 2:18 30, it must be borne in mind that for one thoroughbred mare, the progeny of which has been trained to trot fast, there is a great many of them trotting-bred, and, consequently, the greatest should be on that side. Certainly, however, that it will be on other grounds than uniformity of produce as a "simple rule of three" questions will decide, that being, if 7:5:14 and the answer, 10, is seen at a glance.

I am gratified that Raymond concedes a share of the merit of the five fast trotters to the dam. Some of those who denounce "near strains" are prone to give all the credit to the trotting bred sire no matter if the position is untenable.

Four of the five by Electioneer, and not another mare of the many bred to that great sire can show such a quartet, their average being 2:16 75, Beautiful Bells' four 2:17 68.

A NATURAL GAIT.—"Trotwood," who writes so pleasantly of the very fast division of racers in harness, has come to the same conclusion as to the pace being a natural gait of horses as I did very many years ago. In the Horse Review of November 5th, he published: "But there is another fact I have often noticed—the strong affinity between the pacing and the thoroughbred. All of the best old-time pacers were built on thoroughbred blood, and I notice that those trotting sires now siring the most speed at the pace have a very strong infusion of thoroughbred blood. Altamont, Almont Boy (sire of Gill Curry, Dallas, etc.), McEwen, the Tennessee sire, are striking illustrations of this."

The first great pacing mare of history, Pocahontas, was the first illustration of this kind of breeding. It was discovered long ago in Tennessee that the mixture of pacing and thoroughbred blood made, not runners, but the best kind of pacers. But why a mixture of trotting and thoroughbred, as in the case of Altamont, produces a pacing sire I cannot explain, etc., etc. And, as I said, the secret of its self-assertiveness is the fact that the gait itself is Nature's gift."

Quite a number of years ago Mr. J. H. Wallace asserted—and that with his usual fervor—that a tendency to pace was evidence of plebeian ancestry. With equal emphasis he claimed that a thoroughbred was never known to pace, and though there had been instances of horses of that breed pacing, very many of Mr. Wallace's disciples adhere to the belief.

A paragraph which is now going the rounds of the press tells that Sam Luttrell, with a pacing record of 2:20½, and that on a half-mile track, is a "thoroughbred pacer by Spendthrift from a Longfellow mare." As Sam is used as a road horse by C. L. Hooper, Lincoln, Nebraska, it would seem as though he would pace fast if given a better chance. Another thoroughbred of late years which is claimed could pace fast is Taxgatherer, though his racing capacity at the gallop confined him to that "way of going."

Very many thoroughbred foals pace when a few days old, and saddle horses of very high breeding frequently pace as "cleanly" as the Hals.

Were a hundred thoroughbreds broken to harness, driven at the top of their speed so long as they did not gallop, I have no doubt that quite a proportion of them would turn out to be fast pacers. The interchangeability of the gait is another proof, and, strange as it may appear, there are good reasons for the claim that hoppers have demonstrated that pacing can be classed as one of the natural methods of progression of horses. In a majority of instances the applications of these much discussed implements is followed by the change of gait after few trials, and in some cases the first is all that is necessary. Therefore, it is reasonable to assume that the latent faculty is so strong that a hint is all that is necessary for the pupil to adopt the desired method of moving its feet.

And while on the subject of these late innovations in old-time practices it may be as well to state that, in my belief, so long as they are confined to the curriculum when that is used as the place of education, or for a rehearsal, it is proper though they should be banished when the play is actually, on the stage.

After the death of McKeever there was not a dissenting voice when the rule against trotting in the dark was offered, and had it been in force before that unfortunate occurrence one life would have been saved. It is only a question of time that a fatal accident will result should hopped-horses retain their place in actual races, at least with so many instances when it was "more good luck than good guidance" that death was averted, it is a fair inference that the same good fortune will not prevail hereafter. All the other arguments that have been presented in favor of the abrogation of hoppers in races are of secondary importance to that which urges the danger to life and limbs from their use.

THE prize winners at the National Horse Show brought very large prices in New York on Monday when sold at auction at Madison Square Garden. The highest price was realized by G. H. Hueine of New York, his pair, Golden Rod and Blazeaway, being purchased by J. H. Hayes, of Boston, Mass., for $3,900. Golden Rod is a trotting-bred fellow, being by Oceanic, while Blazeaway is by a hackney, out of a trotting bred mare. The noted park horse, Great Scott, was bought by Hineman Brothers of New York for $1,600. He is by Oliver Wilkes, son of Brown Wilkes. Genesee, by Coriander, dam by Fergus McGregor, and Gay Boy, by Sylvan Glen, dam by McCracken's Black Hawk, were purchased by S. Dexter of New York for $950. R. Townsend of New York bought Moss Rose, by Oliver Wilkes, for $400; Joseph McCrain paid $350 for Flashlight, by Phallamont, dam by Magna Charta, and J. Frobisher bought the Barney McGregor geldings, Paragon and Perfection for $975. The six-year-old gelding Dash, by Messenger Wilkes, dam by Daniel Lambert, was bought by C. T. Yerkes of Chicago, Ill., for $1,900, and Rex Bismont, by Bismont, dam by Prairie King, went to W. R. H. Martin of New York for $1,300.

A CINCINNATI letter to the N. Y. Mercury says: The peerless Yo Tombien, for season after season the idolized queen of the Western racing public, will be seen no more with colors up, now that the Latonia meeting has come to an end. Next week she will be sent to the McGrathiana Stud, where she will in the Spring be mated to the mighty Hanover, as has been previously published. The union of the pair should be productive of a sensational performer and should the first foal be a colt, he will easily bring a big price. A recapitulation of his performances on the turf are as follows: Years on the turf, 5; times started, 71; times first, 42; times second, 11; times third, 9; times unplaced, 9; total amount won, $93,228.

TURF AND TRACK

THE SULKY.

ARE you going to the Horse Show?

THE sale of Palo Alto horses commences next Tuesday in New York City.

ALIX, 2:08½, will be wintered at Red Oak, Iowa, by Morris J. Jones, her owner.

ANDY McDOWELL is willing to wager $1,000 that Diahlo, 2:09½, can beat any pacer in California.

MONROE SALISBURY is in Salt Lake City. He expects to return to California in a few days.

THREE hundred and seventy-five horses have been entered for the Horse Show, which begins next Tuesday.

JACK HALLINAN, a well-known patron of trotting horses, died in this city last Saturday. He had a stock farm near Pleasanton.

THE Eastern papers are "roasting" the exhibitors at the New York Horse Show for the way some of their horses were named.

OF the prices realized at the sale of Wm. Simpson's horses last week. Electrician (sire of Midi, 2:19) brought the highest price, $500.

JOHN R. GENTRY now holds five State records, viz.: Illinois, 2:0¼; Wisconsin, 2:05½; Iowa, 2:03½. Pennsylvania, 2:06½; North Carolina, 2:09.

DIABLO, 2:09½, McKinney, 2:11½, Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, Silver Bow, 2:16, and James Madison, 2:17½, will all meet in the same class at the Horse Show.

SEYLAX has been sold to a Boston man, who says he will shift him to the pace. If he is any better race horse that way than on the trot it will take a champion to beat him.

SILVER BOW, 2:16, McKinney, 2:11½, and Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, each of them with four of their progeny, are contestants for first prize at the Horse Show next week.

THE brother to Azote, which President Cleveland drove to his carriage a couple of years ago, and which now belongs to Nathan Straus, of New York, may be seen on the turf next year.

MONROE SALISBURY will sell in New York City the following: Miss Kate, Too Soon, Lulu F., Calvin, John D., Lou Mitchell and a few others that he had in his string this season.

THERE is considerable talk of a series of race meetings to be given on the speed track, Golden Gate Park, this winter. It is hoped it will be put in first-class condition for these events.

FOR the very latest styles of harnesses, saddles and horse clothing remember John A. McKerron, of 203 Mason Street, is the only one in this city who keeps them. He has no superiors.

THE best yearling at the Pleasanton Stock Farm is by Direct, 2:05½, out of Lilly Stanley, 2:17½, by Whippleton. In conformation it resembles a pacer but its gait is trotting and very rapid.

A LARGE number of trotting horsemen are noticed around the corridors of our leading hotels. They have come here with their very choicest trotters to exhibit them at the coming Horse Show.

THE famous old Miss Russell, white with the winters of thirty years, is still alive at Woo burn Farm, but, though given the tenderest care, will hardly last long enough to eat the grass of 1896.

JASPER AYRES, 2:15½, the fast gelding, is not out of a mare by Altamont, the great Oregon stallion, but out of a mare by Altimont, a son of Almont, that at one time stood for service in Kern County.

ALTAO has started in thirteen races this year, won first money in three, was second in four, third in three, fourth in two and unplaced in one. He reduced his record from 2:16 to 2:09½, and won $5,510 in purses.

MYRON McHENRY is fitting up a carload of trotters in Chicago to take to Pleasanton. He will have some of Monroe Salisbury's good ones in some of the stalls. Mr. McHenry has decided to winter in California.

WE must hold a convention of members of agricultural associations, trotting horse owners, trainers and drivers in this city soon. The need for good, sensible and satisfactory work was never more urgent than at present.

C. A. HARRISON, of Tacoma, W., sold Soudan Jr. to parties from Great Falls, Montana. Soudan Jr. should do well in his new home. He is a good colt, and the few foals left by him are all good ones, both in size, shape and speed.

EVERY horseowner, breeder, trainer and member of every association devoted to the interests of the light harness horse should read the able and timely article written by our special correspondent "Captain Essex." He offers advice which should be heeded at once.

THE trotting-bred horses got more prizes in the Horse Show, New York, than all the Hackneys, Coach and French and German carriage horses shown there. The same acknowledgment in regard to their superiority will soon be noticed in Europe, so breeders should not become discouraged.

ON Tuesday last, Talbot Clifton purchased of J. Guerin, of this city, the trotting mare Maud M., 2:20½, and Kitty L., 2:27½, price $1,000, and the next day drove them tandem, Kitty L. in the lead. He is delighted with his purchase and can lead now all the hackneys in this State.

OF the Salishbury stable, Ella T., Flying Jib and one or two others will remain at Lincoln, Neb., in John Tilden's hands. Alix and Azote will go to Red Oak, Iowa, for the winter, and the balance will go East to the New York sale market. Directly and a number of others are ready to be shipped to California.

IT now transpires that the grand old Kansas broodmare, Lucy Woodruff, is the dam of McW., 2:17½, by Fergus McGregor. The performance of McW. makes Lucy Woodruff the dam of four in the list, including Silkwood, 2:07, the handsome black idol of Santa Ana that in regard to beauty and finish is without a peer.

F. J. COCHRAN, the well-known scientific horseshoer, returned from the East with Monroe Salishbury last week. Mr. Cochran stands at the top of his profession, he having shod, among hundreds of other famous ones, the following: Sunol, Palo Alto, Arion, W. Wood, Stamboul, Bell Bird, McKinney, Adbell, Alix, Azote, Frank Agan, Directly, Ella T., Ryland T., Altao and Lockhart.

"BENEDICT," a very entertaining writer on turf topics, wrote a very instructive article about the Horse Show in San Francisco, which is to appear in the December number of the Overland Monthly. It is profusely illustrated with pictures of prominent officials of this enterprise, as well as some of the famous equines and equipages to appear there. The article is able and comprehensive and reflects credit on its author.

SACRAMENTO, by Monroe Chief, 2:18½, out of Renz, now wintering at Overland Park, is one of the fastest trotting horses in Colorado. He belongs to Tom Griffin, who campaigned him from Boston to New York. He started six times, won three races, and in one heat he was only beaten a head in 2:11½. Sacramento is five years old, is as handsome and as true gaited a trotter as we ever saw, and will be one of the coming great ones next season.

HORSEMEN will be glad to know that Mr. El Ayres breeder and former owner of the great Beuzetta, who was stricken with paralysis about six weeks ago, and who it was thought would never recover, is at present very much improved and that the prospects for his ultimate restoration to health are flattering. He will be taken this week, in charge of his physician, to Norborne, Mo., where he is expected to spend the winter. He has the best wishes of everybody who knows him.

WITH John R. Gentry, 2:03½, Joe Patchen, 2:04, and Directum, 2:05½, in the stud at Lexington, added to the long list of most excellent sires we already have here, our breeders should not suffer a great deal from the loss of the many good stallions that have left us during the present year. Indeed, the advent of the great horses named should be in a high degree consoling. It will be a long time yet before our section is left completely barren of good breeding material.—Stock Farm.

HOW prone some men are to talk of the present condition of the horse market. While it is an easy matter to state the present condition, how about the future? Can the average person realize the situation and gauge the market five years hence? The fact is that while the farmers in many sections have horses for sale, very few of them can bring out an animal that suits even the buyer of common, everyday horses, and they have reduced their breeding to such a figure that they will have none for sale five years hence.

WHEN Dr. Evans, of Modesto, was telegraphed for from Grayson to attend the injuries of Eddie Richards, son of L. A. Richards, owner of the stock farm there, he hitched up his team of Richard-Elector mares, and in just one hour and a half from the time he received the telegram he was at the boy's bedside. The distance was eighteen miles and a half from Modesto. He says if it was not for that team he never would have saved the youth's life. It pays a physician to have a fast road team, and Dr. Evans has several of the best in the San Joaquin Valley, and they are all by this son of Electioneer.

YOUNG, gentle, beautiful and unsophisticated, with a faraway look in her eye, so that when Lady Bird and Hurricane were jumping in the championship classes Saturday night at the New York Horse Show, she seemed to be more absorbed in her neighbors' dresses than in such a tame affair as a jumping contest. The last remark of one of her male escorts drifted through the orifice of her brain, and the real tenor of it was: "I'll take odds that she wins the double event." Here the speaker turned to his fair companion and expressed the hope that she was not bored. He collapsed in a hurry when she answered: "Not in the least. Indeed, I only overheard your last remark, and I think you said if it was twins you'd win your bet." And then somebody turned on the electric fans.

THE most remarkable sale of horses ever held in Illinois was that of Charles and Franklin Ridgely at the Sangamon Stock Farm last Thursday. It was the closing-out sale of their young standard bred stock, and is said by horsemen to be the best sale in the United States this year. Forty-one head, including twenty-six weanlings, sold for $1,200, averaging $200 each for the entire lot. The sensation was a weanling filly by Kentucky, 2:14½, out of Elsa Nora, by Alcantara, 2:23, sold to George A. Merriman, of Williamsville, Ill., for $825. Another weanling filly by Conductor, out of the dam of McKinley, same purchaser, for $225; another by Conductor, out of Queen Margaret, performed like an old track horse, showed a 2:20 gait and sold to J. C. Henry of Taylorville, Ill., for $270. A phenomenal weanling pacer by Conductor, out of Lizzie H., 2:22, was bought by John Foster, of Springfield, Ill., for $375. The gem of the sale was a green four-year old mare by Conductor, showed a 2:15 gait and sold to John W. Black of Springfield for $525, and a two-year old mare by Conductor, out of Irene, 2:23½, sold to George A. Merriman, of Williamsville, for $350. Others went to different parts of the State. A large proportion of the stock was purchased by breeders in this part of Illinois who knew the unusually fine strains of blood in the breeding of the Ridgely stock.

WHEN Lynne Bel, 2:10½, the fastest trotting stallion ever bred in New Jersey, reached Flemington, N. J., on Monday, he was met by the leading citizens of the town. A parade fully one mile long, headed by Lynne Bel, who was covered with flowers, and accompanied by the Flemington hand, passed through the main street.

WHO knows A. J. Rogers? In 1863, he sold to Phillip Phoenix, of New York, a peculiarly light-colored chestnut mare, whose photo indicates that she was a thoroughbred. She was known in New York as the Phoenix mare, and was very fast. She was bred, and produced Major Lord, Butterfield and Lady Garfield, the latter becoming the dam of Bush, 2:13½; Alcyone Jr., 2:15, and Miss Rita, pacer, 2:09½. W. E. D. Stokes of New York, owner of Lady Garfield and her produce, is very anxious to learn Mr. Rogers' whereabouts, to discover the breeding of the Phoenix mare. Can any of our readers give any information regarding him?

GIL CERRY has Directum at the Fair Grounds track, Lexington, Ky., since last Saturday, when he arrived from Detroit, where he broke down some time ago. Mr. Curry said it was a rupture of the back tendon, and though it was a bad case he expected to have the black wonder in good shape for next summer. In the hands of such a capable man as Mr. Curry it is expected that the horse will hang up a new mark before the campaign of '96 is ended. Mr. Curry's phenomenal colt, Red Bud, who made such a record for himself last year among trotters, has taken to pacing as a duck does to water, and he is expected to be a new and formidable rival for the crack side-wheelers next season. He will then be only five years old, and stronger and better fitted for the tasks imposed upon him than during his three-year-old form. He has done very little this season, owing to his being off nearly all the year.

WHEN Monroe Salishbury brought Marin Jr. back to California he was met at the ferry by Wm. Bradbury, the owner of the little gray gelding. After the usual greetings Mr. Bradbury produced a little book, like a catechism, and had Mr. Salishbury sign the questions therein; after the book was handed back to his owner the latter remarked: "Well, Salishbury, you can have the little fellow next season. I'm satisfied you will do the best you can with him." The sage of Pleasanton smiled, and said: "Well I think I've earned the privilege of having him for all the trouble you have given me to sign that catechism." This is a few of the long list of questions propounded in regard to Marin Jr. his condition past and present; his disposition before and after being taken East; his appetite past and present; his speed previous to his let up and what he is capable of doing now; his shoeing, harnessing and the chances for defeating all comers in 1896. They would stagger a weak-minded man than Mr. Salishbury, but he lived through it and the "two berry's" linked arms and walked down the street.

WHEN the late Simeon G. Reed referred to the trotters he owned he used to love to tell of the handsome seal brown mare, Jane L., he bred. She was by his stallion Hambletonian Mambrino 5241, out of Mollie Welsh (dam of Hannibal Jr.), by Paul Jones. She was one of the gamest mares ever seen on the turf and in 1887, driven by Lute Lindsay, now at A. B. Spreckels farm, Aptos, she started on her victorious career at the July meeting in Portland, Oregon, getting a mark of 2:28½ in the third heat. On August 18th she started against Mt. Vernon, Luella, Kate Ewing, Artist and Spry and won, lowering her record to 2:21½. She defeated such horses at Stamboul, Woodnut, Thapsin, Marin, Maid of the Oaks, Black Diamond, Wells Fargo, Sister, Joe Arthurton and Longfellow, and at Santa Rosa got her record in the second heat of 2:19½. This mare was sold in the East and after being used on the road for a time was bred to Wilton, the handsome son of Geo. Wilkes and Alley, by Hambletonian 10, and the result of this union is a yearling, now in Orrin A. Hickok's string of good ones at the Oakland Track. There are several other Wiltons there, but this youngster is the fastest, handsomest and best-gaited of them all.

THE prize winners at the National Horse Show brought very large prices in New York on Monday when sold at auction at Madison Square Garden. The highest price was realized by G. H. Huefline of New York, his pair, Golden Rod and Blazeaway, being purchased by J. H. Hayes, of Boston, Mass., for $3,900. Golden Rod is a trotting-bred fellow, being by Oceanic, while Blazeaway is by a hackney, out of a trotting-bred mare. The noted park horse, Great Scott, was bought by Hineman Brothers of New York for $1,600. He is by Oliver Wilkes, son of Brown Wilkes, Genesee, by Coriander, dam by Fergus McGregor, and Gay Boy, by Sylvan Glen, dam by McCracken's Black Hawk, were purchased by S. Dexter of New York for $950. R. Townsend of New York bought Moss Rose, by Oliver Wilkes, for $400; Joseph McCrain paid $350 for Flashlight, by Phallamont, dam by Magna Charta, and J. Frohisher bought the Barney McGregor geldings, Paragon and Perfection for $975. The six-year-old gelding Dash, by Messenger Wilkes, dam by Daniel Lambert, was bought by C. T. Yerkes of Chicago, Ill., for $1,900, and Rex Bismont, by Bismont, dam by Prairie King, went to W. R. H. Martin of New York for $1,300.

I WANT to call attention to two wonderful mares, says Clement. Fernleaf, by Flaxtail, is the dam of Sidmont, 2:10½; Gold Leaf, 2:11, and Thistle, 2:13, all by Sidney, and Ferndale, by Simmocolon, with a pacing record of 2:16½, and Shamrock, 2:25, by Buccaneer, outside of the popular Messenger families, and her sister produced Oddity, 2:13½, by Sidney. Here is one mare with four 2:20 and better pacers by two different sires, and a fifth with a two-year-old trotting record of 2:25, and her sister produces to one of these sires a pacer with a record of 2:13½, and yet they tell you there is no sure way to breed a fast harness animal. One mare, and one alone, I think, is the dam of four animals in the 2:20 list of pacers by four different sires. Carrie Blackwood, by Blue Blue 75, is the dam of Atlantic King, 2:09½, by Atlantic; Mary Centlivre, 2:12, by R. C. Brown, his only standard performer; Carrie Strathmore, 2:17½, by Strathmore, and Major Centlivre, 2:15½, by Electric King, son of Electioneer. Thus from this mare we have a 2:10 performer from a grandson of Abdallah 15, a 2:15 performer from a son of Florida, and two 2:20 performers from the house of Strathmore and Electioneer, and two of the four sires have no other performers.

The Saddle.

COCHRANE put up a very good ride on Babe Murphy.

ORPHAN BOY was a tip in the first race, but it did not verify.

JOCKEY MIDGELEY will shortly be seen in the saddle in this city.

SECRETARY MILROY is still suffering from a severe attack of lumbago.

DOC DICKEY has arrived at Ingleside track with Precado and Mustesa.

DR. BLAKELY, Sunday nerved his jumper Roeder for a navicular disease.

ENTRIES for the opening day's races at Ingleside close tomorrow at 3 o'clock.

DUNGARVEN, who started here Monday, has been trepanned a couple of times.

SISTER MARY and Ferris Hartman, both by imp. Woodlands, were winners Saturday.

MARTINET, by imp. Mariner, out of Marin, property of Senator Wm. Thompson, of Nevada, is dead.

THE Charlotte filly has been named Duchess, and the Charity colt Geo. Rose. Will other owners kindly follow suit?

BALLARD, the well-known Western jockey, has accepted an offer from Mr. Randall, and will come out soon to ride his horses.

BRUTUS colts started in three races Monday and got two purses and one second. Horses by this sire hold four coast records.

THE new track promises to be a fast one from the start. Workouts have been made in 1:43, and a five-eighths was done in 1:02.

AL MORINE came up from Los Angeles last week with Peru, a promising two-year-old, Lorena, La France and the crackjack, Gladwin.

MATT STORN's good colt, Gov. Budd, ran an excellent race for the second start of a green horse, and will be heard from in good company.

THE Spreckels string, fifteen in number, in charge of Tom Boyle, reached the Ingleside track Thursday. The horses are all in fine condition.

S. REAGAN, an Eastern jockey of some note, who will ride for Pat Dunn and L. Ezell, had his first mount at Bay District Monday on Dungarven.

A. J. JOYNER has signed Master Harry Hewett, brother to the Blemton lightweight, to be the lightweight for David Gideon's stable for the season of 1896.

OAKLEY's run up against a gusty wind on the backstretch, and then home in easy style in 1:41½, impressed all who saw him that he was some of a horse himself.

SISTER MARY cannot beat Vincto at seven furlongs, but at shorter distance probably can take her measure. At five furlongs Potentate will probably beat either.

"DUTCHY" COLLINS, so well-known in the East as Mike Dwyer's betting commissioner, was among the arrivals Thursday and visited the track in the afternoon.

CHARLES McCafferty, the turfman, tried to hoodoo Trainer Alcock in a hotel at Lexington, Thursday night. He is in jail on a peace warrant sworn out by Alcock.

THERE is crepe on the door of Jack Hallinan's pool room on Ellis street, and a card with the words "Closed on account of the death of the proprietor, J. Hallinan."

LOBENGULA is still very sick, but will probably be brought around all right. Dr. Masoero has the patient in hand. The complaint is said to be spasmodic cramps in the stomach.

CHARLEY QUINN was very sweet on Three Forks, but his brother bookies consulted their sheets before accepting his bets. He could not get as much as he wanted at satisfactory odds.

THE second race on the card at Ingleside on the opening day is for three-year-olds and upward, and not exclusively for three-year-olds, as is made to appear on the book programme.

"BONE-DOCTOR" ROBBINS has a yearling filly called Crap Game, by Le Panto out of a full sister to the dam of Helen Nichols, that he is willing to match against any yearling in California.

WILBER FIELD SMITH is a rare good conditioner. He trained Cabrillo and cut him loose at a winning clip in his first start here, and Thursday sent Empire to the post another winner.

DANCING GIRL must have been named from her terpsichorean proclivities, as she danced a reel at the post Monday. She has considerable speed as well, and C. Slaughter took her along nicely.

J. E. TERRY played his stable Saturday, and Geo. Wheelock, Riley Grannan and some others of the big bettors were on the pair. Quinn and Purser liked Camelia best. The former played Vincto also.

WITH most of the local riders when their mount takes a set-back, it is all up with them. Tod Sloan, on the contrary, usually has some left for a spurt at the wire, and he makes it win most frequently.

RILEY GRANNAN and John Coleman have gone on a hunting trip. Riley's winnings on Saturday put him on the right side of the ledger, after he had suffered heavy losses since his arrival here.

REIDY gave a great display of a pudding-headed jockey on a good colt Saturday. He yanked Grady up on the quarter turn in the six and a half furlong race, then seemed to remember something and started after it. The two-year-old was rushed along at a killing pace into the stretch and there had to stop. He might have been nursed a winner.

RACKAROCK, own brother to Clicquot, one of the Merriwa Stock Farm broodmares, won two heavy weight handicaps in Sydney. He is by Grandmaster, from Wildfire, by Wild Oats, from Dynamite, by Musket, etc.

MARINER, brown horse, foaled 1889, by Longfellow, dam imp. Homeward Bound, the property of E. Corrigan, while being exercised over the jumps recently, received injuries which necessitated his being destroyed.

THE largest winning owners at the St. Louis Fair Grounds were B. Schreiber, $17,829; Charter Oak Stable, $13,378; J. Rodegap, $12,047; Fred Foster, $10,835; G. B. Morris & Co., $9,791; J. E. Cushing, $9,708 and W. J. Spiers, $9,604.

THE BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is indebted to Judge Burke for a copy of quarterly number of "The Form Book," published in New York. It covers all Eastern races from July 19th to Nov. 12th in a most comprehensive manner.

THERE was considerable complaint at Latonia of the failure of owners to pay jockeys' fees. It is said that some have not paid a single mount during the meeting, and Lonnie Clayton claims that the sum of $1,800 is due him for fees.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Abraham Lincoln, William Shakespeare, J. Caesar, C. Columbus, N. Bonaparte and other noted people were arrested in a pool-room raid in Chicago last week. At least they so registered at the police station.

No doubt Starter Ferguson will accept with a great deal of pleasure the respite he will be afforded during the next month. On two occasions recently he has been very sick, but stuck to his post, and his little rest will give him a chance to recuperate.

L. SHAFER, ex-Chief of Police, of Oakland, has some of the best bred youngsters (trotters and pacers in California), among them being the pacer Della S., 2:20½, and a Monbars three-year-old, out of the dam of Arthur L., 2:15½, that rumor says is a corker.

SCIMITAR showed some of his gameness Friday. He is by Eotben, sire of Requital, the Futurity winner of this year. Though bumped and knocked around he stayed with the game, and when Chorn asked him the question he came on and stood a drive.

THREE races at seven furlongs, one at a mile, and the other at five and one-half furlongs will be a treat to lovers of longer distances. Two of the seven furlong events are at welter-weights. Many of the horses starting to-day have not gone the distance before.

"CURLEY" BROWN, the starter, was arrested in St. Louis Thursday after making three attempts to shoot Judge Creveling. His "gun" was taken from him and his prospects for having to pay a heavy fine are very bright. The Missouri laws are strict and must be respected.

WORD was received by the Pacific Coast Jockey Club this morning from Governor Budd that he would be down from Sacramento to-morrow evening, so it is definitely settled that the Governor and his staff in full uniform will grace with their presence the opening of the new track on Thursday.

L. EZELL had three starters Monday. One was made favorite and won, the second a warm second choice, but was short of a race with the horses he was up against. The other, a very shifty youngster, was overlooked in the betting and won impressively from good horses at long odds of 10 to 1.

MISS GENTRY won as she pleased Saturday at five and a half furlongs. It was thought from the way Fly overhauled her in the last few yards at her previous start at five furlongs that she could not hold out. And now comes the story that she had not been out of the stable for a week before that race.

WM. NAPIER, of Pleasanton, has a splendid looking suckling colt by Del Mar out of the good race mare Cheerful. It is a chestnut with three white legs, and is a strongly-built yet very racing-looking youngster. The Martenhurst filly out of Cheerful is now in Matt Storn's string at the Bay District track.

DAN HONIG, the owner of quite an extensive stable of horses at Ingleside, reached this city Thursday. Mr. Honig is another who will make his debut on the California turf this year. He was accompanied by F. Garner, who will be the regular jockey for the stable. Tom Costello will train the string.

LESLIE GALBRAITH made a flying trip from the Bay District last week. He visited Salem and Portland, and his stay was short. However, before returning he purchased from Phil Painter the brown horse George Dixon, six years old, by Woodhury, dam unknown. He will race him at the Bay District this winter.

"PITTSBURGH" PHIL SMITH, who has been as much written about as his contemporary plunger, Riley Grannan, arrived here yesterday. Both young men are close observers of form and industrious workers in their line. They are on hand to see the work-outs in the early morning, and then are ready to back their selections. Mr. Smith's horses preceded him by a day.

THE Caulfield Cup, one and one-half miles, of $10,000, was won in 2:36½, by Waterfall, three years, by Niagara, from Little Wanzler; Trenchant, by Trenton, from Bridesmaid, ran second; Quiver, by Trenton, from Tremendous ran third. Niagara is by Anteros, from Frailty, by Goldsborough. Trenton, sire of the two placed horses, is by Musket, out of Frailty.

ACTION on the ordinance to close the pool-rooms in this city was postponed for two weeks by the Board of Supervisors. Following is the way the city fathers voted on the motion to pass to print, previous to the motion to postpone it: Ayes—Dimond, Taylor, Morganstern, Spreckels, Hobbs, Noes—King, Scully, Benjamin, Hirsch, Hughes, Dunker, Wagner.

ST. LOUIS, November 24.—The great Chicago Futurity, the richest Western stake scheduled for 1897, which was transferred to the St. Louis Fair Association when the Harlem track was closed, has been declared off. October 15th, when the lists were closed, only 500 entries had been made. An effort was made to extend the time until January 15th, but on account of the breeders offering opposition to it, it was decided to declare the event off.

A RAID was made on a slaughter house in South San Francisco Friday, and the carcasses of a number of horses were found suspended from the hooks. The market for this meat has been traced to Chinatown, where a brisk demand for it has been noted. Some of the meat has been sold to white people. The proprietors of this establishment, August Florentine and Patrick Mallarky, were arrested.

In these days, when racing and politics seem to be close friends in some States, it may not be amiss to state that the Republican victory in New Jersey is taken by those in the know to be a straw showing the course of the wind. The passing of turf laws and the resumption of racing is generally predicted. The larger majorities are in those sections most interested in racing, and seems to prove the point taken.

TOM RYAN will not go to San Francisco at all. So he said yesterday when he came up from St. Louis and had plenty of settling to do—in Ryan's favor. He has done well this fall—Mermaid being his best horse. "I haven't got the tools to use at 'Frisco," he said. "A man needs good ones to be in the game there. What I have are tired and Don Fulano has broken down." Ryan will stay at Illinois.—Chicago Racing Form.

W. E. SMITH, a brother of George E. (Pittsburgh Phil), ii training the plunger's horses, and arrived here last week with the string. He was nine days on the trip west from New York, making a stop at Council Bluffs. All the horses stood the trip remarkably well, and are being given some work every day. Mr. Smith says he will have the horses ready to start as soon as his brother arrives, who is expected most any day now.

LAST year Corrigan gave $10,000 for Ducat, and $7,000 for Senator Irby, and both have failed to win $3,000. Lorillard gave $18,000 for Falsetto and never got him to the post. Dwyer gave $35,000 for Bolero, that never paid a dollar for his oats. Belmont gave $37,000 for Hastings, that has never won a race. Trotting horse buyers do not have to pay so high for their experiments, and yet have as much fun. At least so says John H. Shults.

STEPNIK is the name of the thoroughbred yearling from Russia which Orrin Hickok brought West with him. He is a chestnut colt, with one white foot and little star in the forehead. He is out of a Russian mare that was sent to England and bred to a son of Hermit, and is a typical racehorse. The colt is as docile as a kitten, which is easily accounted for, as he has been traveling since June and been the pet of everyone that could get near him.

THE injuries of young Stanford, who was thrown from Dick O'Malley in the hurdle race Wednesday, are more serious than at first thought. Dr. Cohn states he sustained two fractures, one of the shoulder and the other the clavicle. The fractures were reduced and the patient was resting comfortable, but the physician feels a little dubious yet as to the outcome of the injury. Stanford says the horse stumbled and threw him and then fell on him. He was overlooked for awhile, but finally was discovered on the track disabled. The fog was so dense that none but the track walker saw the accident.

WINNERS on Jim Corbett were very few. Dan Halliday is said to always back his horses for a little sum, but probably did not have much on yesterday, and Johnny Coleman, of the Snyvesant Club, probably enjoys the distinction of being about the only one in the ring to have a straight bet on the horse. Hughes & Co. laid Johnny $1,000 against $10 and Hughes 'ones wrote a ticket reading $500 to $5, which Mr. Coleman also held. The field book had but two bets recorded on the sheets against the outsider, and both of these were place bets. Coleman made a swell winning on Toano the other day, also.

NEW YORK, November 23.—On the second day of the Horse Show, in class 73, for park four-in-hand teams, "Cholly" Bates won the blue ribbon, with Acrobat and Athlete (leaders), Autocrat and Aristocrat (wheelers). Last night Bates shipped the team to W. S. Hobart, of San Francisco, along with a pair of high actors and a single, high-stepping cob, all of which were passed by Dr. Henderkeeper as sound. The consignment cost Mr. Hobart $10,000, the four browns accounting for $6,500 of this amount. They will represent the young Californian millionaire in the San Francisco Horse Show.

AN immense crowd went out to the Ingleside track Sunday. The Guerrero-street line was taxed to its full capacity as far as Barney Farley's, from which point the road was thronged most all day by foot passengers. Buses were running but could not accommodate all who wished to ride. A reminiscence of the days of '49 piloted a covered coach, to which he had four bundles of bones hitched that need have no fear of ever reaching the abattoir. They would not make good glue, even. He reaped a harvest of dimes, and caused merriment for all. To his success Sunday is accredited the determination to run opposition to the electric line after it opens.

A SPECIAL to the St. Louis Republic from Lexington, Ky., yesterday says: George Cadwallader, the well-known turfman of Milldale, Ky., attempted to shoot Joe Chinn, a Lexington turfman, in the lobby of the Phoenix Hotel to-day. Chinn saw him reach for his gun and knocked him down, causing the blood to flow freely from his nose. He then struck him under the left eye, laying open the skin two inches. A bystander pulled Chinn off. As Cadwallader got up he tried to shoot, but Chinn got away. He armed himself and returned to the hotel in a few minutes, but the police arrested Cadwallader as he was threatening to shoot Chinn, and the latter's friends hustled him off to his home.

THERE is another new knight of the pigskin added to the list within the past week, says an Eastern correspondent, and a bright future is predicted for him. He rides under the name of Chenault, though he is known better by the sobriquet of "Slick." He is a bullet-headed, diminutive colored lad, who can "do 56 without a bath." In his borrowed boots and pants he is a picture to be remembered. He has been exercising horses for some time for the Bradley Bros. and is a very wideawake lad, who, in answer to a question about his home, remarked, "I live in Nashville." He won his first race on last Tuesday, and rode a vigorous finish, only landing the money by a small margin from Wiley Jones.

San Francisco, Saturday, November 30, 1895.

OUR Horse Show number will be issued next Saturday and will contain much valuable information, special descriptive articles, a full account of the Horse Show, items of interest gathered among the people who love the horse and are proud of his improvement, a complete 2:30 list corrected to date, answers to correspondents, veterinary advice, descriptions of the races at Ingleside and our usual quota of live turf and track items.

The Need of a Convention.

There is no denying the fact that this is a critical period for all who are interested in the breeding and development of light harness horses, and the importance of everyone interested adopting relief measures cannot be too strongly urged. Every horse-owner should read the able article on reform written by "Captain Essex" in this issue. The true status of the situation is plainly and forcibly shown, and were his recommendations adopted we have no doubt a great change for the better would be noticeable.

As stated before in these columns, we must hold a convention of owners, controllers, breeders and drivers of light harness horses, and with them we must have directors from all the associations in this State. Then with the foundation for a complete reformation as outlined in the article referred to, and with suggestions from others who have devoted their time to the consideration of this subject, by the time the convention is ready to adjourn, a complete and simple arrangement will be effected whereby the great industry will be placed on its proper basis, and from that time on we shall take renewed pleasure in watching the development of the structure that will be an ornament to the founders and reflect credit on the wisdom of its architects.

The trotting horse of California only needs a little help, and this can be given him if those who are breeding and developing him receive a little more encouragement from the associations that arrange the programmes and the conditions for their race meetings. The associations should also be protected as well as the horsemen and the bond of sympathy between them made stronger than ever. The system of demanding nothing to pay when entries are made, has been tried and found wanting, and some other must be devised which will meet with the approval of all horsemen who are willing to train and race their horses and are not opposed to helping associations that are in favor of giving good meetings.

Next Monday evening there will be held in this city the annual meeting of the P. C. T. H. B. Association, and it is hoped that a large attendance will be present, and some plans discussed which will prepare the way for a large gathering of interested people who will come from all parts of California to introduce measures that will be of lasting benefit to this, one of the best industries in this State.

The Horse Show.

Elaborate preparations are being made by the officers and managers of the Horse Show to make it the finest ever held west of Chicago, and on Tuesday when the gates are thrown open, the public will be agreeably astonished at the amount of work accomplished. The building itself was found to be too small to accommodate the large number of horses—375 head—so permission was obtained from our Board of Supervisors to build an annex on Grove street the entire length of the building. This will give a great deal more ground for the building of stalls, harness and feed rooms; and even with this, it is believed the place will be crowded.

The entire building will be illumined with arc and incandescent lights, and the greatest precautions will be taken against fire, a steam engine fully equipped with fire ladders being constantly in attendance.

The programme arranged for each afternoon and evening will contain many new and interesting features, and every moment will be occupied by some event that will meet with the approval of the vast audiences assembled.

No event that has taken place this year has aroused a greater interest in social circles to compare with this grand exhibition, and we know that the audience, composed as it will be of the better element of society, will not act as the vast crowds did at the recent New York show. The Chicago Horsemen, in speaking of this attendance there, has the following:

"Some of the Western dailies have, the past week, waxed facetious in some cases and coldly sarcastic in others about the attendance at the horse show recently held in New York. This exhibition is usually made in New York the occasion of much junketing, and the very best social elements of the Eastern metropolis occupy the boxes. That the managers of the show should have succeeded in enlisting the sympathy and support of these people is very much to their credit indeed, and instead of carping criticism they should receive unqualified praise for their success in so doing. If some of the lower ten thousand prefer to gaze rudely at the occupants of the boxes instead of the horses being shown in the ring what harm is done? We may rest assured that those who love the horse and are in a position to do the breeding industry any good are not numbered in the rabble that throngs the promenade and jostles fiercely to gain a closer view of one or the other of the social lions of the hour. Everyone who knows aught of the subject at all knows full well that the better the class of people that patronizes racing or any other sport or amusement in which the horse plays the leading part the more successful the gathering will be, and instead of trying to lower the New York show in the estimation of the people of the country the press at large should grant unstinted praise. It may be safely accepted as a fact that the rag, tag and bobtail of a great city like New York or Chicago will never push into prominence any entertainment which it patronizes—only the best classes can do this."

Thoroughbreds to be Sold.

When the late Col. Harry I. Thornton saw a mare that individually pleased him he invariably inquired for her breeding, and if it suited and she was for sale, he forthwith purchased her. It was in this way he selected the little collection of mares whose produce on the turf here and in the East have made them famous.

He purchased the Australian horse Mariner, one of the best-bred animals that ever landed in California, and with Sobrante, a horse he bred, mated all these mares to them. The produce needs no praise now. They gained it long ago, and to day at our tracks they are repeating their victories with a regularity that is surprising. These stallions are to be sold, as well as all his five broodmares, including the following, and a better lot has never been offered by auction in this city since the days of Norfolk and Lodi.

Rebecca, by Hubbard, out of Electra, by imported Eclipse, is the dam of Daniella and Glorienne; Carrie C., by Monday is the dam of Dare, Sam Leake, Marin, Catalina, Sobrante and Sonoma; Reata, by Milner is a half sister to Martinet and Mermaid; Sunlit is the dam of Don Carillo, Sunrise and El Rayo; Narcola, by Norfolk is herself a stake winner and a full sister to Connor, Spring Box and Abbey; Bessie Barnes, by imported Darebin is a full sister to Dare; Marin, by Thad Stevens is the dam of Mermaid, Seaside, Marinette and Martinet; Marinette is the dam of Sea Spray and Marionette; Eufaula is the dam of Oporto and Bordeaux and is a sister to Sunlit. She is by Monday, out of Lilly R., by Longfellow; Catenac, by Three Cheers is the dam of Mollie R.; Catalina, by Wheatley, dam Carrie C., by Monday, is the dam of Catenella and Randwick; Linda Vista, by Wildidle, out of Tricksey, by Joe Hooker, is but six years old but is already the dam of a winner; Moonlight, by Thad Stevens out of Twilight, by Norfolk, second dam by Lodi was a good race mare herself and has produced a winner in the good colt McFarlane.

There are a number of others that have thrown winners, besides several richly-bred young mares whose first foals are not yet old enough to race.

There are fourteen grand-looking yearlings to be sold. Seven of these are by imported Mariner, two by Sobrante, two by imported Martenhurst, one by imported Midlothian, and one by imported Darebin.

They are by producing stallions and in nearly every instance out of producing dams.

The sale is on Tuesday evening, December 10th, and will be under canvas, brilliantly lighted by electricity.

Opening of the New Track.

There could be no better evidence of the growing popularity of racing on this coast than the splendid attendance at the new Ingleside track on Thanksgiving Day. The weather was very disagreeable; a heavy mist, followed by showers of rain, not preventing about 8,000 people from being present. It reminded one of the famous four-mile race which took place over twenty years ago on the old Ocean House track not a mile from this new and magnificent course. To speak of the appointments of this course in comparison with the old ramshackle buildings, stalls and club-house there would be superfluous. Here is a place all Californians can take pride in, and have no hesitancy in inviting their friends. The management of the meeting on the opening day could not be improved, but the lack of the Australian starting gate was noted by thousands who are anxious to see it in operation. It is hoped their wishes will be gratified soon. However, the opening of this new and attractive resort marks a new epoch in the history of thoroughbreds in California, and the boom which its presence will give to the industry will be felt wherever racehorses are bred or owned. Many people will come here to enjoy the winter's sport, visit our many lovely places of interest, purchase farms and fine stock, and, after a few years, make their homes with us. To the projectors, therefore, of this new improvement, this magnet, if we may term it, the people of California, and especially those interested in the breeding and development of fine horses are deeply indebted. May its future be a bright one in every way is the earnest wish of all who visited it on the memorable Thanksgiving Day of 1895!

The Pool Room Ordinance.

It is the wish of every citizen as well as every horseman that the ordinance now before the Board of Supervisors be passed. The pool rooms in this city should be closed. They are detrimental to the best interests of the community as well as legitimate racing, and their continued existence will be used as a lever by the enemies of racing to destroy our tracks and drive all the breeders, owners and trainers from this State just as it has in Illinois, New Jersey and New York. Those Supervisors who pretend to be ignorant of the evils of these "commission" houses should devote a few hours to a tour of the thirty places now thriving in this city and see how the work is done.

Out of the Mire.

That but few more "soft places" are to be encountered in the market for useful horses every close observer is thoroughly convinced. The same story comes from all of the leading horse marts of the country—that "useful horses are in active demand at higher prices," while fancy animals for either light or heavy driving or for saddle are actually bringing very fancy prices. Breeders and dealers are at last getting on to the fact that buyers want only the finished product, and they want that to be useful. They will buy neither prospects nor ornaments on paper. Breeders are also getting out of the idea that because an animal is a "trotting bred" it is an acknowledgment that he is "no good" to offer for sale as anything else than a trotter. "By their deeds shall they be known" is no more truthfully said of men than of horses, and if a horse can do nothing no one wants him. Sellers have learned that buyers have their own ideas about what they want, and buyers have learned that "sure enough" trotters, coaches and saddlers are worth something, and they are perfectly willing to pay something for such horses as they want. Of course there are still a few buyers who seem to think they should be paid a little something for taking a horse off of the breeder's or owner's hands, but the "chromo" cycle in this respect has happily passed. The only trouble now is that too many good horses were given away during the time that everybody wanted to unload at once. This last fact will be more fully realized in two or three years from now, when breeders will want to breed and raise good horses and find that they have disposed of all of their good breeding animals, and it will be realized that the real misfortune to the horse breeding industry has not been so much the prevalence of low prices as the recklessness in disposing of good breeding stock. A general "shaking out" is a great thing occasionally in most any branch of business, and surely the horse breeding industry has had its turn at the "shake out" game, and is now ripe for a new life. Breeders need but to keep in touch with market demands and strive to produce that which is useful and salable.

Trotting-bred Park Horses Win the Prizes.

Despite the fact that some of the trotting classes at the Horse Show received no entries at all, and that in some other classes the entry list was very light, it is pretty safe to say that the trotting fraternity got more enjoyment out of the big exhibition of horseflesh this year than ever before. There was something besides the regular contests for trotters and roadsters to interest them, for in nearly every class open to harness horses of the park type one or more trotting-bred animals had been entered, and the trotting enthusiasts were on the qui vive to see how the dock tailed trotters would fare in competition with the English hackneys, French coachers and other carriage breeds at the high-stepping game. In the trotting classes the trotters competed against each other only, but when it came to the other contests the representatives of the distinctly American breed had to meet all comers, of course, says the N. Y. Tribune.

The typical trotting horse has been often criticised, and not without reason, as all candid admirers of the breed must admit, on account of his tendency to Roman nose, ewe neck, flat ribs, drooping rump and crooked hind legs. That the family has plenty of representatives free from these unsightly defects of conformation, which possess the beauty and quality, as well as the trappy action and fine style of the highest type of hackney or coach horse, was proved beyond doubt by the result of last week's Horse Show.

There were twelve classes for horses of the park type, shown singly and in pairs, and in all of these classes, with perhaps one exception, the trotting-bred high-steppers carried off a part of the honors. In nine of the contests they won the blue rosette, and out of the forty-five ribbons awarded they captured no less than twenty-seven, a good, clean majority over the representatives of all other breeds combined. This count includes only those trotters whose pedigrees are known. There were doubtless a good many other trotting-bred horses among the prize winners in these classes, but the Horse Show Association, whose foremost purpose is supposed to be the improvement of the breed of horses, pays no attention to the breeding of the animals entered for exhibition in the harness classes; hence it is impossible to tell how many more dock-tailed trotters scored in the week. The same thing is true about the hackneys and other harness breeds, of course; but, inasmuch as only two prize-winners whose breeding is known carried the blood of the English type of horse, it is certain that the trotters outnumbered them, five to one at least.

Many horsemen, and particularly the breeders who are seeking to supply the growing demand for high-stepping park horses, want to know all about the blood lines of the show-ring winners at Madison Square Garden and elsewhere. This is about the only guide they have to follow in their attempt to fix the type and establish a family of high-steppers, and the National Horse Show Association of America ought to make a practice of printing in the catalogues a short pedigree of every animal entered in the show, where the pedigree is known. The present system is almost on a par with racing horses and taking no record of their breeding. If this plan had been followed for 200 years in England and America there would be no families of thoroughbreds or trotters. Every racing association in the country and nearly every driving club which gives a trotting meeting preserves carefully the pedigree of the winners, and it is by breeding from the winners and from the sires and dams of winners that the speed horse, whether trotter or runner, has been brought to its present degree of perfection. The show-ring test for show horses is just as important in its way as the racing test is to the breeder of the thoroughbred, and same principle holding good in both cases, and now that four in hand teams are fetching $5,000 and $6,000, and carriage pairs are selling for $6,000 under the hammer, with single steppers going for $3,700, and the like, horsemen are more than ever interested in the blood of the crack-jacks.

Joseph E. Widener's horse, Dash, is perhaps entitled to be classed as the champion high stepper of the Horse Show of 1895, having won the cup offered by Strauss & Hexter for the best animal of this type not over 15 3 hands in height in the show. The class was judged on Saturday evening, and only the first-prize winners in other classes were eligible to start. Dash had won twice, beating such good ones as Acrobat, Meteor, Ruth, Blazeaway and Shining Light, before he entered the ring in this class, and he carried off the honors a third time, defeating Mrs. T. Suffer's famous prize-winner, Gladys, and the sporty little hackney mare Spous, a winner in Class 55, belonging to Mrs. C. Weidenfeld, of this city. It will interest the trotting enthusiasts to know that Mr. Widener's champion high-stepper is a New England bred trotter of orthodox blood lines and with a record of 2:42, made at Canton, Me., in 1893. Dash is by Messenger Wilkes, 2:29½, and his dam was by Daniel Lambert, the son of Ethan Allen, 2:25½. Mr. Widener bought him for a small sum up in the White Mountains less than a year ago after seeing him trot a race. His owner says he can beat 2:30 to sulky. Be this as it may, Dash has a good turn of speed along with his beauty of form and action, for he whirled Mr. Widener's high-set gig around the show ring in the Garden at a rate which made the tanbark fly in ripples as he went around the turns.

Among the high-steppers of the larger type, C. J. and Harry Hamlin's Cogent won the highest honors at the Horse Show. He was only once in the week, in Class No. 63, for horses not under 15 3 hands high, and although it was his first appearance in any show ring, he carried off the blue rosette, beating such noted steppers as J. F. Talmage's Monarch, Dr. W. Seward Webb's Lewiston Boy, Joseph E. Widener's Greenwich and John A. Logan's Vladimir, along with a lot of others. Cogent stands 16 1 hands high and he is without doubt one of the best, if not the best, park horse that has yet been shown in New York. As active on his feet as a pony, he has the quality of a blood horse and the action and substance of a high-class hackney. He was raised at Village Farm and he is by Mambrino King, the sire of Nightingale, 2:08, out of Coquette, an imported French coaching mare by Quintessence. The horse has speed and he was kept for a time as a stallion at Village Farm.

King Beauty, who was placed fourth in Class No. 55 for high-steppers, is another son of Mr. Hamlin's famous trotting sire and show horse, Mambrino King. He was sold recently with his mate, Sunny Boy, a grandson of Mambrino King, to C. R. Duval, of this city, for $1,325. C. F. Havemeyer's entry in the same class, Village Queen, is another dock-tailed trotter from Village Farm, being by Hamlin's Almont Jr., 2:26½, out of Queenie King, by Mambrino King. Rex Bismont, who won third prize, is a registered trotter. He was raised by ex-Governor Harris, now living in Chicago, and is a son of the handsome campaigner Bismont, out of Prairie Queen, by Prairie King.

Alderney and Jersey, the splendid matched pair that won first prize in Class No. 56, are both New England-bred trotters and grandsons of New England's greatest trotting sire, Daniel Lambert, by Ethan Allen, 2:25½. They are owned by S. H. Mason, Jr., ex Secretary of the New York Driving Club, and Jersey is by Young Lambert, while Alderney is by Jim Lambert. In Class No. 59 all of the placed horses were trotters. Dash, the winner, has already been described, and Meteor and Ruth, who were placed second and third respectively, are well known in New York, W. Gould Brokaw having paid $5,900 for the pair at W. D. Grand's Silver Cup sale about a month ago. Ruth is by Charles Reade, 2:24½, the inbred grandson of Ethan Allen, 2:25½, and Meteor is by Harry Pulling, 2:29½, while his dam was a descendant of Vermont Black Hawk, the sire of Ethan Allen. Acrobat, the New York Coach Horse and Cob Company's white ribbon winner in this class, is a son of Atlantic, 2:21, by Almont. This horse is one of the leaders of the four-in-hand team that Charles F. Bates sold to Mrs. T. H. Spaulding for $5,000 at the Horse Show. The other leader is Athlete, also by Atlantic, 2:21, and the two, shown as a pair in Class No. 60, won second prize, first prize going to Mr. Brokaw's Ruth and Meteor. All of the placed horses in this class were trotters, Mr. Widener's Dash and mate winning third prize, while fourth went to George B. Hulme's Blazeaway and Golden Rod by Oceanica.

The latter pair won the blue rosette in Class No. 58, and the third prize in this class went to the New York Coach Horse and Cob Company's trotting-bred pair, Shining Light, by Allie Wilkes, 2:15, and Sunrise, by Mohawk Gift, 2:24. Surprise and Superior, the pair that Jack G. Murray of New Rochelle paid $2,000 for at the Silver Cup sale, won the white rosette. Surprise is by the trotter Clay Pilot Jr., and Superior is by Dillard Alexander. Both are good horses, and they were big winners at the Westchester Horse Show when owned by Strauss & Hexter. It is said that they are soon to be sent to Glasgow, Scotland. The New York Coach Horse and Cob Company's Sweetheart and Senator, which were "placed" in two of the most important park classes of the Horse Show, are green ones in the show ring, having been brought from Ohio recently. Mr. Bates, the President of the company, says they are both by Allie Wilkes, 2:15, who was himself a show horse as well as a trotter.

Unquestionably the best pair of big horses in the show were J. F. Talmage Jr.'s Brooklyn Park team, Monarch and Performer, the latter a standard bred son of Stocking Chief, the sire of Humboldt, 2:20, and the former by Harry Thordale, out of Corinne, by Magic, the sire of Clemmie G., 2:15½. Mr. Talmage bought this pair from Strauss & Hexter at W. D. Grand's Silver Cup sale, paying $3,000 for the high-stepping bays.

This is a remarkable list of trotting bred prize-winners in the park classes for one horse show to develop, and it brings out the versatility of the American type of harness horse in a way that commands admiration. One of the significant points of the showing from the viewpoint of the horse breeder is the prominence of the blood of Mambrino King, Ethan Allen, George Wilkes and Almont in the prize list.

Those "Good, Old Days".

One of the veterans of the turf is Capt. "Billy" Williamson, who used to own Harry of the West and is now associate judge at St. Louis. Personally Captain "Billy" is a lovable man, but his ways are the ways of the past and his ideas are ancient, too, says Racing Form. Recently he talked of the turf of the past and the present. He said: "When I first went on the turf the sport predominated among the aristocratic South. Bookmakers were unheard of then, and endurance was the test at stake among the horses. One, two, three, four and even five-mile heat races were necessary to decide the question of superiority, and they were tests that only a thoroughbred could stand." What of this? Two, three and four mile heats nowadays would make the public yawn. The trotting turf gives all the heat cross counters one wants in these days. Thus out of Captain "Billy's" experience comes this:

"In the old days it required a man of great ability and experience to train a horse. This fact can be appreciated by those who know what the effect would be on a horse that was sent to the post unfit in a two, three or four mile heat race.

It was also necessary to ride jockeys who were thoroughly competent horsemen. Science in the saddle was absolutely necessary, and the old time jockeys did their riding with their hands and heads. The difference is that those of today do it with spurs and whips.

All well and good. But the trainer of the past—there are some at the game now—is outclassed by the trainer of the present. Why not? Humanity is larger. So are the prizes. So is experience. So is the turf. Averages beat the Captain's reflections to pieces. The modern selling plater of fair class breaks records when he goes at the long distance game. The modern jockey is superior in his way to the ancient one. He has been given experience from the archives and added to it that of latter practice and knowledge. The past of the American turf is all right in its way. But it's a past, and available only for reminiscence and reflection. Henry of Navarre could probably beat Harry of the West as far as one could throw a rock with Harry trained by an ancient and Henry a modern. The turf as well as the bread and the raiment of 1895 is just as much better as the turf, the bread and the raiment of 1870, as are the newspapers of to-day and then.

Altamont the "Only."

Altamont is the only sire that has four pacers and one trotter in the 2:10 list.

He is the only sire with four 2:10 performers to his credit in one season.

He is the only sire that ever put two in the 2:10 list in one race.

He is the only trotting-bred sire that has five 2:10 performers to his credit.

He is the only sire twenty years old that never sired a chestnut colt.

He is the only sire that ever put two full brothers in the 2:10 list in one year.

MATT ALLEN has sold Illusion, bay colt, 4, by The Ill-Used—Magnetism, to J. McAleer. Price, $500. McAleer, was in Mr. Allen's employ for several years.

Cycles in the Horse Business.

In all phases of commercial life one extreme is followed by another in the opposite direction, and just so sure as any commodity or product takes on an unwarranted activity and value, just so sure will it later be struck with the "slows," says the Western Horseman. Likewise an unnatural and unwarranted depression is universally followed by appreciation and activity. This is true of real estate, manufactured products, the products of the farm, live stock, stocks, bonds and every article of commerce. Not a credit or instrument of commercial value that is so so staple as to ward off the ill effects of lack of public confidence, at least for a time, and that again which the public sets distrust can no more resist the destructive assault of financial breakers than can a small craft with safety sail on oceans blue. But one extreme follows another in the opposite direction with as much certainty as summer follows winter, and just so sure as horse values have been low for some time past will they be much better in the future. Again, animal nature is pretty much the same in many respects, and while some individuals are natural leaders of their kind, thousands of others are natural followers, and hence the almost universal tendency is to follow the tide. Five years ago the leaders all wanted trotters, the "rabble followed suit," and everybody wanted trotters, "because everybody else did." Later the great financial panic came on, the "bell wethers" did not want trotters or horses of any kind, the herd of following flocks stampeded, and "my kingdom" was offered with the horse to anyone who would "take him off the place," and about all of the good ones have been taken. But the storm of distrust in the trotting horse, his value and his usefulness has happily passed, day is breaking and the equine sky is beginning to show gleams of its old-time brightness; the "hell wethers," the millionaires of the East have again begun buying first-class speed horses, and the general public is thinking much better of the game. The extreme in high prices culminated four years ago, the corresponding low-water mark was passed early in the present year, and now the horse business is well on its way to healthfulness and general prosperity. Every possible influence and indication points to reviving prosperity in the horse business in this country. Many foreign countries are short on horse supplies and are heavy buyers in all American markets. The American trotting turf, as a whole, has just closed a remarkably prosperous season. Race horses have a great earning capacity, and stallions throughout the country have been castrated by the thousands. Breeding has been limited for three years back, the horse stock of the country decreased about a million and a quarter in 1894, and the annual decrease during the next three or four years will be many times greater.

Matt Dawson's Retirement.

The final and determined retirement of Matt Dawson is bad news for Lord Rosebery, and the reverse of good news for the English turf generally. No man has done more for the latter as an institution than has grand old Matt during the half century and upwards that he has labored in this vineyard. From the days of "Wullie Hope" to the present day what race horses has he not turned out? Commencing with Lutheritress, The Era, Biddie, William le Gros, etc., and running through the hosts of good ones which appeared in the colors of Lord John Scott, Mr. Merry, the Duke of Newcastle, Lord Falmouth, Mr. Vyner, Lord Hastings, Lord Rosebery, and others of lesser note, one could draw up a list of high-class animals of absolutely astounding dimensions. No other trainer's career in England, save that of John Scott, can compare with it. Danebury had a father and a son following each other as proprietors during a similar period, and therefore cannot be fairly brought into comparison. Moreover, during Lord John Scott's time, and for the past ten years, Matthew Dawson's stable was of most limited dimensions, while Danebury and Whitewall were always crowded.

The fifties, sixties and seventies bristle with good race-horses brought out by Matt Dawson from Thormanby to St. Simon. Such a record as that made by the famous trainer by Lord Falmouth alone has never been approached, much more equaled, £95,000 odd in three years and £200,000 in ten being literally stupendous. We must remember that there were no "ten thousand pounders" at that time, so the vast successes of Donovan and Isinglass in no way come into comparison. As Stockwell's great race (1866) as a sire far surpasses those of St. Simon and Isonomy of the present day, so does the feat of Matthew Dawson exceed that of all trainers, past, present and probable to come.

Winning Sires in England and America.

The largest winning sires on the English turf for the present season are as follows: St. Simon, by Galopin, $143,815. Barcardine (dead), by Solon, $99,510; Isonomy (dead), by Sterling, $92,795; Wisdom (dead), by Blinkhoolie, $71,275; Galopin, by Vedetta, $67,530; Bend Or, by Doncaster, $63,085; Royal Hampton, $56,770; Hampton, by Lord Clifden, $56,225.

Hanover will probably head the American list, mainly through the victories of Handspring, Halma and Buckwa, while Falsetto, Sir Modred, Bramble, Himvar, St. Blaise, etc., will all hold prominent places. The success in Bright Phoebus in the Realization will put Falsetto well forward and Requal's victory in the Futurity will bring his young imported sire, Eothen, into prominence. It has been rather an off year for St. Blaise, especially in the East, where his two-year-olds, although showing great promise early in the Spring, did not, for a variety of reasons, train on as well as was expected.

THE Australian steeplechaser, Dorette, is to be sent to England to take part in the Grand National Steeplechase of 1896, and whether he wins or not will be kept there the following year with a view to winning the race in 1897. In 1892 a Trenton mare called Trentonian was sent to England, and her foal by St. Serf has been nominated in the Derby of 1897. A few weeks ago a bet of $25,000 to $1 was laid against Doimio winning the Grand National and the Trentonian colt the Derby of 1897.

REFORM MUST COME.

A Few Good Ideas For the Consideration of Horsemen—Needs of a Convention Strongly Urged.

Looking back over the season of 1895, and what do we behold? That which convinces every person engaged in the business of the great necessity for changes in our present methods of doing business. That the day is past when associations can offer stakes (?) to close early in the year and get large entry lists. That the system of easy payments is a delusion and snare, a net which has dragged many into their present condition. More crippled and otherwise disabled race horses than has ever been known to exist at the close of any previous season. That Associations, owners, drivers and others must get together and for the good of all devise some means whereby the business may be perpetuated.

The fact that the business of local associations are conducted under the rules of either the American or National Trotting Associations, is not sufficient guarantee of the good faith of the local member. While the rules are good so far as they go, they are not as far-reaching as they should be. If an owner, controller or driver makes an entry with an association the racing laws are such, that if he fails for any reason to fulfill the full letter of his agreement as expressed on the entry blank, the whole stable and all parties interested are held up by the parent association until such claims are satisfied and often too, settlement is forced when it works a hardship. Let the party nominating at a meeting keep his engagements, pay his entrance money as required, ship his horses to take part in their respective engagements (may be at great cost, for all who campaign know that the freight bills are most exorbitant), and for some reason or another it may be simply a pretext, the race or meeting is declared off, what recourse is provided? Or what is worse, he goes to the meeting, races throughout and at the close, has his choice of taking fifty per cent of his winnings or nothing. What is his redress through the present rules? It is no question. Year after year, like Banquo's ghost, it has arisen in some form and many, many horsemen of to day find themselves stranded financially, largely through the default of associations who take especial pains to cause the greatest publicity to the fact that they are members of the National or American Trotting Associations. The fact is, it is much better for all, that a parent organization should formulate rules for the government of all race meetings in order that a uniformity may exist and all know what his rights may be. But at this time, when both the American and National are called upon to confront a state of affairs never before existing, it may not be out of place to suggest that those who make it possible for their organizations to live, i. e., the horsemen, are under the present rules, practically without protection. Some law or laws should be enacted whereby some responsibility shall be attached to local organization and they be compelled to keep faith with the horsemen. Officered as both the American and National Associations are with men who are interested in the breeding and development of the harness horse, it is surprising, to say the least, that this matter has not received attention before. It must come in time, else the business will be such that no use will exist for either association.

The system practiced by many associations of offering what they choose to call stakes, entries to which close early, has had its day, and cannot too speedily be relegated to the list of "has beens." This subject has proven to be an imposition upon the public. A large entry list is secured and kept before the public. They expect to see large fields of contestants, and when the race is called and only three appear for the word, they feel that they have been "bunked," no matter how hotly the race may be contested or how close they may have seen the race record. While it has operated as an injustice to the paying public, it has worked a greater hardship upon the nominators. All in the early spring have extreme speed (in their mind) and enter clear through the circuit. The first two or three races demonstrate that a very few, possibly not more than two, out class all the others many seconds. By reason of the early entry system all must pay alike "down the line," yet have no chance to win even an entrance money, unless an accident befalls one of the cracker-jacks. When entries closed a week or ten days before a meeting, the entry list published showed to the dear people with a reasonable degree of certainty, the number and class of starters in each race. It said to the horse owner, if you cannot win at this or that meeting, there is a hope beyond. This made horse racing. It interested the public, and gave all horses an equal chance, if it did not give the local association a bundle of horsemen's money with which to pay for improvements or other expenses not connected with the current racing. The system of stakes required a vast amount of money in order to enter a stable properly and began to be felt as a burden by the breeders and owners of large stables. Then was evolved the easy payment plan "No money until you start or declare out." How nice it reads. How easy. Yet look at the suspension lists in the hands of the American and National Associations and tell me if anything contributed to these lists more largely than this easy payment plan. Men who heretofore have always kept their obligations find themselves entangled in the meshes of this sweep-net and many, unless some relief is offered, are "landed so high" that the future race goers will know them only as relics of the past. What shall be done? Who can offer the proper solution of this very difficult problem? To the writer there appears to be but one way.

The horsemen who are suspended, will never see the day they can pay up in full. They will be driven out of the business if compelled to do so and their horses will be taken out of the list of races. It may be said that this would be a good thing, but will it? The purchasers of these suspended horses might be of that army that would be of value and could do more towards the development of the harness horse than a great many already in the business. After buying the horses at a reasonable price, they conclude to try a little racing, engage trainers, drivers, etc., buy sulkies, harness, boots and everything else necessary to accomplish their object and befitting their positions, socially and financially, and after everything has been done, entries made and horses ready to start, find a suspension amounting to many hundreds of dollars against their horses. The result, discouragement, a feeling that the business has gone to the dogs and that a better investment could have been in other channels. The proposition is a hard one. It must be met heroically, and all interests must see it is to their advantage to work on the "give and take" plan. Let the local associations and horsemen all over the country get together. Let each feel that the interest of one is the interest of the other and the problem will be solved. If the horsemen do not pay and seek other means of livelihood, the local associations will receive nothing from the long lists of suspensions now filed with the secretaries of the National and American Associations. It will be so much charged up to profit and loss, or more properly speaking, to loss. If the local associations can collect a reasonable and fair percentage of these outstanding claims, they will be far better off than now, and the two parent associations should now step in right and act as a mediator, in their respective territories between these associations and the horsemen. Set the percentage so low that every horseman will feel bound to accept the claim and liquidate it as speedily as it is possible to do. By this means all interests will be subserved. The local associations will receive a share; the horsemen will be enabled to pay up, and the two parent organizations will be in a position to continue business, for if things stand as they now are, only such associations as give meetings independently of either the National or American Trotting Associations will get entries enough to make interesting racing. At present writing this is what is coming. Each association a power in itself, making laws or rules as will best serve the purpose. It is a fact beyond contradiction that the horsemen, as a class, are the poorest business men on earth. By that is meant they handle their horse affairs with less business ability than they do any other. What business man will accept of a one sided contract or will make an investment without some protection? Yet the present methods are such that horsemen make one-sided contracts when they make entries with no recourse, when the associations fail to keep faith. They make investments unprotected, when they campaign stables of horses, to be judged by men who never had a dollar invested in horseflesh of any description and whose only qualification is that of "a prominent citizen" or "has been in the stand before." When the amount invested in race horses is taken into consideration, some provision should be made for its protection. There are two ways to do this. First, let the owners and drivers get together, form a proper organization, officered by representative men, and demand a recognition in every stand. Second, by the employment of a professional judge. Which of these is the most preferable, is not the question at this time. The employment of the professional judge is meeting great favor in the East and removes many causes for complaint. It is unreasonable to expect a man who has an opportunity of judging races one week in a year to be as expert as he who makes a business of it. How often have injustices been done to men and horses because of incompetency in the judges' stand would field a big book, and yet it goes on in the same old way, all because no one cares or wishes to take the initiation. Better devote a month during the winter season towards securing protection, than be compelled to suffer at one meeting after the season begins. It will be much cheaper.

The causes for so many crippled and disabled horses are so varied that to ascribe all to one would be an injustice, but in the great majority of cases the long-continued scoring has been the cause of more good horses being "knocked out" than any other. How can this be remedied, do you ask? The answer is: Secure the best starting judge you can; pay him such salary as will keep him free from all entanglements or temptations and you have solved to a great degree the question. The position of starting judge is the most responsible of all connected with modern harness racing. The interests at stake are so varied in their character and of so much importance that none but an experienced person should occupy the position. The rules of the parent and local associations must be enforced. The owners and drivers, together with their horses, have inalienable rights and must be protected. The privilege men have certain rights for which they have paid liberally, and above all, the public, who, by the payment of admission fees at the gate, make it possible for associations and horsemen to do business, have a right to such protection as will keep up their interests in the sport, else the development of "God's noblest animal and man's best friend" must cease. The position of starting judge should not be sought after by an amateur, nor filled at any time by an inexperienced person, regardless of his honest motives, ability in private business, official or social position in society. Any one with the ability to say "go" may try to be a starting judge, but when the season is past the "has been" and "rised to do's" tell a sad tale to the owners and drivers and cause many to wonder if a "snow-ball diet" was not forced upon them through no fault of their own.

The associations owe it to the horsemen to provide the best officials possible. The great majority of owners and drivers are naturally honest, and are in the business for what profit there may be. Their investment as a rule is large, certainly their expenses heavy and in these days of extreme speed often find it hard to place the even balance upon their accounts. When they get to a meeting and find the stand occupied by honest, yet incompetent judges, who not only do not know the rules, but cannot tell, on their life, if a horse is performing at the proper gait. When in scoring for the word it is every man for himself, and for lack of knowledge the only admonition or assistance is a threat to impose a fine, as a rule, upon the person and horse not at fault, then do we see what is popularly called "jobs." Then, it is demonstrated that "honesty is not always the best policy," and attempts are made at wrong doing; in the majority of cases succeeding, and which in the past have had much to do with bringing the racing business into disrepute. Much has been written and said about the "laying up of heats" and more may be expected, for this habit, if it may be called such, is one of the most pernicious now practiced. It may be well at this point to suggest that in many, very many instances, this habit has been encouraged because of incompetency in the stand. How often have you seen fields of ordinarily good actors scored at top speed until some or all are in no condition to race? In fact, have had more racing without the word than they would get in a six or seven heat race, and when sent off, one or more rolling and pitching, ready to leave their feet, which is finally done and all chances for that heat ruined. There can be but one thing for that driver to do. For his own protection and that of his horse he is compelled to "lay up" in order that he may be able to compete in the next heat. No rule can be laid down for the starting of horses. What will do for one field will not do for others. It is the starter's place to see the gait and judge of the ability of his field. One thing he must know, and that is, it is much easier for a fast horse to take back to the slower horses than to put speed into the slow horse. He must be a judge of pace and know how to help his field away early so they may begin racing while they are fresh, thus making at least a respectable showing to the public. He must realize that by reason of his position he occupies an arbitrary station, one calculated to demonstrate his executive ability. He must be firm in his rulings, have absolute control of his trumpet and not forget that every man engaged in the race is entitled to the treatment of a gentleman, and no matter what a driver or owner may do by way of violating the racing rules, the horse is not to blame for such action. The average grand-stand audience seem to take especial delight in the imposition of a fine, and will often give more applause when a "ten" is collected than when a record is broken. The starter must not threaten a fine unless he means to impose it, and he should be sure of his position and know he is right before the action is taken. He must have all horses come to him unprejudiced. The slow or crippled horse cost its owner the same amount as did the faster and sounder horse therefore is entitled to the same opportunities at the score. The bad actor is entitled to a reasonable protection, but does not earn the right to jeopardize the chances of the good actors. The starter must know and handle a field of colts just as he would handle his children. The impressions formed by colts in their colthood are as lasting as those of children in childhood, and they must be taught to race when they come together rather than to act badly. The starter has it in his power to help the colts away and unless he does so, is derelict in his duty, to say the very least. Too much care, as has been said, cannot be used in the selection of a judges' stand. To it the most competent men should be invited at all times, paying more attention to their ability in that particular line than to the fact that they are "good fellows," "prominent citizens," or have an influence in certain social circles.

The P. C. T. H. B. Association is in a position just now to do much towards the reformation of harness racing on the Pacific Coast. Their influence is of such a character as to demand recognition from all local organizations. The capital represented is so great that no member can afford to omit his part and the public, who are interested in this class of racing, expect them to follow up the example set by their 1895 fall meeting. CAPTAIN ESSEX.

The Pace That Kills.

The extraordinary number of sick, sore and disabled horses which have fallen out of the hunt this season proves conclusively that it is the pace which kills. Perhaps the greatest living example is Directum, with Alix a good second, and both severely tried graduates at the Salisbury school of racing, says an exchange. The guiding rule of this school is to make the most monetary use of speed, while it lasts. Take no thought for next season. It may never come to the horse or owner. New trainers and racing machines burst on an expectant public every year. The race-goer of to-day will observe that horses are subjected to unusually long scores—often from the 150 yard distance stand and further. The fields are large, and winners have to trot long miles. The average starting judge, in the scramble for reputation and few scores, is in the habit of giving the word when the horses are off their gait, without regard to the contending horses being well up in their places. Thus races are prolonged, and the best performers have to go extra heats or surrender the race to slower competitors. The rule in most well regulated campaigning stables is to give complaining horses rest and restorative treatment. If the feet or legs show signs of disease or breakdown a let-up follows. When the tendons or ligaments are injured by strains or blows, pin and line firing with repeated blisters and a long rest, is the safe and scientific course. It is maintained by some horsemen of observing experience that one or two seasons at most of complete rest in pasture and paddock will enable nature to repair and strengthen weak legs without the aid of the firing-iron. But in all such cases the trainer must haste slowly on a resumption of the horse's training. Weeks and even months of jogging exercise are found necessary to harden the legs and enable them to stand fast work. Absorbent and cooling lotions are used to scatter thickening tissues and keep the joints and cords free from fever. Cotton wool under the bandages has a capital effect in assisting the liniment to operate, and it protects the circulation from uneven or too tight bandaging.

A Pleasant Outing at Pleasanton.

Judge J. J. Burke, W. C. Vreeland, David Higgins, Dr. Hoagland, Judge W. E. Greene, J. Cairn Simpson and the editor visited Pleasanton yesterday and had the pleasure of seeing the horses at the Salisbury farm, and were then taken in hand by R. E. de B. Lopez and his sons and shown the Australian thoroughbreds on the Merriwa (formerly Valensin's) Stock Farm, about two miles from Pleasanton. The visitors were most favorably impressed with the splendid condition of the horses on pasture there, and the ramble over the green fields was quite a treat to the gentlemen who had never seen so much fine pasture at this season before. The trotting stallion, James Madison, 2:17½, came in for a share of the praise lavished upon the Australian thoroughbreds, Merriwa, Doncaster, Clieeden and Foulshot, the two latter being greatly admired. Mr. Simpson was delighted with Foulshot, the only son of Musket (king of all sires) in America, and did not hesitate a moment to praise the excellence of this horse. The four horses represent four distinct types of the thoroughbred, and as three of them will be in the coming Horse Show, visitors will have an opportunity of comparing them. They are all fine individuals and royally bred. As an outcross on American mares the Australians have proved wonderfully successful, and when any judge of the beautiful and student of bloodlines begins to carefully study the points of these horses and then glance over their pedigrees the conviction becomes strong that the secret of the successful mating of these Eclipse horses with our strongly inbred Herod mares is easily accounted for. As a place to pasture and care for horses the Merriwa Stock Farm is destined to hold a leading place among all the farms in California. There are fourteen fields planted in alfalfa, red clover, Australian rye grass and alfalfa, and Monroe Salisbury says it's the best stock farm in California. Forty head of his mares are kept there in the fall of the year when all other pasture lands are bleak and bare.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Frank Staples bagged 52 ducks at Birdell's Sunday.

A local hunter killed 17 canvasback at Lake Merced one day day last week.

R Sangster was at San Pedro Sunday. He got a nice bag of quail and 12 ducks.

J. Bruns and his side-partner, Jack Karney, got 58 ducks at Sears Point Sunday.

N. J. Creighton and W. F. Andrus were at Black Point Sunday. They bagged about thirty birds.

Col. Eddy killed forty ducks at the Cordelia Club Sunday, and Dr. G. E. Davis ninety five at the same place.

T. R. Barney was among the successful ones at the Alameda Club's ground on the Sonoma marsh. He bagged twenty-five ducks.

M. O. Feudner and Clarence Nauman were at Nauman's usual haunt on the Sonoma marsh Sunday, and 44 sprig, 14 mallard, 3 cans and 20 widgeons and teal was the result.

The second match at 100 live birds between A. H. King and J. C. Messner resulted in a victory for King with a score of 79 to 75. A third match will be shot in a few days.

Duck shooting at Brentwood has been the best this week that it has been this season. Frank Millington, Eugene Dungan and Chas. Wells spent three days here this week and enjoyed splendid shooting.

Mill Valley constables and others have destroyed a large number of quail traps this season, but claim that it is almost impossible to secure evidence against the trappers. The sportsmen of that section should take the matter in hand.

Sears Point provided good sport to the duck hunters on Sunday last, but Saturday was the best day on all the nearby marshes. L. Campbell and Shuster got 45 on Saturday, and W. Williams got a nice bag of canvas-back on Sunday.

Horace P. Sylvester was accidentally killed on Saturday last while out hunting near White Rock canyon. His gun slipped from his hand and the hammers striking on a log discharged the gun, the charge entering his abdomen and killing him almost instantly.

The second trial of Adolph Sylva, the Sausalito attorney who was accused of shooting a doe and female fawn some time ago near Mill Valley, was concluded in Judge Gardner's court in San Rafael on the 21st. The trial lasted three days and the jury after deliberating one hour, brought in a verdict of not guilty.

G. G. Billington had his usual success near Ignacio, Sunday. Seaver and Cook came home with him and together they had about 100 birds. The canvasback and mallard were on one string and the widgeon and teal on two others, and the three had about all they could carry. Rumor says that Billington killed nearly all of them.

Tolleston Club has long preserved the muskrats on its marsh on Lake Michigan, thinking that they were a benefit to the shooting, since they cut out open holes in the heavy cover. Now, however, the rats have increased until the club have concluded to kill them down a little. One keeper was once told to catch "a few," and he caught 1,700.

Our contemporary tells us that the mallard is never found in great numbers on salt water marshes. Ignorance is bliss. Will some member of the Cordelia, Ibis or Tulle Belle Club please invite the ignoramus to their preserve and show him the difference between a mallard and a wire tail? Mallard are more plentiful at Los Banos and similar marshes, but they have been killed this year even at the Bridges and have been very plentiful on the Sonoma and Suisun marshes the entire season.

Light Guns and Gun Headache.

The following article is apparently written by one who thoroughly understands his subjects. We often hear of feather-weight guns, but in this section a 5-pound 12-bore that would not virtually kick the shoulder off of a man when loaded with a medium charge would indeed be a novelty.

The writer's allusion to shooting driven partridges and the effect of perpendicular shots on the nerves will apply equally as well to headaches from duck shooting where the majority of the shots are at birds well up in the air. We often hear a man complain of some nitro powders giving him a headache. Perhaps "20,000 shots" argument in the London Rod and Gun will explain this to him. It is as follows:

"It is a well-known fact that some barrels will shoot a particular load most effectively and with little recoil, while another pair, of the same length, gauge, and weight, with precisely the same charge, will kick like a horse. This arises from the distribution of the metal throughout the barrels, and the boring inside, being in one case correct and in the other the reverse; I have known my gunmaker, for some of my short light guns, to make templets for every two inches throughout the whole length to which the barrels must be filed; this is "clean grit" in gun making. If the thickness of the metal is not correctly distributed the wave of expansion on firing is checked if too thick, and accelerated where too thin. This almost inevitably causes a great increase in recoil, as much so if the boring inside were imperfect. I have little doubt with a 9½ lbs. 12 bore the load suggested by "Gun Headache" can be got along with very well in properly constructed barrels. He is quite right in adopting No. 5 shot, but I have no doubt that 37½ grs. of Schultze would give better results than the 2½ drs. black powder he appears to intend using, and the recoil would probably be about equal, or a little less, with the Schultze. This is a very small load of powder to use in a 12-bore, and I am of opinion that as a rule, light loads do best in smaller bores, say a 16 bore, of the same, or nearly the same weight. I used always to hold that the full force of a 12-bore was not developed with a less load than 3 drs. and 1 18 ounce; and I still entertain this opinion, if shots are to be taken beyond 40 yards; but up to this distance, I latterly found that the smaller load of shot was sufficient; but if a moderate recoil is not objected to, use nothing less than 3 drs. or 42 grs. Mr. W. Ford built a 12 bore for a very old friend of mine with 30 in. barrels—a 12 bore that weighed a trifle over 5 lbs; this was the lightest gun I ever knew; the load was 37½ grs. Schultze and 1 oz. No. 6; the shooting of the gun was magnificent, considering the load; it was slightly choked, and put on a pattern of over 135 on the 30 ins. circle, but the killing disc was fully 3 ft; it was out and out the best balanced and the handiest gun I ever saw; but there was a recoil with it, but not enough for me to feel. I do not remember what it was in foot lbs. As a proof of its handiness I may state that one day we were out, and I did not intend to shoot. This did not suit Mr. Merriman (my friend), so we agreed to take shots alternately. We fired twenty-seven shots without a miss—good work, considering that I had not fired a 30 in barrel, save at marks, for many years, and showed how splendidly this gun handled. I took "Purple Heather" on one occasion down to see this gun, and I think I may say he was as delighted with it as its owner, and will show "Gun Headache" that, if he goes to a right maker, he may have a gun practically free from unpleasant recoil, at a much lighter weight than he proposes, should he wish it. Nothing would have induced me to lug 6½ lbs. about with me.

"I now come to the second branch of my subject, namely, Recoil and Gun Headache. I have given these matters a good deal of attention. In my younger days, when guns were much more heavily loaded than now, it was unknown, or, at all events, I never heard of it, and have myself never suffered from the distressing malady of "gun headache," and I am about now to propound what I believe to be a perfectly true and, I think, correct cause for it. I am decidedly of opinion that neither the gun nor the gunpowder, except as an approximate and motive power, has anything to do with the matter; I think it must be attributed solely to the modern system of shooting driven game. The average recoil of an average 7 lb. 12-bore gun is, with the load of 3 drs. and 1 1-8 ozs., about 29 lbs., when fired from the fixed rest with Salter's balance attached; but when such a gun is fired at game, the recoil on the shoulder, supposing the shot to be nearly horizontal, is vastly less than this, as the gun is placed to the shoulder directly, on a considerable substance of more or less soft muscle; moreover, the man is all in motion, and the arm and shoulder, and even the whole body, gives to the recoil, so that it becomes, as "Purple Heather" puts it, "a push." Now, in the old style of shooting over dogs, or walking up the game, nearly all the shots were but little above the horizontal, but in the present fashionable mode of shooting, scarcely a shot is fired at less than an angle of forty five degrees, and a vast number of them approach the vertical. Now, it is a well-known fact that as the muzzle of the gun is raised, so does the strain on it increase until, nearly at the perpendicular, the recoil is increased to an enormous extent from the vastly increased weight of atmosphere, that the gases in the barrel have to lift before the charge reaches the muzzle, and further, to accentuate this, the butt of the gun is placed towards the top of the shoulder, on the end of the collar-bone and the socket of the arm; these from their position can only yield very slightly, so that the full force of the increased recoil comes upon them as a sudden blow, instead of the push before referred to, producing a tremendous jar to the system. Nor is this all, as a very large nerve passes from the vertebrae of the neck immediately under the end of the clavicle, and so down the arm, and in all high shots this nerve becomes much shaken and compressed, in fact receives almost the full benefit of the recoil. Now, as this nerve is but a short distance from the spine, and a still shorter one from the brain, there can be little wonder if this sensitive organ is greatly disturbed by the rapid firing in "hot corners," and little wonder that the shooter incurs gun headache; and I think it highly probable, that where this disturbance is severe, and continuous, it would be very likely to lead, in after life, to very serious consequences. The more I think of this subject the more certain I feel of the probable correctness of this theory, and I hope some of your medical readers will consider the matter of sufficient importance to induce them to go into it and let us have the benefit of their views on the subject to illustrate more completely my views. I may state that a cricketer standing at leg, or short slip, in catching a ball, extends his arms to the utmost, and on receiving it, allows his hands and arms to be carried backward, until one of them is stopped by his body and he escapes with the stinging of the hands and fingers, but if the same ball took him full on the chest, or abdomen, he would be knocked over like a nine-pin, and I fancy, for the rest of the day, would feel but little zest for the game; this exactly illustrates my notion that the recoil of a gun is eased off by the giving of the muscles of the body in a shot fired but little above the horizontal, while the ball on the chest exactly illustrates the ungiving condition of the bones of the shoulder, on firing a shot anything approaching the perpendicular.

Marsh Preserves.

The American Field's comments on the acquittal of J. C. Jones for trespassing on the San Pablo preserve are good, more especially the quotation, "Only the Almighty himself knows what a jury will find." The experience of the past two months leads us to think that the correct reading of the law has but little to do with a jury's verdict, but the American Field is at fault through its ignorance of the law. The San Pablo preserve should certainly be exempt from invasion by trespassers and "poachers." There is no question about the ownership of this land. There is no question of navigable sloughs and creeks. There is but one creek on that marsh that is navigable and that only borders the preserve. This land is just as much Mr. Emeric's private property and should be just as much under his control as his back yard. The editor of this department is a firm believer in the great good done by properly conducted preserves and like many that are so bitter in opposing the system would purchase one to-morrow if he had money enough, but the trouble is our wise (?) Legislature passed a law at its last session declaring all salt water marsh land, whether fenced or not, to be public property as far as shooting is concerned. The public at large prefer the State law to the sportsmen's law, and claim they have a perfect right to shoot on Emeric's, the Suisun or any other marsh.

There seems to be no question that this law is unconstitutional but it is the law and must remain such until it is proven to be unconstitutional by the higher courts. Everybody's business is nobody's business, and no one seems to care to make a test case, so the clubs and the shooters at large continue the fight that is a disgrace to sportsmen, and quite frequently, the clubman is as much to blame as the so-called "poacher."

As the representative sportsman's paper of this coast we are frequently taken to task for our neutrality in this matter. One issue states that the writer was the guest of "poachers," and shot on the Teal club's preserves on the opening day. This is false, we never put foot on one inch of any preserve on that day or any other day except as a guest of the club owing the same.

As before stated, we believe in properly conducted preserves, but we do not believe in preserve owners bagging 200 ducks in a day and claiming to be sportsmen. No man can use or give away that number of ducks. The keepers are told to take the surplus and a few days later they can be seen exposed for sale in the market.

Club members who shoot after sundown do more damage to duck shooting than twice as many market hunters, and to our notion of sport the slaughter of ducks over decoys placed in baited ponds, is not one-half as much fun as to kill one-half as many birds over decoys on the bay shore or other unpreserved unprotected ground.

There are market hunters and market hunters and we must say that we have met many of them that were better sportsmen than many club owners.

There are many sportsmen who go shooting for sport and when they kill 30 or forty ducks they eat and give away, say half that number and sell the balance. They obey the unwritten law of sportsmen in regard to the rights and privileges of blinds and never interfere with another man's shooting. They do not shoot at night.

The other class of market hunters, the ones that shoot for the market for a living and use every known method of slaughter, are the class that this paper has fought tooth and nail and will continue to fight.

To hark back to the preserve question. While the Emeric preserve is unquestionably private property, there is quite a question as to whether the Suisun marsh can be legally preserved. The sportsmen of Suisun do not think so. There are unquestionably a large number of navigable sloughs flowing through this marsh that are State property and the question of title to the land itself does not seem to have been satisfactorily settled.

E. S. Richards, the crack shot of the Stockton Gun Club, was seriously wounded while out shooting Saturday, near his home at Westley. He is a very good hunter and usually quite careful in handling firearms. In some unknown manner his gun was accidentally discharged, the charge of duck shot going through the young man's left arm and severing an artery in it. The flow of blood was stanchied, and Richards made his way homeward, surgical aid being summoned on his arrival. The accident occurred in this way: Richards had alighted from his cart and started to pull his gun from beneath the seat. In doing so he grasped it by the barrel near the muzzle. The trigger became caught and the gun was discharged. The shot tore away the flesh on the lower part of the forearm. The artery severed was the main one. Dr. Evans of Modesto was sent for and he is now caring for the wounded man. Richards' clothing caught fire and he had to jump into a slough to extinguish the blaze. He then drove nearly a mile to his home. While regretting the accident, we cannot but wonder at a shooter of young Richard's experience being so careless as to put a loaded gun in the bottom of a wagon. He won the championship gold medal in last summer's blue rock shoots of the Stockton Gun Club. At the State shoot at Sacramento on Admission Day he made a creditable showing and was a member of the Stockton Gun Club's team that recently won the trophy and State championship at the meeting of the California Inanimate Target Association. The young man is the son of "Dick" Richards, the well known Grayson rancher.

Grise are running very well now and by the way Henry Skinner, of the E. T. Allen Co., has just invented a new road tip that is a great improvement over any tip now on the market. It is an agate tip, so arranged that the centre of the agate is exactly in line with the centre of the rings on the tip. There is absolutely no friction and its utility can be seen at a glance. Call and examine them.

Slaughter of Does and Fawns.

Deputy Fish Commissioner, J. H. Davis, made an important seizure on Saturday, viz., over 100 undressed skins of does, fawns and other deer and elk, from which all evidence of sex had been removed. They were taken on the Steamer "Homer" on her arrival from Coos Bay.

The possession of these skins was unlawful both in Oregon and California. The Oregon game law prohibits the killing of deer for their hides, and makes it unlawful to kill spotted fawn at any time.

The California law reads as follows:

Section 626e. Every person who, in the State of California, shall at any time buy, sell or offer for sale the hide or meat of any deer, elk, antelope or mountain sheep, whether taken or killed in the State of California or shipped into the State from any other State or territory shall be guilty of a misdemeanor: provided that nothing in this section shall be held to apply to the hide of any of said animal taken or killed in Alaska or any foreign country.

Section 626f. Every person who shall buy, sell, offer or expose for sale, transport or carry or have in his possession, the skin, hide or pelt of any deer from which the evidence of sex has been removed, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. The latter section makes the steamship company liable.

The skins were marked to "C. & K., 100 Front Street, from B. C. & Co." This is evidently a blind as there is no such firm at 100 Front St.

Possession of Deer.

The Fish Commissioners and Game Wardens are seriously handicapped in their efforts to stop the illegal killing of deer by a fatal omission in the game law. Possession of male deer or deer hides from which the evidence of sex has not been removed is not against the law.

Hon. H. F. Emeric, President of the Fish and Game Commissioners, was riding down Geary street on Tuesday of this week, when he noticed the legs of a deer sticking out from under a load of goods in an express wagon. He had overlooked the fact that possession was not evidence and immediately stopped the expressman and made him go with him to a telephone. He then telephoned the Attorney-General's office, and after waiting for nearly half an hour was informed that there was no way of holding the deer.

The deer was a large buck that was shipped from Oregon to Mr. McCoppin as a present, and as it was not offered for sale and the evidence of sex was not removed it could not be touched.

Mr. Emeric's chagrin may be imagined.

Six Bore Guns.

The case of George M. Cathey, of Los Banos, arrested last week by Deputy Fish Commissioner McFarland for using a six-bore gun for duck shooting, was tried before Justice Cochran a jury of ten men at Los Banos on Saturday last. The trial resulted in the jury disagreeing. Seven were for conviction and three for acquittal. The defendant's attorney made a vigorous effort to have the big gun turned over to the defendant, but without success.

The case was very exciting and the District Attorney, Mr. Ostrander, conducted the prosecution very ably. He gave the "hull hunters" to understand that he was not afraid of them, and that he would prosecute every violation of the game law.

The case will be set for re-trial in a few days.

Kennedy and Yeager, two men who use No. 4 and No. 6 guns, sent word to McFarland that they would use their guns and would give him a merry chase if he attempted to interfere with them.

Those who are so bitterly opposed to private preserves will find in the following clipping from Shooting and Fishing, some food for thought: The Fish, Forest and Game Commission of the State of New York met at Albany, Nov. 7, at which time they notified the county clerks that the commission was willing to appoint special protectors for guarding club preserves or preserves of individuals. It was stated that such appointments must be upon the recommendation of county boards of supervisors while in session, and not by the circulation of petitions among supervisors. This is an important decision, as it gives to the guardians of club preserves, as well as private grounds, the protection of State officers.

The Northwestern sportsmen claim that when the ducks were there the weather was too good for duck shooting and when the weather got cold and blustering the ducks all went south. We sympathize with our northern friends but perhaps it was just as well for the ducks and the chances are we may have a few more next year unless the six-bore guns kill them all off. The present season is unquestionably the best that we have had here for years.

Fred Bakhorn, charged with having shot a wild duck on McDades' ranch, near Stockton, was tried at that city recently. The jury stood nine for acquittal and three for conviction. The case hinged upon the question as to whether the land was fenced or not. The jury sent men to look for the fence but after a whole day's search failed to find the fence. The District Attorney will move for a dismissal when the case comes up again.

The E. C. powder championship will be decided by each man shooting at 400 targets, 100 at unknown angles, 100 expert rules, 100 reserved order and 50 pairs. This should certainly bring out the best man.

During October the Bangor and Aroostook railroad carried out of the Maine woods 669 deer, 53 moose and 37 caribou, a large increase over last year's shipments during the same length of time.

The Fish Commissioners have given notice that the Folsom fish ladder must be finished on January 1st, or every man that is liable will be arrested.

J. H. Locke, of Portland, Me., is credited with killing a buck weighing 360 pounds at West Branch.

The Mott live bird trap is said to be three yards faster than any other live bird trap on the market.

THE KENNEL.

The $500 Rule.

Although the majority of the local dog fanciers and as far as we know the majority of those in the country at large favor the proposed amendment abolishing the $500 rule. There are still a few that bitterly oppose it and we would like to see the desire unanimous.

Article V. of the regulations governing clubs holding shows under A. K. C. rules reads as follows:

"No show can be held under American Kennel Club rules at which the prize money is less than $500."

We all know what a farce this rule has made Los Angeles and Oakland play, viz., offering money in classes where it was well known it could not be won. No club except San Francisco can offer $500 in any manner where there is the least possible chance for it to be won and not lose money on the show. It is a question if the Pacifics can do so. A more successful show was never held in California than the last one of the P. K. C., yet they lost money.

Why was this rule ever made? Mr. Vredenburg answered this question at the special meeting of the P. K. C. a few days ago, but we do not think that he answered it fully.

The rule was passed to equalize shows. It certainly had no bearing upon Boston, New York or Philadelphia, as they already gave many times that sum. But if Rochester, Albany, Lynn or some other minor show gave $400 or $600 and Worcester, Bridgeport or some other town gave only $200, the shows giving the most got all the entries and the others lost money and heart at the same time. The result was undoubtedly of some slight advantage in the East, but out here it is a positive detriment. As far as the doggy interests are concerned this country is very new. New shows are needed to stimulate the interest. At the time this rule was passed dog shows were very much overdone in the East, and undoubtedly it was the idea of many who voted for the rule that if a few of the minor shows were frozen out of existence it would be a benefit to those that were able to offer that much money.

There is not the slightest danger of the show business being overdone on this coast. Our spread-eagle orator's statements that Redlands, San Bernardino and Riverside would all hold shows but for this rule, is all "buncumb." There are not fanciers enough in the three towns put together to make a good sized club and good dogs outside of setters and pointers are few and far between.

There is just the remotest possibility that San Diego might organize a club, though we doubt it. Los Angeles would be greatly benefitted by the amendment as it could then offer what money it could afford, in specials and general prizes, and make the show pay expenses if not a profit. Sacramento or Stockton might hold one show a year between them; more than that would not pay. Directly it would not benefit the Pacifics but it indirectly would. The less money the others give the more dogs San Francisco will get. Every show makes new converts, however small affair it may be, and San Francisco will remain the New York of this coast for many years, in other words a dog will be of comparatively small value that has not won at San Francisco and in order to qualify for a championship the dog must come to this city even under the proposed amendment.

Seattle and Portland cannot hold successful shows under the present rule. Under the amendment shows under A. K. C. rules should become regular yearly features.

The more shows that California holds the better for all. When new men become interested they immediately purchase dogs. This makes a demand for the product of local kennels, and when the local kennels begin to realize a dollar or two they will constantly send East and even to England for new blood. These new dogs will be shown against the old ones at San Francisco and other shows, and all are benefited.

The only argument against the amendment that we have heard that has any weight at all is to the effect that these smaller towns cannot afford to employ competent judges.

Unquestionably such men as the man that judged (?) the last Oakland show do more harm than good to kennel interests but if a circuit be formed this can be avoided, and the time must come when local men will be employed.

Small shows as a rule produce small classes, and there are many local men that we believe would give just as good satisfaction in many classes and are just as competent to judge certain classes as the majority of those who judge at Eastern shows.

K. E. Hopf, for many years president of the St. Bernard Club of America, the owner of old Ch. Ohio and Gemma, lives in Idaho and could be secured for mastiffs, St. Bernards, Great Dimes and Newfoundlands. We doubt if his superior lives in America.

There is doubtless no better judge of fox-terriers in America than Robert Armstrong, of Napa, the breeder of Mortimer's Suffolk Toby, the old owner of Carlisle Tack and many others. He could be secured for wire and smooth-haired fox-terriers, and, in fact, for all the terrier classes.

J. B. Martin or H. W. Fores would unquestionably give better satisfaction as judges than the majority of the men that have had the fox-terrier classes in years past.

J. R. Dickson or John Grace would undoubtedly bring out a larger entry of greyhounds than any Eastern man could get, and no one will question the ability of either of these gentlemen to judge this class.

The forhound, pointer and setter classes and others can be equally as well provided for. No one will question the ability of several local men in these classes, and so on through the list.

Coast judges must be educated as Eastern judges have been, and the sooner a start is made the better.

We believe that the proposed amendment is to the best interests of the kennel interests of this Coast. A benefit to all of the established clubs, including the Pacific, and a stimulus to contemplated organizations on which we say the more the better.

Recently while out giving my pointer and two setters a run, one of the setters pointed a single bird, the other two dogs backing heartfully. We were within fifteen feet of the bird, when suddenly a hawk descended and picked up the quail and flew on a tree with it. I clapped my hands and he dropped it, and when I picked it up I found that in that short space of time he had pecked the top of the quail's head out, killing it instantly.—C. G. Steelman, Millville, N. J.

Canadian Kennel Club.

An executive meeting of the Canadian Kennel Club was held at Toronto, November 8th. Members present: Messrs. H. Bedlington, H. B. Donovan, Geo. B. Sweetnam and R. W. Boyle. The following business was transacted:

Boyle-Treilcock.—Mr. R. W. Boyle laid a charge against Mr. A. Treilcock, Toronto, of detaining a cocker dog removed from his premises. On motion, it was decided to receive charge and communicate with Mr. Treilcock.

Constitution and By-Laws.—The President and Mr. Sweetnam were appointed a committee to submit revised draft at next meeting.

Incorporation.—Mr. Sweetnam reported progress.

Cropping of Dogs Ears.—It was decided to take a vote by mail of the club members on this question.

Fred Kirby Suspended.—Moved by Mr. Boyle, seconded by Mr. Sweetnam, that in the matter of the Industrial Exhibition Association versus Fred Kirby, that owing to the non-payment of entrance fees, he be suspended for one year from this date. Carried.

Mutual Recognition of Suspensions, etc.—This matter was laid over pending further negotiations with the A. K. C.

W. B. Palmer's name was ordered to be removed from the roll of membership, and Mr. A. Murdoch, Hamilton, on motion of Mr. Boyle, seconded by Mr. Sweetnam, was elected to fill the vacancy on the Executive Committee.

1895 Stud Book.—Moved by Mr. Sweetnam, seconded by Mr. Boyle, that it is in the interest of the club that the publication of the registrations for 1895, be left in abeyance for the present. Carried.

Resolved, That at a meeting of the Executive Council of the Canadian Kennel Club the Secretary be instructed to convey to Mrs. Alfred Tredde, the wife of their late respected member, a vote of sincere sympathy on her sad bereavement by the loss of her husband, whom we found on all occasions an enthusiastic and hearty support in all efforts to improve and elevate matters in the canine world. We can bear testimony that in all our intercourse we always found our respected member ever courteous and ready to assist in all matters that were to the best interests of lovers of dogs.—Turf, Field and Farm.

The Eastern Field Trials.

The Members Stake of the Eastern Field Trial Club was started on November 16. The judges were Messrs. Bell and Bradley. There were six starters. The entrance to the sweepstake was $10, divided into two prizes, 65 and 35 per cent.

First was won by W. B. Meare's white setter dog Joyful (Dion C.—Natalie).

Second was divided between the Eldridge Kennels' b w and t setter bitch Antonia (Antonio—Miss Nelly Y.) and Pierre Lorillard Jr.'s setter Antoinette (Antonio—Daisy Hunter).

The Derby had fourteen starters, the All-Age nineteen.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

The regular monthly meeting of the Pacific Kennel Club will be held on Wednesday evening next at the Occidental Hotel.

George Raper is said to have refused £530 for his two fox-terriers the wire-haired Go Bang and the smooth coat Claude Duval.

The National Beagle Club have just held another successful trial. It is singular that the beagle has such few fanciers in this section.

W. R. Murphy, of Los Angeles, has a St. Bernard bitch pup by Reglov—Lady Bute II, that weighs 103 pounds at 7 months. She has a good head and is straight of limb and very promising.

The Northwest Sportsman is doing its best to bring about a dog show at Portland. There are quite a number of excellent dogs in and about Portland, and a show of at least 150 dogs should be possible.

Otto Shraft's rough coated St. Bernard bitch puppy Mabel, by California Bernardo—Alpinula promises to be among the puppy class winners at the next show. At six months old she is very well proportioned, with good bone, very fair head, with nice markings, shadings and color.

H. McCracken has presented to Dr. W. E. Adams the pointer bitch Nellie Blithe, by Upton of Blithe, out of Juno H. (formerly Little Nell). She was bred to Prof. W. R. Hervey's Carmel (Beppo III—Ch. Sally Brass II.) on November 25th. This union should produce excellent puppies.

The entries to the Pacific Coast Field Trial Clubs All Age Stake close on December 1st. There is promise of a fair entry. Birds are said to be abundant. As usual the secretary is apparently asleep. The judges are not selected yet and as far as the secretary is concerned the local papers are uninformed as to whether the club will even hold a trial. The entries close on December 1st, and not a paper has been notified of the same.

The entries to the great Interstate Coursing Meeting will close on Friday, December 6 at 8 p. m., with J. R. Dickson, secretary, at Pythian Hall, 909 Market street. This meeting is in the usual good hands and promises to bring out no less than sixty entries. The officers are: President Dominick Shannon, San Francisco; vice president, J. B. Baker, Merced; J. H. Rosetter, Alameda; W. C. Peyton, Santa Cruz; T. Cooney and H. M. N. Spring, San Jose; Fred Neary, Sacramento; treasurer, John Perigo, San Francisco. Field officers, John Grace, judge; Jas. Wren, slipper; J. R. Dickson, slip steward; Jos. Reed, flag steward. Nominations must be accompanied by the $10 entrance fee. First prize will be $400, second $200, and third and fourth $50 each. All dogs winning three courses will be given $20 each.

Hoof-Beats.

TYRANTS ran one two in the sixth race Tuesday.

W. KERRICK has a bay filly by Tenny—Mattie Stanley that has shown a great turn of speed.

BOB ISOM left Kentucky Thursday for California. He has been signed to ride the Spreckels horses.

LITTLE PEARL (formerly Pearl) and Tortoni (formerly Eva S. II. gelding) are recent corrections in nomenclature.

JOCKEY STANFORD, who was severely injured by Dick O'Malley falling on him a short time since, is on the fair way to recovery, and should be out soon.

J. JOHNSON, the clever steeplechase rider, who rode J. O. C. in his many wins, had his wrist broken when thrown by Burmah in the steeplechase Wednesday.

THE stewards of the California Jockey Club Wednesday reinstated W. Clancy and Finn, the steeplechase riders, who have been on the suspended list for some time.

SOOLADAIN, clearly the best horse in the race, was virtually left at the post in the first event, and was only beaten out a neck by Monarch, with the best jockey up.

PRESIDENT T. H. WILLIAMS stated Wednesday that racing would be resumed at Bay District on December 26th. After that the two tracks will race alternately for two weeks.

HINRICHS had a mount in the third race Wednesday, the first since his unsatisfactory ride on Caliente a couple of weeks ago. This saves the Dutchman a bar at the new track.

THERE is considerable talk of a series of race meetings to be given on the speed track, Golden Gate Park, this winter. It is hoped it will be put in first-class condition for these events.

AT the post in the stake race race Masoero did a good deal of buck jumping and in a false break bumped Miss Maxim so hard as to dislodge both riders. Neither the animals nor boys was hurt.

H. L. JONES had a big winning day Tuesday, coming out about $400 ahead. He laid against Mt. Roy straight and place and Toano to win, and took all the McFarlane money offered.

J. E. McDONALD may send Rubicon to the stud shortly to take the place of Hayden Edwards at Applegate, McMeekin's farm, Lexington, Ky. He is undecided, however, and Rubicon may be seen on the turf for another year.

THE winnings on the turf of the horses owned by the Prince of Wales amounted to £7,870 during the past season. This is better than the Prince has ever done at racing before. His betting gains also were large.

JERRY CHORN made a great record Tuesday. His ride on Arctic, when he bored his way through between Montalvo and the rail was a risky chance, but he got through and won when there was no other way of accomplishing it.

THE Flushing Jockey Club (Peter DeLacy) case is still undecided in the New York courts. The Jockey Club is weaving a strong case against DeLacy and seems to have proven that the Flushing race was one made by DeLacy for his own purpose.

ST. AGNES is running out in a paddock and is putting on flesh. Her yearling brother, St. Nicholas, who brought the top price of the season, $10,500, is in W. Donohue's string. He is going on in the right way, and is an exceedingly promising sort.

ONLY eleven books cut in Tuesday. Two dropped out and Riley Grannan put on one. The quiet-mannered young man who loses or wins thousands without showing as much emotion as a $10-play will cause in others was the center of attraction.

EARL COCHRAN rode a good second on Montalvo, who would have been a winner if he could have kept Arctic out, and landed the Lissak Stakes in good time Tuesday. Both horses belong to his father, John Cochran, who sent them to the post in fine fettle.

THE leading hotel west of Chicago is The Palace, and every morning the grill and billiard rooms are thronged with horsemen gathered from all parts of the United States. The management never omits an opportunity to make everybody satisfied, and all the most prominent people who come to California stop there.

DUKE & WISHARD have experienced another stroke of hard luck. Helen Nichols, just before a recent race, struck a stone, which accounted for her poor showing, and cut one of her hoofs and leg so badly that her owners do not expect to race her again for a year. Helen Nichols was well backed by her owners to win the race.

Go to John A. McKerron, 203 and 205 Mason street, if you want to get the very finest of saddles, bridles, blankets, boots and other race horse paraphernalia, besides a full line of veterinary medicines, liniments, etc. His stock is the best on this coast and warranted to be perfect. Call and see him if you are in need of anything.

THE judges did not like the looks of Toano's defeat, and called for the bookmaker's sheets, as well as for an explanation from Hennessy. Nothing suspicious was discovered, and Hennessy stated that he could not get the horse under way at the start. He raced him out for all there was in him when he did get him under way.

THE Arizona stable lost the promising filly Mollie Bradford by pleurisy on Monday. She was a bay filly, by Bradford, dam Mollie B. B. Within a very short period of time this stable has lost by death, besides the filly mentioned, Ross and Charlie T., and Volt and Mr. Jingle are both on the retired list, having broken down.

ALL OVER made up a lot of ground in the fifth race from the stretch, where his rider seemed to be pulling him up. When he was turned loose again he came like a cyclone. Willie Martin, who rode All Over, claimed that Bergen, on Joe Cotton, carried him out on the turn before striking the stretch. Morgan G. also made a great run-up in the same race, as he was standing still at flag-fall.

JOHN ROBBINS picked up a good horse when he got Oregon Eclipse.

JOCKEY LAMB, the well-known Eastern jockey, arrived here Thursday.

SOUVENIR programmes, printed on cream satin, were presented to the ladies Thursday.

THREE Flambeaus started in the fourth race Thursday, and they finished 1, 2, 3. Flambeaus must like the mud.

TOM SNIDER, presumably for J. Talbot Clifton, bid up Col. Weightman to $1505, at which price he was retained by his owner.

TWO BITS made his California debut Thursday. This jockey has been riding under that peculiar cognomen for a couple of seasons.

THE famous old gelding Freeland has gone on the stage, and appeared recently at the Schiller Theater in Chicago in the "Derby Winner."

JENNIE TREACY colt has been named Adolph Spreckels, and the Diana filly will hereafter be known as Huntress—a very appropriate name.

G. D. WILSON, Lexington, Ky., has purchased of Frank K. Wall the bay colt Bascomb B., 2, by Luke Blackburn, dam Ten Ban, by Ten Broeck, at the reported price of $1,000.

WE have received a copy of the weekly edition of Daily Racing Form. It is legibly printed in comprehensive manner, and with complete index and valuable foot notes is an ideal for m book.

COL. BURNS informs us that of twenty yearlings his stable has in training at San Jose, sixteen have gone three-eighths in less than 37 seconds, some below 36, and two have done the trick in 35½ seconds.

HARRY MORSE, the veteran detective who has so well managed to keep the rough element down in the past few years on many race tracks, has again been enlisted by the Pacific Coast Jockey Club to look after the welfare of its patrons.

THE stables of G. Bennett & Co., Pat Dunne and Pat Corrigan have arrived at Montgomery Park, Memphis, where they will winter. Others are expected there, among them the stables of Capt. S. S. Brown, T. Griffin, Cliff Porter and the Charter Oak Stable.

HARRY GRIFFIN, the highest-priced jockey in the world, arrived in the city Thursday morning and visited the track in time to see some of the races. He will ride for Burns & Waterhouse this winter. Young Hewitt, the Elemen Stable's light-weight jockey, accompanies him, and will profit by a winter's experience in riding here.

THE largest winning horses in the East this year are: Requital, $58,32; Handspring $40,830; Bright Phoebus, $20,700; Applegate, $29,070; Hazlett, $15,965; Crescendo, $11,043; Florette IV, $10,255; Rey El Santa Anita, $7,530; Rey El Carreras, $8,195; Clifford, $8,460; Belmar, $7,435; Lucania, $6,985; and Lazzarone, $6,430.

To decide a bet, please state what horse holds the world's running record for one and an eighth miles? Answer.—It is acknowledged that the time test in America is the best in the world and the record for one and an eighth miles made by Tristan, a son of imp. Glenelg at Morris Park, June 2d, 1891, is the best in America. It was 1:51½.

THIRTY carloads of race horses arrived at New Orleans on Tuesday, November 12, which contained 160 head of horses. The stakes for the meeting are the American Breeding Handicap, one mile; Dry Monople Handicap, one mile and seventy yards; Traction Handicap, one mile and one-sixteenth, and the Christmas Handicap, one mile and a furlong.

JOCKEY CHARLIE THORPE has been engaged for next season by W. H. Landeman at a salary of $4,000. He will receive in addition $100 for each stake he wins, $25 for other winning mounts and $10 for losing mounts. After the Lexington Meeting Thorne will remain at his home in Iowa until after the holidays, when he will go to New Orleans.

IN the published list of yearlings of Messrs. J. R. & F. P. Keene, located at Sheepshead Bay, there appears a bay filly by Duke of Montrose, dam Lady Reel. This must be a wrong pedigree. Lady Reel in 1894 had a dead foal by Strathmore, and Madam Reel had a bay filly by Strathmore—Madam Reel which must be the filly that the Messrs. Keene have.

THE Fleischman horses will go into winter quarters at Oakley. They will remain there until about the first of March, when they will be shipped to the Brooklyn track. The colors of Cincinnati's representative stable will not be seen on any of the Western tracks next season. Mr. Fleischmann will race his horses in the East exclusively. He is done with Western racing forever.

F. J. COCHRAN, the well-known scientific horseshoer, returned from the East with Monroe Salishury last week. Mr. Cochran stands at the top of his profession, he having shod, among hundreds of other famous ones, the following: Sunol, Palo Alto, Arion, W. Wood, Stamboul, Bell Bird, McKinney, Adbell, Alix, Azote, Frank Agan, Directly, Ella T., Ryland T., Altao and Lockhart.

MR. A. B. SPRECKELS started seven horses Thursday. The first pair were coupled in the betting, but did not show. The next one, Pat Murphy, was very dangerous almost to the wire. Of the next pair, Foremost showed the way for awhile and Gallant finished third. The last couple took first and third money. The stable certainly showed very good performances in their first race in many mouths.

ED. SOTA, an exercise lad, while riding the erratic and stumbling filly Lady Splendor, met with a serious accident Friday. While riding her down Seventh Avenue she thought she saw a hurdle and fell on her knees with fright throwing the youth over her head. He landed on his face, and when Col. Dan Burns and Trainer Rollins picked him up it was found that his chin was split and his nose and face badly lacerated. He was taken to the French Hospital and the surgeons were kept busy stitching up the wounds for some time. The game little fellow never whimpered but stood the ordeal like a stoic. He will be able to leave the hospital about next Thursday if blood poisoning does not set in.

What Will Portland Do in 1896?

It is a well-known fact that part of the horsemen who attended our meeting here this spring were not paid in full. These men have been very patient about this matter, knowing that the weather had a great deal to do with the failure of the association in meeting their obligations. Now that the racing season of 1895 is over, they begin to cast about for another year, and are willing to meet the association on most any kind of terms to effect a settlement. The racing put up here was of a high order, and is spoken of throughout as one of the best racing meetings of the season, and the citizens of this city should not let the few dollars that it will take to settle up this matter kill one of the best racing towns on the Pacific Coast. We truly hope some action will be taken at an early date to settle up these claims, so Portland will be on the circuit for 1896.—North Pacific Rural Press.

The Palace Hotel.

Everyone who comes to this city understands that the leading hotel is The Palace. Its fame is world-wide, for since the day of its opening, the greatest attention has been paid to the welfare of its guests. Horsemen and their friends who contemplate visiting San Francisco should not forget that this hotel is the only one where all the famous horsemen sojourn, and in the grill room every day and evening will be found an assemblage of turf representatives who are always pleased to greet their friends. The grill room is the finest west of Chicago and its cuisine is not equaled in the United States. The prices are very reasonable, in fact it is often remarked by the patrons that they cannot see how such an excellent menu can be served for the money.

SIR EXCESS was a profitable investment for J. W. Rogers. He purchased him for $7,000, and the colt credited his owner with $30,000 in winnings and was sold to Richard Croker for considerably more than the $7,000 he cost. As Sir Excess is a sound, good constituted horse, he is likely to be a profitable purchase for his new owner, and it will not be surprising should he win some good races in England, as the long open stretches will suit a horse of his conformation and style of going much better than racing around a ring. C. Morton, who trains for Richard Croker in England, is reckoned an A1 man. Rey del Carreras and Sir Excess are both likely to be heard from as being the medium of bringing off a big coup.

F. J. LEARY, Trainer Park Farm, Cranston, R. I., writes: I have given your Absorbine a thorough trial and think it a good thing to keep in training stables.

Jno. Matthews, Tuxedo Park, N. Y., writes: The effect on puffy hock is very satisfactory. The great advantage of the Absorbine is that the animal can be kept at work.

THE pedigree of imp. Lolokulani, bred in the Hawaiian Islands, is given as Shenandoah, dam Lady Norfolk. This mare has not been registered in the American Stud Book, and her breeding is therefore not identified in this country.

ANNUAL MEETING P. C. T. H. B. A.

The annual meeting of the PACIFIC COAST TROTTER HORSE BREEDERS' ASSOCIATION will be held Monday Evening, December 2, 1895 at 8 o'clock, at the rooms of the Association, 313 Bush street.

Business of importance will be presented.
F. W. KELLEY, P. C. T. H. B. A. Secretary.
E. P. HEALD, Secretary.

"LITTLE is known by the world how the now great sire, Altamont, 2:26½, was handled during his racing career," said a well-known Pacific Slope horseman recently to a reporter. "Most every admirer of a trotter can call to mind some horse that passed through a sea of vicissitudes while on the turf, and at the same time ponder in his mind how that particular horse performed half so well as he did, and what he might have accomplished had he 'half a chance' I have in mind several, but above all looms Altamont. He was raced during his early days without the least regard to preparation or form. He was a horse that always had his speed, and it made not a particle of difference whether he received a single workout or the least preparation prior to a race—he was raced just the same. In fact, Altamont, during his life, was never in half condition to go a race, but still he'd race and beat his competitors, too. How he stood his ill treatment has been a question in my mind for years, but he did stand it, and finally got a record of 2:26½. No matter when or who came to the stable of Altamont and hinted a race, he got it right off, whether it was down the straight road or on 'regular course'—everything went, and Altamont would lend the money, no matter how small or how large. The early history of Blue Bell 75 is strewn with stories of neglect, but when it comes to the genuine article Altamont outshadows the Indiana horse and any other that can be named. Altamont, it cannot be said, had greatness thrust upon him, for everything that he has achieved was accomplished under the most adverse environments. Still, he has to his credit Chehalis, 2:07½; Doc Sperry, 2:09; Ella T., 2:09; Pathmont, 2:09½, and Altamont, 2:09½, besides twenty-six other 2:30 performers. What he would have accomplished had the smile of fortune been his is left only to speculation."

The trotting mare Orange Girl (2:20), by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, dam Dolly Mills, by Seely's American Star, is now the dam of three in the list, viz: Arcturus (2:12½), by Artillery (2:21½), Orangelander (2:16½), by Greenglander (2:12), and Ozoma (2:29½), by Earl (2:23½). Artillery (2:21½), sire of Arcturus (2:12½), is brother in blood to Orange Girl (2:20), being by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, out of a daughter of Seely's American Star.

The great brood mare Beautiful Bells (2:29½) gets some very close and stout thoroughbred crosses through her sire, The Moor, whose dam, Belle of Wahash, was a thoroughbred daughter of Lieut. Bassenger. The second dam of Clay Pilot, sire of The Moor, was by the thoroughbred Grey Eagle, out of a daughter of thoroughbred Bertrand.

At J. Malcolm Forbes' farm there are two two-year-olds, twelve yearlings and six weanlings by Arion.

Shooting Pictures.

Of Interest to the Sporting Fraternity.

Messrs. Chas. Scribner & Sons beg to announce the publication of Mr. A. B. Frost's renowned shooting pictures.

Mr. Frost has long been known to all enthusiasts as the one artist able to portray hunting scenes with the spirit and feeling of the true sportsman; his own great love for shooting, and his familiarity with nature as the hunter knows and sees her, shows itself most strongly in every line of his work.

For many years the artist has been making sketches and studies with the idea of preparing a series of representative SHOOTING PICTURES, which will be recognized as accurate and real in every detail. These eight water colors have been reproduced in fac-simile with the utmost care, and the publishers believe are the most perfect specimens of color reproduction of their kind ever executed. Among the subjects treated are the following:

Rail Shooting, Bay Snipe, Ruffed Grouse, Summer Woodcock, English Snipe, Ducks from a Blind, Quail Shooting, Quail—A Dead Stand.

Each plate is mounted on heavy cardboard, 19x26 inches, so that it may be framed at once if desired. Mr. Charles D. Laurier, who writes the accompanying text, gives an increased interest to the series of pictures, and writes as only the real student of bird life and the woods can. His pages are illustrated by pen-and-ink drawings by Mr. Frost.

"Gold Dust" Smokeless Shot Gun Powder.

THE BEST SHOT GUN POWDER MADE.

Its claims for superiority are as follows:—

- FIRST It is not affected by heat, cold, moisture or age, and will not detonate.
- SECOND It will not cause headache.
- THIRD It is under all conditions the safest powder in use, as it contains no nitro-glycerine or gun cotton.
- FOURTH It has a light recoil and great velocity.
- FIFTH It is the quickest and has the greatest killing power at any distance.
- SIXTH It gives the best pattern at any and all distances.
- SEVENTH Its action is the most uniform in all respects.
- EIGHTH It can be used in cheap paper, or brass shells with any primer.
- NINTH It is the cleanest powder in use, and if the gun is not cleaned for weeks after using, a dry cloth is all that is required for that purpose, when it will be noticed that there is no corrosive action, but, on the contrary, the residue has preserved the metal. The residue does not accumulate with long continued shooting, there being no more after fifty shots than after the first. (After shooting other powders, the gun barrels should be wiped out and cleaned before using "GOLD DUST.")
- TENTH It is the cheapest powder to use, as every package sold contains full weight (16 oz. to the lb.); and each pound contains more than double the number of loads to the same bulk of any other powder (with the exception of one brand, which sportsmen generally hesitate to use, considering it dangerous).

THIS POWDER IS MANUFACTURED BY THE

DUPONT SMOKELESS SPORTING POWDER

Now Ready.

AN AMERICAN NITRO POWDER OF HIGH MERIT.

The Claims made for Dupont Smokeless are briefly as follows:

- First—It may be loaded the same as black powder, using the usual Dixon measure.
- Second—It gives best pattern and best penetration of any nitro powder at this time before the public.
- Third—It is cleaner in the gun than any nitro powder in use.
- Fourth—It is what its name would indicate, smokeless.
- Fifth—Recoil, while noticeable, is far less than that incident to the use of any other powder.
- Sixth—Its shooting qualities of the best; hard, quick, well-suited to trap and wing shooting.
- Seventh—This powder is not affected by extremes of heat, cold or moisture, which is not the case with many other nitro powders.

Prices and instructions to be used in loading, free on application.

Training
The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm. Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

The Horse Still On Deck.

The success of the great horse show in New York City is in triumphant refutation of the idea that the horse is becoming a "hack number," that he has lost his usefulness, or his place in the esteem of man, his master. The horse show, it will be understood, is not a horse race; it is an exhibition of horses of all classes, conditions and varieties; a "show" of the horse, not a purse winner, but merely as a horse, and yet from a limited area of our great country, thirteen hundred horses, each remarkable for something that should distinguish a horse, as beauty, size, speed, or breeding, are brought together for the admiration of a great crowd of discriminating and appreciative people.

This testimonial, as it may be called, to the horse, shows how baseless is the notion that because common or inferior horses have been cheap of late in some sections of the country, and because machines propelled by steam and electricity now do in the world some of the work once done literally by horse power, that the horse has lost his original place in creation and is henceforth only to be slaughtered for his hide and flesh and bones. The New York exhibition, which could on short notice be duplicated at any other of the great cities of the country, is proof enough that the horse occupies the place he has always had as nearest and dearest to man of the whole four-footed creation, and most the object of his fostering care and solicitude, as is shown by the amount of money he has always invested in him, and lost and won on him.

Any great modern horse show like that which occurred in New York is a history of advancing civilization, of the progress of man on the earth and with him, of his horse. The thoroughbred horse is something that comes into fashion with the thoroughbred human creature. The savage stunts, starves, ill-treats and kills his horse; the civilized and enlightened man develops, trains, cherishes and makes a wonder of beauty, speed, courage and endurance of his horse. As man becomes a "new creature" the new horse is the result. Solomon the Wise was a horseman, but he never owned anything that could make the time or the distance of the nineteenth century horse, heir of all the horse centuries.

The horse, so far from being doomed to extinction, is to illustrate the "survival of the fittest." He may be released from the burdens he has borne in former ages, but he will be refined and elevated by that circumstance. His destiny is not the glue factory or the sausage mill or the tannery. The most magnificent of animals, whose beauty has been held by excellent judges of both to rank next to that of fairest woman, is not to be lost or deposed from man's honor and affection. The wild horse of the plain disappears but the civilized and enlightened horse waxes in numbers and value. The horse "fit to ride for a man's life" holds a place in the world's esteem with human heroes. As time advances there will be in the world more and more good and great horses, and the "golden age," which is certainly before and not behind us, will be signalized by the presence of a glorified race of men and women riding and driving perfect horses.—Kansas City Star.

It is announced that the noted high stepper Blazeaway, that was lately bought with his mate Golden Rod, by J. B. Hayes, of Boston, for $3,900, met with an accident after being led from the show ring in New York City, in consequence of which the sale has been declared off. The horse is dead.

John A. Goldsmith.

Everyone, and especially those in California, will be glad to hear that this prince among drivers has again recovered from a surgical operation in New York City, and is now on the high road to recovery. The better part of his life was devoted to our California trotters, and even though his native home Washingtonville, New York, claims him as one of its most estimable citizens he is beloved as much on this side of the Rockies as he is there. His marvelous skill in the sulky is the subject of praise, and as he never made any enemies but was always kind and considerate to all with whom his life work brought him in contact, the news that he was stricken low with a severe sickness three weeks ago caused a feeling of sorrow to spread everywhere among his old associates. Their expressed hope that he would soon be well again is realized, and it would not surprise us if he is seen in the sulky in 1896, repeating the victories he gained with the Volunteers, Electioneers, Dictators, Sultans, Wilkeses, Nutwoods and Sidneys. He intends to return to California in the near future, and were it not for this last illness he would be in attendance at the Horse Show this week. Knowing that it will be some time before he will be able to drive, and realizing the danger of being indiscreet, Mr. Goldsmith has offered all of his young trotters for sale, and they will be sold in New York this month, and whoever purchases them will be sure to get race winners, Talmage on the Race Horse.

BY PERMISSION RIDER AND DRIVER.

Following are some of the gems which appear in Rev. T. De Witt Talmage's recent sermon on the race horse:

There is a heresy abroad that the cultivation of a horse's fleetness is an iniquity instead of a commendable virtue.

There needs to be a redistribution of coronets among the brute creation. For ages the lion has been called the king of beasts. I knock off its coronet and put the crown upon the horse.

It is very evident that Job and David and Ezekiel and Jeremiah and John were fond of the horse. He comes into much of their imagery. A red horse—that meant war. A black horse—that meant famine. A pale horse—that meant death. A white horse—that meant victory.

I should not wonder if the horse, so hanged, and bruised, and beaten, and outraged on earth, should have some other place where his wrongs shall be righted. I do not assert it, but I say I should not be surprised if after all St. John's description of the horses in heaven turned out not altogether to be figurative, but somewhat literal.

It ought to be that if any man overdrives a horse, or feeds him when he is hot, or recklessly drives a nail into the quick of his hoof, or rowels him to see him prance, or puts a collar on a raw neck, or unnecessarily clutches his tongue with a twisted bit, or cuts off his hair until he has no defense against insectile annoyance—that such a man as that himself ought to be made to pull and let his horse ride!

There is a delusion abroad in the world that a thing must be necessarily good and Christian if it is slow and dull and plodding. There are very few good people who seem to imagine it is humbly pious to drive a spavined, galled, glandered, spring halted, blind, staggered jade. There is not so much virtue in a Rosinante as in a Bucephalus. We want swifter horses, and swifter men, and swifter enterprises, and the church of God needs to get off its jog trot.

There is no more virtue in driving slow than in driving fast, any more than a freight train going ten miles the hour is better than an express train going fifty.

In boyhood we rode three miles every Sabbath morning to the country church. We were drawn by two fine horses. My father drove. He knew them, and they knew him. They were friends. Sometimes they loved to go rapidly, and he did not interfere with their happiness. He had all of us in the wagon with him. He drove to the country church. The fact is that for eighty-two years he drove in the same direction. The roan span that I speak of was long ago unhitched, and the driver put up his whip in the wagon house never to take it down, but in those good old times I learned something that I never forgot—that a man may admire a horse, and love a horse, and be proud of a horse, and not always be willing to take the dust of the preceding vehicle and yet be a Christian.

THE trotting stallion Waterford, record 2:22½, owned by Chas. H. Bowers, of Carson, was poisoned during the Carson meeting and died October 5th. Waterford was sired by Ah-hott-ford, 2:19½, dam Softly, by Speculation. Waterford trotted for several years through California, and proved himself a reliable and game trotter. He also has several in the list.

LIGHTNING (2:11) will undoubtedly be bred to Stamboul (2:07½). The produce should be chain lightning.

WALTER S. HOBART'S PEACOCK AND CADET.

W. S. Hobart and His Horses.

While it is a pleasure to note the presence of a progressive young man in any community, it is an honor to have one that has remarkable good taste, liberal ideas and a spirit thoroughly imbued with the idea "whatever is worth doing is worth doing well." Such a one wins success and wins it in every walk in life, whether his tastes be turned toward science, art, the world of business, athletics, or the most entrancing of all studies, "the horse." Such a person is the subject of this sketch—Walter S. Hobart.

WALTER S. HOBART'S CARDINAL.

When the Horse Show of 1894 was in progress there were a few entries made by this young gentleman, and many wondered if he would have any prize winners in 1895. His horses were of the kind that elicited the highest praise, and those who watched their performances were disappointed at not seeing him there.

It did not take long for Mr. Hobart, after his arrival, to make additions to his little band of equine beauties, and after he had taken possession of his farm near San Mateo he made many improvements and brought many choice horses there. Thoroughbreds that were famous as being the largest money winners of their age; trotters that held world's records; polo ponies that were never beaten at this, the most exciting of all games; hurdle jumpers that had delighted thousands in the horse shows in New York, four in hands, which for beauty, substance, style and action had never been equaled on this Coast, cobs, stylish and useful vaquero horses, besides a number of equipages, the like of which had never been seen on this Coast before.

To make the old farm which was formerly known as Steve Whipple's, a fitting place to receive this splendid collection, with the aid of his superintendent H. H. Hunn, he superintended the reconstruction of the buildings and the arrangement of the stalls, barns, etc. He employed scores of men and horses, and when the last touch of the painter's brush was left on the gates, the prettiest place that ever was made for the reception of equine beauties in California, if not in the United States, was finished.

The race track was covered with a layer of new clay, the infield made into a magnificent polo grounds, where the proprietor and his guests could enjoy this splendid sport. Wells were dug, and the new paddocks where the colts were turned out daily were supplied with water. Everything about the place was systematized and placed on a standard of excellence which must not be lowered.

When the Horse Show Association announced that it would hold another exhibition in this city, Mr. Hobart decided to enter his horses and do all he could to encourage others to follow his example, and they have done so. It is a pity that his splendid collection of thoroughbreds cannot be here, for it includes Ferrier, Bright Phœbus, Joe Rippley and at least two dozen of the finest looking "children of the winds" in this State, but they are all at Ingleside, and are heavily engaged in the principal stakes to be contested for over that course. In their stead Mr. Hobart sent forty-seven of his finest horses, hurdle jumpers, carriage horses, roadsters, ponies, together with a splendid collection of vehicles, harnesses, etc., that in every way surpass all others at this great show.

Among those present that are entered for competition in the various classes we noticed that sweet gaited, perfectly trained daughter of Guy Wilkes and Blanche, by Arthurton; Hazel Wilkes, 2:11½; She, 2:14½, by Abbottsford, and her sister Lydia Paine; the stylish prize winners, Cadet, Highlander, His Highness and Stamboulite; Peacock and Game Cock, the well-trained tandem horses, and a six thousand dollar team he just purchased in the East; the ponies, Ruth and Piggott; the carriage horses May Day, Skyrocket, Cardinal, Commander, Sue, Damrosch, Seidl, and others that for style, knee and hock action, good manners and perfect tractability are not equaled anywhere. The four roans, Rum, Gum, Rock and Rye do not act as if they know what they were named after, but like these articles they are just as good as gold and make one of the handsomest four in hands in the show. Besides, roan is an exceedingly fashionable color in the East. His little polo ponies, Laddie, Whoo Emma, McNahr, Hayseed and Pickle have been purchased in various parts of the United States and attest their new owner's good judgment. His jumping mare, Cinderella, is also an equine gem and when astride of her Mr. Hobart shows that, as a rider, he has few equals and no superiors.

"As a 'whip' the splendid reception accorded him at this show in handling single roadsters, teams, tandems, four in hands, six in hands and unicorn teams was merited, for without his presence in the ring in the classes in which he was to handle his horses the interest would be lessened.

To thoroughly enjoy this young man's society and appreciate his marked ability as a horseman, one must go with him where the thoroughbreds are and hear him speak of their strong and weak points, whether it be in their conformation or pedigree. He is a natural horseman, and these are a few of his purchases—Ali Baba, the horse that came from San Luis Obispo a few months ago, and is now being schooled over the jumps; Ferrier, the four-year old son of Falsetto and imported Cinderella, which he purchased last April from J. Reiser for $4,000, and which could not be purchased to-day for four times that sum. Ferrier has a record of 1:39 4-5, made at Sheephead Bay last June. Gorgon, Princess Flirt, Bright Phœbus, all of them typical race horses and under the supervision of H. H. Hunn, assisted by Geo. Miller, the successful rider and jockey, there will be many victories won ere the winter meetings close. The stable of yearlings contains some choice material, and every youngster is receiving the most careful preparation. Mr. Hobart is a sportsman for the love of the sport, and not for what he can get by wagering large sums of money on his chances. He is a shrewd business man, and is not one to take desperate chances on any games of chance. He loves a race horse and knows when a horse is a good one. He has been a liberal buyer at the horse sales recently, and every purchase he made shows that he understood the value of every youngster he bought.

The name under which he races these horses is the Del Monte Stable, his colors are, red cap and yellow jacket with red maltese cross, and in the painting of his stables, buildings and fences on his farm at San Mateo, the same colors predominate. He has introduced a feature in one portion of his grounds, the stables are arranged in a hollow square, a splendid wide shed is built from the roof, affording a shaded walk for the horses that are being cooled out after receiving their exercise on the track.

There has never been an exhibitor at any horse show in the United States that won more fine prizes than Mr. Hobart has at this Horse Show, and everyone says, even his competitors, he is deserving of them. He is always ready to show his horses, and if there are any defects about them he does not get angry if shown them. Several times during the judging when there were any visible defects and he was told of them he seemed grateful to be notified, even if it was in a show-ring, and congratulated the successful competitors. His magnanimity during this week of excitement was universally praised, and although urged to protest against a decision and did so when shown that there might be a doubt he kindly withdrew the protest and let the award stand. His action in this matter has brought him thousands of friends.

His home on Van Ness Avenue is a model of elegance and the same exquisite taste and observance of order so noticeable in his exhibit at the horse show, impresses one as the portals of his mansion are entered. As a host he is like his beloved father, one of the most genial and considerate, ever mindful of the comfort of his guests.

Too much credit cannot be given to this enterprising young gentleman. He has expended large sums of money, and is willing to do so provided he secures what he wants. Instead of devoting his wealth to making tours of the world, buying yachts, or sinking it in enterprises that may or may not be beneficial to him and which at best would only contribute to the support of a few, he patronizes the horse industry, purchases fine carriages, harnesses, improves his farm, and employs a large force of men throughout the year. In his manner he is very modest, polite and courteous to all. He lives an honorable life and is daily making a name for himself that will endure for all time to come. Would that we had more such citizens in this land.

ORMONDE, "THE HORSE OF THE CENTURY."

ORESTES, YEARLING SON OF ORMONDE.

W. O'B. Macdonough's Thoroughbreds.

The Native Sons of the Golden West are celebrated the world over for their enterprise and bold undertakings, but none of them received greater prominence than W. O'B. Macdonough when he forestalled all other breeders in the purchase of Ormonde, "the horse of the century." The story has been often told, and ever since this horse's arrival on this coast his magnificent qualities have been praised by everyone. Visitors who came here to view the many charms of landscape and enjoy the climate, considered their visit to this coast a failure if they did not see Ormonde and the grand galaxy of broodmares which this young gentleman selected from the finest farms in England and America to mate with this horse. They never regretted their visit and have filled the columns of the Eastern journals with articles in praise of the reception accorded them and the rare treat of looking at such stock.

The Macdonough Stock Farm, which consists of 450 acres, is about nine miles west of Menlo Park and adjoins the La Siesta Stock Farm. The land is not level, in fact it may be termed rolling, and since Mr. Macdonough purchased it he has expended large sums of money in making it a fitting home for the royally-bred ones.

He also owns another stock farm. It is in the Livermore valley and about three miles from Pleasanton. He has a number of fields of alfalfa and Australian rye grass planted in which his colts and fillies are pastured. Mr. Macdonough has had a large force of men working there, and to-day it is considered one of the best-appointed places in this great valley, where so many stock farms are situated. Ever since his purchase of Ormonde, and in fact for some time previous, Mr. Macdonough made the thoroughbred question a study, and we doubt if there is a young man in California to-day who is better versed in the performances of all the great horses of England, Australia and America. He is an authority on pedigrees, and an hour in his company when these subjects are presented is most profitably spent. He has been a liberal buyer at the race track, and does not hesitate to pay a good price for a horse if it suits him. He purchased the grand racehorse St. Carlo, by St. Blaise, out of Carina, by Kingfisher, second dam Carita, by The Ill-Used, and the Australian sire, Suwarrow, by Snowden, and patronized the yearling sales of thoroughbreds here and secured other good ones. He has also secured a number of broodmares in foal to the most fashionable stallions here, all these mares were known as producers of renowned racehorses.

It did not take long for him to get a good string of racehorses, and as he raced them under the charge of the late Henry Walsh at the Bay District Track, he thought he would like to send them East to race for the big stakes for which they were entered, and did so, but climatic conditions were unfavorable and the horses did not do as well as anticipated. Since their return he has had quite a good string at work and has met with very fair success with those that have been raced.

He has in Santa Bella a daughter of St. Cerf and Maiden Belle, one of the most consistent winners at the Bay District and Ingleside Track. At the latter place his horses are all stabled in the same building with Walter S. Hohart's.

Imp. Miss Brummel is another reliable two-year-old that won five successive races, a record seldom equalled by any youngster of her age. Imp. Miss Brummel is a chestnut filly by Beau Brummel, out of imp. Mirage, by Speculum, out of Enonyma, by Restitution, and is one of the stoutest bred ever imported.

Chartreuse is another good one; she is by imp. Cheviot (brother to Sir Modred) out of imp. Zara. This mare is one of the most consistent little winners that ever faced a starter, and as an individual is simply perfect.

Burmah, by Bersan, out of Fair Lady (dam of the great Bermuda), by Virgil, is a three-year-old gelding that before the season ends will make a good name for himself.

Big Chief, by Apache, out of Flora, only started once at Ingleside. He is a typical race horse and is like all the Apaches, a good one.

Rutledge, a chestnut gelding, won the first two-year-old race last spring. He had just recovered from a severe illness and is in taking his work well.

Veragua, by the great two-year-old Sinfax, out of Partisana, is another good one. Out of eleven starts he has won money and is one of the improving kind.

Imp. Agrippina is an English-bred youngster by Enterprise out of China Rose. He started only twice and won money once and was unplaced once. He is a very handsome, racy-built chestnut colt, and will make a sire when his days on the turf end, for he is bred in the purple.

Last, but not least, is the grandest colt at Ingleside, Orestes, the first Ormonde colt foaled in America. He will be two years old in January and a grander individual no other owner can boast of. He is bred right, too, being out of the good race mare Kissing Crust, by Sweethead, out of Caress, by Young Melbourne; second dam Carine, by Stockwell; third dam Mayonaise, by Teddington. Orestes is a race horse and A. White, the trainer for Mr. Macdonough, says he will make the best of them stretch their necks when he is right.

Mr. Macdonough has sold from time to time a number of colts and fillies, and many of them have been great money winners, and should he hold another sale there is no doubt the prices realized for them will be very gratifying.

Mr. Macdonough has had a series of misfortunes of late which everyone interested in the horse industry regrets, and while he knew that the sympathies of all were extended to him, he felt that there must be something radically wrong in the management of his horses at the farm, for he has not been as successful as everyone who had noted his purchases had predicted, and after giving the men on his farm the fairest of trials last Thursday, discharged them and installed others in their places. The superintendency so long vested in Mr. Mc Sweeney is now held by James McDonald, a very capable man, who for many years was head groom at Rancho del Paso, and as such was one whose place will be difficult to fill.

During the past month his losses at the lowest figure are computed to be $50,000, commencing with the death of Fair Lady (dam of Bermuda and Burmah), which he paid $12,500 for. At the autopsy it was revealed that she was with foal to Ormonde; then Lizzie Mack, one of the greatest winning daughters of Alarm, died. She was a magnificent individual, and great hopes were entertained for her produce by Ormonde. The next visitation of death was to the Ormonde-Getaway colt. This was one of the foals that had for a dam one of the best of the Palo Alto mares. Last week the hardest blow of all came when the grand broodmare Maiden Belle, the trial mare of the great Derby winners, Ayrshire and Donovan, passed away. She was the dam of Santa Bella, one of the stars of his string. She was heavy with foal to Ormonde, so this loss can hardly be estimated.

Such a series of losses was enough to make anyone investigate the cause, and now that he has made a change let us hope for the better, for in the future the success which he has strived so hard to gain will be his, as he is in every way deserving of it. Notwithstanding all his trials, which were enough to drive a man with less determination out of the business, Mr. Macdonough is hopeful, and his amiability never deserts him for a second. He is loyal to his friends, charitable to everyone, and is ever ready to extend a helping hand to those in need.

SANTA BELLA.

MISS BRUMMEL.

Adolph B. Spreckels.

"It is wonderful how he attends to so many different enterprises, and does it so well," was the remark of a visitor at the new Ingleside track on the opening day, when speaking of the president, Adolph B. Spreckels. His interests are manifold, but his well-balanced mind seems to thoroughly comprehend the requirements of each and every one of them and the work that would make an ordinary person nervous, seems to come to a successful termination as soon as it comes under his supervision.

is one secret of his success. He is an excellent judge of men and seems to read human nature as if it were an open book.

Besides all the business cares to which his active mind and time are devoted, Mr. Spreckels was elected by a handsome majority to the office of Supervisor of this city and county at the last election, and although in the minority he is one of the "working four" that have the "solid eight" to battle with on every measure proposed for the public good. He has kept his pledge to his constituents and is living up to the principles everyone said he would when he accepted the nomination. But, aside from the requirements of his large commercial business affairs and the duties of office, Mr. Spreckels is one of the best friends of "man's best and noblest friend," that there is in this city. He was first identified with trotters, and years ago stocked his farm at Aptos with some remarkably fine animals.

A little over two years ago, when the interest in running races were being revived at the Bay District track, Mr. Spreckels decided to engage in the business of breeding and developing thoroughbreds. He carefully inspected every horse offered him, and unless it suited individually he would not take it as a gift. After he had secured about ten very promising race horses he looked around for a suitable stock farm, and finally found a place which answered all his requirements; one of the prettiest-situated farms in California. It was owned by John McCord, the well known hay and grain merchant of this city, and is situated about one mile from the beautiful city of Napa, on the banks of a river of that name.

As soon as he secured this place he understood just what was needed to make it an ideal stock farm, and with the veteran, Cy Mulkey, for superintendent, he sent up plans for new buildings, a race track and improvements which, when finished, made it one of the best appointed places in California. On this farm he sent the Australian stallion Idaliun (brother to Sir Modred, Cheviot and July), imp. Crighton, another great Australian horse—one that Cy Mulkey always claims was the fastest horse he ever saw in his life, and this was saying a great deal. Both Crighton and Idaliun were mated to the majority of the mares on this farm, and the colts and fillies by them are grand-looking individuals.

The broodmares he placed on this farm ever since are hard to excel in any country, viz., Atossa, by Dunlop, out of Catherine Wheel; Yarranabee, by Hippocampus, out of Yatterina, one of New Zealand's greatest broodmares; Repose, by Apremont, out of Hammock, another famous matron; Elmira, by old Calabar, out of Dynamite, by Lord Lyon;

A. B. SPRECKELS' IDALIUM.

San Francisco in particular, and are investing their wealth in buildings that will ornament this city and give it a place among the cities of the Union where beautiful buildings are the boast of the people. We are proud of Mr. Spreckels and regret exceedingly that there are so few like him in this great city by the sea.

Mr. Spreckels made only a few entries in the Horse Show as nearly all his thoroughbreds that stood a chance of winning are in training at Ingleside. He has imp. Crighton, the fine Australian stallion, on exhibition, and Glitter with an Idaliun foal at her side. The latter was awarded first prize yesterday over the $25,000 Ormonde filly, and it is doubtful if there ever was a finer foal led into a show ring

A. B. SPRECKELS' STABLES AT HIS FARM IN NAPA.

The building of the Ingleside race course and the planning of the buildings, arrangement of the tracks, grading, etc., were his work and how well he understood what was needed is shown by the expressions of approval heard everywhere.

Mr. Spreckels has the rare faculty of gathering around him associates who are men of standing in the community, and whose hearty co-operation he knows he can rely upon. This Trampo (dam of Blizzard), by Kyrle Daly; Annie Race, by Cape Race; Patricia (sister to Misty Morn), by St. Paul (son of Alarm); Glitter, one of the best bred mares in the world, by imp. Stylites (son of Hermit), out of Gleam, by Hampton Court; Folly, by Wildidle (the famous four-miler), out of Fostress (dam of Sinfax); Frisa (dam of Alexis), by Flood, out of imp. Music, one of Palo Alto's best mares; Lady Cleveland, by King Alfonso, out of Eosio, by imp. Eclipse; Cattle Kate, by imp. Kingston, out of Lotta C, by imp. Glenelg; Sweet Peggy (dam of Bernardo), by Kyrle Daly, out of Abi's Daughter, by Norfall; Maria F., by Leinster, out of Flush (dam of Jim Brown), by Hiawatha; Glee, by imp. Cheviot, out of Glendew, another of Palo Alto's best mares; Griselda, by Bishop, out of imp. Goula; Florence B., by Jim Brown; Agnes M., by Glengarry, out of Ensur, by Esquiver; Tragic, by imp. Trade Wind, and a number of others equalled as well bred. He has bred some of these to such grand stallions as St. Saviour, Watercress, Goldfinch, Golden Garter and imp. Loyalist, the produce should be very valuable.

At the race track at Ingleside where his beautiful colors, red, white and blue, are so often seen going to the post, he has about twenty-four head of thoroughbreds in training. His head trainer is that capable young man, Thos. Boyle, assisted by Casey Winchell. The jockeys he has engaged for this season is the "Garrison of the Pacific," Jno. Piggott, and Bob Isom, two very capable knights of the pigskin.

Among the most notable members of his string are Cadmus, Candid, Crighton, Pat Murphy, Captain Skedance, Foremost, Gallant, Piquante, Pique, Ravelston, Lucille, Therese and Rummel, all of these are high-class race horses. As all that have made their appearance at Ingleside have won, no better endorsement of the ability of the trainer is necessary. It is a difficult matter to select a string of horses of such a diversity of breeding that average better than the above named.

Mr. Spreckels had all his horses well entered in the stakes to be decided at the new track, and everyone who has had the pleasure of being acquainted with him, as well as those who know him by reputation, hopes that success will always crown his efforts to win.

As a gentleman, he is kind, courteous and charitable to a fault. He never lets his charitable acts be known, but many a poor, struggling one has been lifted out of the slough of despondency by him and his rough way in life smoothed, not by words, but by kind deeds that have left an impression never to be obliterated. Mr. Spreckels is one of our most progressive citizens, and with the other members of his family, believes there is a great future for California, and for than this one. Mr. Spreckels regrets exceedingly that he did not enter more horses, but next year he will be well represented. He has some yearlings on his Napa farm that will take a "power o' beating" in any company, and these were the results of his ideas of proper breeding. He entered a few horses in the driving classes but his best ones are turned out for the winter, so he was forced to rely on those he had in his magnificent stable near the Golden Gate Park.

DR. C. MASOERO'S SANIARIUM ON THE OCEAN BEACH.

Dr. C. Masoero, V. S.

San Francisco can boast of as many fine veterinarians as any city in the Union, and among the profession none stands higher than the subject of this sketch, Dr. C. Masoero. No better evidence of his ability and popularity is necessary than the fact that from the very first day he arrived here his services have been in demand, and the many marvelous cures he has effected have given him a reputation which extends far beyond the confines of this State.

Dr. Masoero was born in Turin, Italy, in the year 1857, and after graduating with honor from the best college there entered the Turin Veterinary College and achieved the highest honors. After graduating, he became veterinary surgeon in the Italian Army, and had charge of the veterinary department connected with the Fifth Regiment Field Artillery. There were three companies in this regiment, and over 2,000 horses were in daily use. The young surgeon performed his work so well that his fame extended throughout the peninsula and even to the shores of the Pacific his marvelous work was known. He left Italy in 1881, and arrived in San Francisco on Thanksgiving Day. He did not understand one word of the English language, and as he walked up and down the streets he noticed the crowds of people walking, but no horses, it being a holiday, and he did not understand its import. He felt as though he had his long journey for naught, and wondered if he would ever have any practice. With a mind thoroughly imbued with the idea to succeed he determined to find some place suitable, and finding an opportunity to purchase the infirmary vacated by its former owner Dr. De Tavel, 809 and 811 Howard street, he secured it and at once began his labors in his new place. It was a hard battle in a field already overcrowded, but he was not afraid, and overcoming almost unsurmountable barriers he rapidly gained recognition. He was one of the founders of the State Veterinary Medical Association, and one of its best supporters. His skill as a veterinarian as well as a surgeon became recognized, and step by step he persevered until to day he stands at the very highest pinnacle in his profession.

His place on Howard street contains everything necessary for a first-class infirmary, operating table, drug store, box and single stalls, etc., and even with this, he found that his increasing business became cramped, so he did something that no one but a man of his will would have done, and that was to purchase two blocks of land on the shores of the Ocean Beach, close to the old Ocean House road. On this land he erected a long building and in it built sixty-four box-stalls 14x14 and 10 feet high for the horses, then he added ten rooms 22x16 for the attendants to sleep in. He has a portion of the building set aside for a club room, office, dining room and kitchen. Another portion is reserved as a hay, grain and feed room and infirmary. The place is fitted up in first-class style, and the water supply, which comes from a large well is practically unlimited, the water being so pure that people come long distances to drink it. In this building there are at present sixty-four thoroughbreds and trotters being treated for ailments. The horses are exercised on the beach, and for those with bad legs and feet, hocked tendons or sprains no better place in California can be found. Dr. Masoero has a telephone to the place, and besides his large practice on the leading stock farms in this State he devotes a great portion of his time to the care of his patients by the sea. It is a model institution and reflects great credit on its designer. Dr. Masoero has been appointed one of the veterinarians for the Horse Show, and a horse that passes his critical eye must be as sound as a new dollar.

Dr. E. J. Creely, V. S.

There is not a member of the veterinary profession better known than Dr. Creely. Born in San Francisco and educated in our schools, then learning the horse shoeing trade at which he was considered one of the best, then his departure for the East to study in Liantard's American Veterinary College, of which all his large circle of friends, who had taken an interest in his progress, predicted that he would return to California with the highest honors, and they were not disappointed. At the end of the regular course Dr. Creely graduated at the head of his class, which was the largest ever graduated from this famous college, he receiving the gold medal.

On his return to California he at once opened an infirmary on Golden Gate Avenue and created the greatest stir among the veterinary profession. His work as a surgeon at once obtained for him a great reputation. He had patients sent him that others had declared were incurable, and after sending them away cured, everyone was talking about him, and his name became familiar to every horseman in the land. Combined with his rare skill as a veterinary surgeon Dr. Creely has undoubted business ability for it was not long before he had acquired the finest fitted-up infirmary in this city, with operating table, Turkish and Russian medicated baths, slings, laboratory and all the appliances so needful to a first class infirmary. Dr. Creely has an immense practice and is retained by the leading trucking, carriage and transfer companies in this city.

Dr. Creely is one of the best judges of horses in California and his services have been sought by large numbers of buyers. Having a large circle of acquaintances and being a great favorite among them, his kindly nature is often imposed upon, but he is of a forgiving disposition and were his greatest enemy to call upon him to attend the wants of his horse he would respond as quickly as if he had never been treated discourteously. He is one of the hardest workers in the profession and when called upon to treat a subject, if necessary, he rolls up his sleeves and goes to work, knowing that every moment is of vital importance and delays are dangerous.

There is one peculiarity about Dr. Creely that stamps him as a man of original ideas and untiring efforts in his endeavors to prevent the spread of contagious diseases, and that is the readiness with which he informs the public of the prevalence of any diseases that are detrimental not only to horses, cattle and hogs affected, but also the general public. His warfare on glandered horses a few years ago will never be forgotten, and the startling exposures of cases he made did more to stamp out this dreaded disease in this State than all the books and treatises ever written. He visited South San Francisco and inspected some cattle affected with tuberculosis, and at once made the fact known. He groped through the depths of the Chinese quarter and exposed the nefarious practices of the hog hutchers, who did not hesitate to sell pork that they knew was diseased. In these, as well as other measures which we could cite, he has always shown himself to be aggressive whenever he saw there was any danger to the public from the distribution of diseased meats.

Lately Dr. Creely as inspector and adviser for the Board of Health, working in conjunction with J. P. Dockery in the warfare against impure milk dealers, has done splendid work, but he says: "We are only in the beginning of it; when we visit the various dairies that supply the public with milk you will hear of a large number of diseased cattle being destroyed. We shall catch many a dairyman unawares, and if there are any sick cows or other diseased stock in his possession a friendly bullet will put them out of misery and a warrant for the owner's arrest will be issued."

Dr. Creely is a jolly, good natured young gentleman who has the rare faculty of making many friends and keeping them. He is a young man whose prospects are very bright, and as the Horse Show Association quick to recognize merit, selected him to act in conjunction with Drs. Egan and Masoero, the selection meets with universal approval. His place of business at 510 Golden Gate Avenue is known as the New York Veterinary Hospital, and it is always filled with patients being treated.

The telephone number is East 287, and anyone needing his services can rely upon prompt attention. Dr. Creely also treats diseases of dogs as well as horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, and has achieved remarkable success in these branches of the profession.

Dr. Wm. F. Egan, V. S.

The position of veterinarian at the Horse Show is one that has many responsibilities attached to it, and the three that have been selected from the ranks of the profession are all well known to the people of this city. Dr. Wm. F. Egan, who is chairman of the Board, holds a diploma from the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, England; is a graduate of the new Veterinary College, Edinburgh, Scotland; Fellow of the Edinburgh Veterinary Medical Society; ex-President California State Veterinary Medical Association; ex-

Veterinary Surgeon Board of Health, city and county of San Francisco; Professor of Equine Medicine and Veterinary Surgeon of the veterinary department of the University of California; Live Stock Inspector to the New Zealand and Australian colonies at the port of San Francisco; Veterinary Surgeon San Francisco Fire Department and Veterinary Editor of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

When a young man just thirty-one years of age earns as many titles as the above, he must possess brains and energy, and he also possessed of a genial and amiable temperament. This, in brief, is what the nearest friends of Dr. Egan claim for him. Born on the Fourth of July, 1864, and after graduating with the highest honors from the leading veterinary college of England and Scotland, he arrived in here in 1887, unknown to every one, a perfect stranger in a strange land. By dint of perseverance and close application his merits as a veterinarian became known, and from the very first day he suspended his modest little sign in this city success has crowned his efforts. His devotion to his profession is commendable, and his desire to exert all his knowledge and experience to every case that comes beneath his notice has made him one of the most sought-after in his profession. As a worker he is tireless and his large practice attests his popularity. His veterinary infirmary, known as the San Francisco Veterinary Hospital, 1117 Golden Gate Avenue, contains all the latest and most approved appliances known to the profession. He has a number of single and box stalls, besides a large covered sand lot in the rear of the building where sick horses may be exercised regardless of the extremes of the climate. Dr. Egan is popular among his friends and patrons and his future is indeed a bright one.

Dr. G. W. STIMPSON, who for the past seven years has been practicing as a veterinarian in Oakland, has removed to this city and is located at 24 Golden Gate Ave., telephone number South 342. We have seen letters from Dr. Wm. Sheppard of Sheephead Bay, New York, who has known him for the past twelve years, recommending him most highly to any of his patrons who may be here for the winter. Dr. Stimpson has had a long experience with race horses and is in every way qualified to treat them most successfully.

"DAILY FORM," that came into existence on opening day at Ingleside, ended its short and uneventful career on Monday last. Its efforts were not appreciated by a cold and unsympathetic public, and its mission remains unfulfilled.

TURF AND TRACK

THE SULKY.

ADONIS is the fastest horse on the road at Providence.

JESSE D. CARR's fine brown stallion Bay Rum, 2:19½, by John Sevenoaks has been gelded.

THE bones of Ethan Allen are in the museum of the Kansas University at Lawrence, Kan.

THE total winnings of Msscot, 2:04, which covers a period of five years, is estimated at $25,000.

DEXTER THORNE, 2:19, is doing remarkably well on the half-mile track at the Aptos Stock Farm.

THE Oakland track is well filled with fast trotters and pacers; but the trainers and drivers are on the lookout for more good ones.

JUST five years ago last Tuesday (December 3d) Electioneer died at Palo Alto. If he lived he would have been twenty-seven years old.

At the Fasig sale in New York City last week A. S. Kempland, by Guy Wilkes, sold for $725, and Guyson, by Guy Wilkes, sold for $800.

THE Horse Show is a capital educator, and many breeders of light harness horses have learned lessons this week which, if heeded, will prove of inestimable value to them hereafter.

THERE will be a good string of trotters and pacers on the circuit next year from the Oakwood Park Stock Farm. Ben Chaboya is very sweet on several he turned out before starting on the circuit.

W. J. WHITE made an offer of $500 for the sister to Direct after she was sold at the Fasigsale last week. Mr. Harriman paid $375 for the Direct mare and after declining the offer priced her at $1,000.

WILLIAM SIMPSON, owner of Empire City Stud, intends giving a meeting over the mile track at Cuba, N. Y., next season with stakes and purses of $1,000 each. His son, H. B. Simpson, will be secretary.

HAROLD SIDNEY, H. W. Meek's good two-year-old Sidney colt, was thrown out of training last spring on account of a little splint. He was placed in a veterinarian's care and is now as sound as the day he was foaled.

There is talk of having a miletrack built at East Oakland on the filled-in land adjoining the estuary. This soil is similar to that on the Alameda speed track, and would make the fastest and safest track with little work in America.

BICYCLE (flippantly)—"Hi, old fellow, are you all out of breath just coming up that little hill?"

The Horse (serenely)—"Yes; but please observe that I don't have to lean against a fence every time I stop."

AN Eastern correspondent says the best argument he ever heard for the horse and against the bicycle, was furnished by an Irishman who said, when he saw a wheelman struggling up a hill: "Well, badal, when I ride I don't want to walk."

PALO ALTO is represented at the Horse Show this year. It would be a treat to see Advertiser, Adbell, Beautiful Bells, Columbine, and several other famous horses and mares there. In 1897 we shall expect to see a larger delegation from this farm.

THE get of Guy Wilkes for the four years ending 1895 won $114,593.50, six thousand dollars more than those by any other trotting sire. Baron Wilkes came second with $108,005.25; Onward, $107,780.66; Alcantara, $89,035.65; all by Geo. Wilkes.

W. FORD THOMAS of this city has a two-year-old filly by Aptos Wilkes, out of a sister to that good race mare, Nelly R., 2:27½, that is a model in every respect, and by her gait and excellent disposition gives promise of being a very fast and reliable mare.

ALTAO, 2:09½, is now in Lee Shaner's stable. Joe Cochran, the horse-shoer, put on a set of shoes on this horse that improved his gait so that Monroe Salisbury declared that he never saw such a radical change. The horse won considerable money after he had his trilbys attended to.

J. W. DALY, Mt. Kisco, N. Y., has secured from Hon. C. M. Reed the bay mare Martha Wilkes, 2:08, and she will probably be bred to Delmarch, 2:11½. In the trade Mr. Reed gets Mary Nelson and Ella Nelson, three and four-year-old sisters, by Nelson, 2:09, out of Electricity, by Electioneer.

JOHN A. GOLDSMITH did not disobey the physician's injunctions, and had to submit to another operation, as some of the Eastern papers stated. The old wound did not drain sufficient, and a new incision had to be made. He is getting along splendidly, and his ultimate recovery is only a matter of a few weeks.

ALTAMONT has never been bred to a mare by Electioneer, Guy Wilkes, A. W. Richmond, Sultan, St. Clair or Steinway. He was bred to but one Nutwood mare, the produce being a yearling which is very promising. He never sired a badly-marked colt or a chestnut, no matter what color the mares were that were bred to him.

THE New York Horse Show, according to a careful estimate, will clear for its stockholders this year over $100,000 net profits. The week's total attendance was about 95,000, and, after deducting expenses, the surplus to be divided among stockholders of the Association will probably be between $100,000 and $150,000.

THE dual Kentucky stallion Pancoast was the sire of the dam of Tommy Britton, 2:15½, the champion two-year-old trotter of the past season. Pancoast also figures very prominently in the pedigree of the champion two-year-old pacer of 1895, Ananias, 2:12, this youngster having been sired by Patron, a son of Pancoast.

W. S. HOBART is a "versatile horseman." He has the finest of trotters, thoroughbreds, Irish hunters, polo ponies, coaches, saddle ponies, heavy Percherons, and the most stylish of Spanish horses. His harnesses are of the very latest patterns and best manufacture, while his vehicles are unequalled in the United States.

ANDY McDOWELL is undecided regarding what he will do in 1896. He says he may get a string of four or five good horses and take them East, but if the circuit in California looks bright, he would sooner remain here.

THE Year Book gives Frank Agan as "dam not traced." Messrs. Ross & Dickerson, owners of Mikags, sire of Frank Agan, state that they have spent considerable time in hunting up the pedigree of Frank Agan, and have established the fact that his dam is Flora, and that she is by White Cloud and out of a mare by Telegraph.

JAY BEACH, the well known progressive breeder who has been identified with the light harness horse industry of Oregon for many years, has decided not to ship Altamont to Kentucky after all. The prospects for this wonderful sire making a season in California are exceedingly good. He is twenty years old and a remarkably sure foal getter.

JOHN MARINER, of Norfolk, Va., was attending the sale last week, and he informed the writer that the work on his new track was progressing and he intends to give three meetings there the coming season. E. S. Clayton, who handles Mr. Martin's horses, is at present jogging Miss Purdy, Leila C., by Jas. Madison, Alladora, by Steinway, Ben Ingrabam and a lot of green ones.

THE first horse to beat 2:20 was the pacer Pet, a roan gelding of unknown breeding, who took a mark of 2:18½ in 1852. This stood until Pocahontas paced a mile to wagon in 2:17½, and this was not beaten up to 1867, when Dexter won the championship at all gaits with a mile in 2:17½. The first trotter to beat 2:20 was Flora Temple in 1895, when she clipped a quarter of a second off that figure.

J. W. LASH, of Auburn, Neb., owner of the great three-year-old Pat L., has brought suit against the Dallas (Tex.) association for $20,000 damages, on account of the injury to the colt in the 2:11 trot at the Dallas meeting recently. It will be remembered that the judges alleged Lash was pulling the colt because he did not win the first heat, took him out of the sulky, and the man that replaced him went on and won the race, driving the colt as hard as he could go, with the result that he was knocked out with a strained tendon.

HINDA WILKES, who won Class 9 for broodmares, with foal, at the National Horse Show last week, died at Merivale Stock Farm, Commack, Long Island, on Wednesday, November 20th. She was eleven years old, by Guy Wilkes, out of Woodford Queen, by Almont, and was the dam of three in 2:20. She was the property of Mr. H. O. Havemeyer, who purchased her from Mr. A. B. Darling, and her sudden death is deplored. Had she lived she probably could have taken rank as one of the greatest speed producers ever seen in this country.

In the old days the trotters were seen frequently at Long Branch. The late D. D. Withers, however, had no love for harness racing and when he built and equipped Monmouth Park, the most magnificent race course in the world, the trotter was overlooked. Adverse legislation closed the gates of the celebrated New Jersey track, D. D. Withers died, and the magnificent property passed into other hands. At the present time steps are being taken to build a trotting track on the grounds and the light harness brigade will, no doubt, be seen there before the close of 1896.

L. A. RICHARDS brought a splendid-looking son of his grand Electioneer stallion, Elector, to the Horse Show. He is called "L. A.," and is out of a mare by Butterfield's St. Clair, second dam by Williamson's Belmont. He is one of the fastest "green" horses in California. Mr. Richards informed us that his son Eddy, the champion rifle shot, will not lose the use of his injured arm. The surgeons believe he will be able to use it as well as the fingers. Eddy was quite a horseman, and every one who had the pleasure of meeting him will be pleased to hear that he will not be disabled for life.

As outlined in these columns a few weeks ago there is need for a continuous road along the Ocean Beach from the Ocean House Road to the Cliff House. Part of the work has already been accomplished and at the last meeting of the Park Commissioners it was resolved to put a force of men and teams at work on this road. It will be first-class in every particular, will be macadamized and rolled and made equal to the finest road in the park. This work will be done by contract. The other work will be done by the men employed by the Commissioners. This boulevard will be a fine drive to Inglewood.

C. W. R. FORD, proprietor of the Edgemont Stock Farm near Los Angeles, has about sixty-five head of the finest looking young trotters, all royally bred, in the southern part of California. There is not a broodmare on the place that has not a record, and bred to the good stallion there, the produce should find a ready sale. Mr. Ford is an enthusiastic horseman, a most genial gentleman and one of the best "whips" in this State. He drives his well-trained four-in-hand in a manner which shows that he is thoroughly familiar with the way they should be handled, and to ride with him is indeed a pleasure. He has been an interested visitor at the Horse Show.

JUDGE CLEMENT, of this city, owns a son of Fordstan and a mare by John Nelson, which he calls Electioneer-Nelson. He had him in Susanville, Lassen County, and bred him to a few good mares and the produce is said to be wonderfully fast. Judge E. V. Spencer, of that place, has several remarkably good ones. Among them is a pacer that got a record of 2:29½ at Carson this year; she can pace quarters at 2:16 clip and may be seen on the circuit next year in this State. He has four others by the same sire he will have trained next spring. These are trotters, handsome, strongly-made and very courageous moving youngsters.

"You have noticed," said C. J. Hamlin in a recent interview, "what a large proportion of trotters are taking to pacing. The secret of it is that the trotting gait hurts them. It is the knee-up, spank action that tells on them—the continued shock on the same muscles, and they change to the pace for relief. The pace is a much easier gait, and is faster on the average, in my opinion, than the trot by two seconds to the mile. You know that I am not in favor of starting very young animals, and I believe the practice has ruined many of the most promising animals. It would be a good plan for you to make one of your tables show what became of the yearlings and two-year-old phenomena. I think you would find that nearly all of them were knocked out by the forcing process."

CHAS. DUFFEE of Los Angeles, has in McKinney and family a quintette of individuals of which he may well feel proud. Aside from his success as a driver, Mr. Duffee is one of the most careful of breeders, and has made a lifelong study of all the intricacies of the business, and the benefits to be derived from a thorough understanding of the value of conformation as well as bloodlines.

THE success of Cogent in the class for carriage horses at the recent National horse show is receiving wide-spread attention. Cogent was foaled in 1888, sired by Mambrino King, out of Coquette, a French coach mare, imported by Mr. Hsmlin in 1883. He was kept in the stud until 1894, when he was gelded and turned over to Harry Hamlin, who sold him at his 1895 Spring sale, with his full brother Rainbow, for $2,700. He was repurchased during the summer, and it is now Mr. Hamlin's intention to take him to France along with a number of trotters, early in January. It is to be regretted that Cogent was castrated, for he left a number of colts that possess his style and substance.

WHEN the trotting mare Quiz was exhibited at the Horse Show last week she attracted considerable attention as a recent addition to Col. Lawrence Kip's choice collection of roadsters. In a class for trotters with records of 2:30 or better Quiz won first prize, and got another ribbon in the class for single roadsters and road rig. It is now known that Col. Kip has sold this handsome young trotter to James Gordon Bennett, and that Howard Phillips who went to Nice last Spring with a small string for Mr. Bennett, will return shortly and take Quiz to Europe. Another mare by Nutwood, selected by J. W. Knox, will also be added to the Bennett stable of flyers. The price paid for Quiz has not been made public.

LAST Wednesday F. W. Covey arrived with the Palo Alto horse in New York, and in a letter from him, which we received too late for publication in our last issue, we learn that he never had charge of a shipment of horses that arrived in better condition. At Lincoln, Neb., everybody, it seemed, came down to the depot to see the horses as they were led off the cars for a few day's rest, and many words of praise were heard as the procession passed up the principal street, headed by Rio Alto. Mr. Covey saw Azote, 2:04½, and says: "He is not as badly off as represented. He is big and hearty, and with the exception of a badly swollen hind leg, that I have seen worse before his campaign of 1895, he looks all right. The little children of Lincoln are training him now, giving him exercise while riding him bareback. Alix, 2:03½, the queen, is also there, and looking well bodily. Directly, 2:07½, looks what he is, a champion."

"VERY late Monday evening May King arrived in this city, and was at once quartered in a big box stall at the Arcade stable on Washington street," says the Boston Globe of November 20th. "The news of his arrival spread rapidly, and all day yesterday George French was kept busy exhibiting him to an admiring throng of horsemen. He is a bay horse of medium size, with an intelligent head, a short barrel, well rounded, that denotes a world of strength, and a chest indicative of great heart and lung power. His limbs are well turned and clean, and he is as well mannered and gentle as a kitten. In his son Bingen he has transmitted the characteristics of his general appearance, so that those who saw the two-year-old at the breeders' meeting have a good idea of his general appearance. It was also a matter of comment that his temporary quarters were right in the midst of a lot of good ones. In adjoining stalls were F. W. Smith's noted pacer, Paul 2:07½, and his new mate, the chestnut pacer Chesterfield 2:11½, the great pole team, Jack and Judson, Dick Lawrence's Howell, the gray trotter Brunnhilde, a big green mare belonging to John Cheney, a 2:30 shot, and several others."

CAPT. G. W. WERK, the gentleman who has charge of the king of the Almont family, Altamont, in an interview says: "There's a little correction to be made regarding the pedigree of Playmail, full brother to Barney, 2:25½. He was by Mike 2:403, out of Kate McDouough, dam of Ella Lewis, 2:27, and she is the dam of Saladin, 2:05½. No one knows how Kate was bred. She was traced by Capt. Werk to Decatur, Iowa. She hadn't a particle of the Morgan conformation about her; she was 16 hands high, very bloodlike, and a deep, rich bay in color. Over one hip she had a black spot as large as a man's hand. This peculiar mark she transmitted to her produce, and on a great grand colt which Capt. Werk raised, the same black mark is noticeable. Mike was by Vermont 332, out of Peniger (not Perringer, as the Year Book has it) mare, by Beals' Horse, a horse sixteen hands high, a low-headed, short-bodied sire of unknown breeding. Vermont was by Independence, son of Black Hawk, out of a mare by Gifford Morgan. Playmail was the sire of the dam of Seymour Wilkes, 2:08. The horse Playmail was owned by J. W. Plymale of Jacksonville, Oregon, and was bred by James McDouough of Willow Springs, Jackson County. He was called Tamson, and was sold to some one in California. Capt. Werk does not know what the name of the purchaser was. No doubt, the name Playmail was as near Plymale as the new owner could remember."

It is a pity the breeders of trotters in California allowed the grandly-bred, purely-gaited trotting stallion Rio Alto to be sold in the East. He should have been kept in this State for many reasons. He was one of the greatest race horses that ever looked through a bridle. What a sire this young horse should make, just think of his breeding? Electioneer, Dame Winnie, General Benton, Elsie, Elaine and Green Mountain Maid. His sire Palo Alto, 2:08½, who died king of stallions; his dam Elsie, one of the greatest young broodmares of America, and dam of Palita, 2:16, the champion two-year-old filly of 1895. His grand dam Elaine, who held the world's record for three and four year-olds. His great grand dam, that queen of broodmares, Green Mountain Maid, to whom Rio Alto traces twice, once through his dam Elsie. This is royal breeding and is full of blood lines that have produced race horses and record breakers. The dam of the sire of Rio Alto now occupies a high place in the production of trotters, as Palo Alto, 2:08½; Paola, 2:18; Altivo, 2:18½; Big Jim, 2:23½, and Gertrude Russell, 2:23½, attest, and though Planet was her sire and Liz Mardis, by imp. Glencoe her dam, she can not be denied recognition, for year by year the blood of this thoroughbred mare will become so prominent that like Green Mountain Maid, Alma Mater, Beautiful Bells, Sontag Mohawk, Emeline and other great broodmares, the breeding interests of America will accord to her the place she has so justly earned, and she will be classified among the greatest of our country.

THE SADDLE.

JOE RIPLEY has been fired and will be put in training again.

BABE MURPHY has won her two starts here in star fields.

RILEY Grannan had some swell hets on Remus at 12 to 1 Friday.

LOWNIE CLAYTON has signed to ride for Col. W. P. Thompson.

RILEY GRANNAN stated to a friend Saturday that he was $20,000 loser.

BILLY McCLOSKEY could not get out of the ruck in his race Friday.

HENRY STULL, the celebrated artist, arrived from New York Sunday.

BABE MURPHY can give most anything at the track a race at five furlongs.

YEMEN seems to be very sensitive to track conditions. He did not like it Friday.

MR. MACDONOUGH played Miss Brummel to win the first race, which she did handily.

PLEASANTON stable's chestnut filly by Apache—Linda Vista has been named Primmie.

ALL OVER laid all over his field when he romped away from them and won by four lengths.

WORK will soon commence on the new club house at the track. It will be an architectural gem.

E. CORRIGAN's bay filly Olive was very popular in the last race and looked in the finest of condition.

WILLIE MARTIN's ride on Pepper yesterday was a very well-rated one and a creditable performance.

WEDNESDAY will be ladies' day at the new track. On that day all ladies will be admitted free of charge.

THREE California millionaires were represented in the events of the first day's programme at Ingleside.

FIFTEEN Eastern horses started Friday. Three won their races and five others were inside the money.

GOODWIN II., who had been troubled for some time with a splint, has been thrown out of work and punch-fired.

GOV. BUDD apparently enjoyed the races Friday. Wonder if he ever thinks of the racing he tried his best to knock out at the District Fairs?

THE new sheet published on the opening day of the race meeting was an encyclopedia of glaring errors and as such will long be remembered.

FAVOR and May Day, full brothers, were foaled one year apart. Each of them came on the first day of May, and they are pretty good May birds, too.

THE crowds on the hills overlooking the new track at Ingleside reminded one of the scenes so often noticed during the great long distance races years ago.

NOT only did Projector-Starter Hatch fail at Memphis with his winter meeting, but got into jail on an alleged charge of obtaining money under false pretenses.

THE Musket horse Artillery has been bought at a very low price in Australia and will be shipped to California about the 1st of January. He may be sent to Rancho del Paso.

SOME farmers in Nebraska were arrested Friday for making whiskey out of beets. Surely there must be a mistake for we always had an opinion it was just the reverse.

IT is reported that Chevalier was more seriously injured in his fall from Miss Ruth than at first supposed, and he has concluded to return to his home in New Orleans shortly.

THE Suburban winner Loantaka, by Sensation—Peggy Dawdle, has been leased by T. J. Carson, Lexington, Ky., and will do stud duty at the old Dixiana stud farm near there.

THE French buyers are after Blue Gum, by Nephew, a very promising young stallion owned by P. Donaghue. His owner wants $3,000 and the French gentlemen have offered $2,300.

IT was given out before the new track opened that the entry cards for races on the following day would be for sale at the track in the afternoon, but as yet such an arrangement has not been put into effect.

THE Pacific Coast Jockey Club has announced that whenever a race is declared off for want of entries or other cause, a black flag will be hoisted at the track, notifying owners that an extra race will be made up.

THE best of friends of Mr. A. B. Spreckels are pleased to note he has discarded the crutch he found so necessary for a long while, and hope he will soon be able to dispense with the cane he now leans on.

MR. HOODLESS, who bought Stonenell from M. F. Dwyer, got no bargain. The horse has turned out to be a thorough rogue, and his trainer gave him up rather than lose his reputation. He is now being schooled for a jumper.

A NEW YORK dispatch of Monday states that Phil Dwyer, the turfman, has returned from Hot Springs. Dwyer will leave for San Francisco after Christmas and make arrangements to have some of his horses entered here in the races.

RETRIBUTION, the dam of Requit, is in foal to imp. Juvenal. Her weanling colt by His Highness is such a fine specimen that the master of Brookdale must regret that he did not again patronize the evenly balanced and blood-like Holmdel horse.

BASSO ran the best race of the field in the first race Saturday. After dropping back last he began to come on and turned into the stretch fifth, twelve lengths behind the leader. From there he disposed of McLight and Magnet, and almost headed the tired Miss Maxim, who had been beaten three lengths by Montana.

THERE seems to be an epidemic of drawing guns raging in the blue grass metropolis among the alleged "borsemen" who are attending the race meeting at that point. It is such things as this that give the horse business a bad name among the general public, and it might be well for the police to absent themselves and allow a few of the guns to go off.

VOCALIC, a beautifully bred horse, died at the Iroquois stud November 25th. Leslie Bruce, of New York, owned him. Vocalic was a good race horse in 1883-4-5, and was fourteen years old, by Virgil—Acoustic. The best of his get were Vortex, Vocalite, Bellevue and Sumatra.

EVERYONE in California who has any interest in racing is anxious to see the pool room ordinance pass the Board of Supervisors just as it is. There should be no little jokers added to it in favor of foreign books. If foreign books are allowed in California then good-bye to its racing interests.

THE new running track which Col. R. C. Pate, of St. Louis established in the City of Mexico last winter, was reopened by Pate, November 17, under what the wires state were the most favorable auspices. Several members of the Mexican cabinet were present, and the best people of the Mexican capital were induced to attend.

A SPECIAL to the Louisville Commercial from Lexington, Ky., on Saturday, says: Last night A. G. McCafferty, of St. Louis, and Henry Simons, of Louisville, the well-known horsemen, quarreled over a settlement, when Simons broke a chair over McCafferty's head. The latter leveled his pistol and fired, but his arm was thrown up by bystanders and the shot missed.

THE Eastern horse Certainty, belonging to Jockey Garrison, started a couple of times last recently and in the second essay, a welter-weight race, Garrison himself had the mount, the impost being 142 pounds. He was cheered as he cantered past the stand to the post, but there were no cheers afterward, for Certainty was beaten off. The latter is a very ordinary plater.

MORNINGTON CANNON, the leading English jockey, will not be obliged to patronize a cheap lodging house this winter. He had this season three calls on his services, the Kingsclere stables first, the Cannon stables next and Mr. McCalmont third. The latter paid young Cannon $7,500 for his third call, and his salary from the Kingsclere stables could not have been short of $10,000.

BYRON McCLELLAND has had his fill of judging horses in horse shows. He is as good a judge of a horse as lives, and gave his honest judgment as to the best of the limited number of thoroughbred stallions entering the New York ring, and yet he has not escaped the flood of adverse criticism with which the metropolitan "boss" editors have turned loose on the judges in general, some of which is merited, and more of which is not.

A PROMINENT Western horseman says: "I leased a horse last year, and I have now erased the word 'lease' from my vocabulary. The worst thing on earth for a man with a good horse to do is to lease his racing qualities. Better sell him cheap if you can not race him yourself. All you get at the end of the year is a choice collection of splints, bowed tendons and knots attached to what looks like a horse, and a bundle of receipted bills."

IN thoroughbred circles there is very little doing in the vicinity of New York. A number of trainers have already settled at Morris Park with their strings of yearlings, and among them is J. W. Knox, the well-known trotting horseman, who bought a number of good youngsters in Kentucky recently, and will try his luck with the bang-tails. Mr. Knox says he has by no means lost his love for the trotter, but that his heart is large enough for both.

THE famous racehorse, Dr. Rice, a winner of the Brooklyn Handicap of 1894, will probably never race again. It was found Monday that he had a bad leg, which must be fired. When the veterinary surgeon went to work at him the stallion struggled against being thrown, and in some way wrenched his back and spine. After the firing had been accomplished the horse caught cold. He is unable to rise to his feet, and now he is strung up in a sling at his stable on Dayton avenue, St. Paul, Minn.

THE horse has at last been recognized officially as an article of diet. The corporation counsel of Chicago has prepared an ordinance at the request of the local board of health, and dealers in horse meat will be required to pay an annual fee of $1,000. Violation of the proposed law is punishable by fine of not less than $50 or more than $200 for each offense. The dealer must tell his customers that he is selling them horse meat, and inspectors must examine each horse before slaughter and label the carcass.

HORSES for the exhibition belonging to the Kern County Land Co. are now on private view at the stable on Buchanan Street, corner of Birch avenue. These horses are splendid carriage horses, well broke, single and double, and a view of them will be cheerfully accorded by Mr. Thomas. They are splendid individuals and a visit to the above mentioned stables will well repay one for his time. All of this magnificent collection will be sold at auction on December 9th by Killip & Co., the official auctioneer of the Horse Show Association. Intending purchasers will do well to look them over before the sale.

MORE satisfactory transportation facilities have been assured the Pacific Coast Jockey Club by local railroad officials. Mr. A. B. Spreckels telegraphed the situation to Mr. C. P. Huntington at New York, on Saturday, and the latter wired the officials here to grant all reasonable requests. Hereafter two trains by the steam line will leave Third and Townsend streets at 12:40 and 1:15 p. m. These trains, consisting of fifteen cars each, will make the trip in twenty-five minutes and will remain at the track and leave immediately after the races on their return trip. On special days sections of these trains will be run, as the needs of the crowd require. On the electric line, a twenty-minute service will be maintained during the forenoon, after which a 2½-minute service will be transferred at Twenty-ninth street, but the return trip will be made by through cars. As soon as the new portion of the roadbed has been balasted fast time can be made over this line, and but thirty five minutes will be required to make the trip.

J. J. HYLAND says that of the two-year-olds he ever handled he never felt more sanguine of one developing into a great three-year-old than he does of Requit. He thinks no route will be too far for him. Requit is a clean-cut colt, without any lumber; has good, open feet, with clean, flat bone, and as he is a good constituted colt, with a fine disposition, he is exceedingly likely to develop into one of the greatest horses this country has ever seen.

THE London Sportsman has the following seasonable remarks: "It is always a remarkable thing to me how very slow owners of stallions are to look after their own interests, for with few exceptions they neglect to make their announcements for next season, at this the most important period when breeders are busy making up their minds. The matter is one that does not concern me nor yet The Sportsman directly, for stallion advertisements are paid for by the season and no saving is made by sending them in late. That being so, why is it that owners are so supine as not to have them ready drafted and sent in early in December? It is not as though they were not all coming in sooner or later, only so many of them do it later, and it is so regrettable. I write this entirely for their own benefit, inasmuch as it is manifest that the less show they are content to take for their money the greater is the profit to the paper."

UP to November 1, Hanover's get had won this season $89,920. Of this amount $38,520 was won by twenty-three of his twenty-five three-year-olds that started, and the balance by sixteen of his twenty-two two-year-olds. From this it will be seen that in all forty-seven colts and fillies, the eldest three years old, by Hanover, faced the flag in 1895, and of these only eight were not winners of money. The largest winner of the lot is the two-year-old Handspring, with over $40,000 to his credit, and then comes the three-year-olds, Halma, with nearly $13,000; Buck Massie, with over $7,000, and Urania, with more than $3,000. Others of his get that more than paid a profit are Hessie, Handspan, Miss Young, The Commoner, Handsome and All Over, among the three year-olds, and fully as many among the two-year-olds. The most consistent performer of the lot was Buck Massie, who won money in practically all of his starts. The average amount won by Hanover's forty-seven representatives is within a very little of $1,875—truly a wonderful showing.

THE pool rooms should be closed. They are crowded daily by all sorts and conditions of humanity. They do not jeopardize the morals of men who bet on the races, but they are a means put in the way of hundreds to fritter away their week's earnings, vainly wooing Dame Fortune, while the money so spent deprives many families of necessities. Men of means with an inclination to gamble will find a way to do so, but working men would not have the ready opportunity to yield to temptation if the pool rooms were closed. A clerk or salesman may now find ample opportunities of betting a small sum on every race run at the local tracks, and the aggregate of the sums so steadily pouring into the coffers of the pool-room operators would amount to thousands of dollars every week. If only fifty per cent of this were turned into proper channels, what an amount of good it might accomplish? That the profits of these rooms are immense is evident by the smiling complacency of the managers, and where profits are large, losses commensurate fall on some one else, and the ones who suffer most are the innocent ones at home. By removing from the midst of working men the opportunity to gamble their salaries, even before they are earned, will not correct their instincts, but it will put a curb on their inclinations. The pool rooms should, by all means, be closed. Our city fathers should not license such a business.

RACING in the Eastern States has for several years been going backward in popular favor. But this year, thanks to the untiring efforts of the new Jockey Club, writes Caspar Whitney in Harper's Weekly, there has been a distinct gain for the better, while the assurance of a newer and higher development of the turf will bring into racing men of large fortune, to whom the winning of stakes and purses are the mere incidents of the sport. The absence of hook-makers, of the Paris Mutuel machines, and of all appliances for professional gambling has driven out of the business of racing many of the small horse owners and 90 per cent of the professional gamblers. In their stead are such men as J. D. Donner, with an immense breeding farm at Ramapo, New Jersey; William P. Thompson, master of the Brookdale stud; Edward Kelly, son of the banker, and a successful breeder of race horses; Francis Beard, who has invested this year $250,000 in racing stock; Oliver Perry Belmont, J. E. Kittson, David Hennen Morris, Oliver H. Payne, James R. Keene, Foxhall Keene, William H. Forbes, Marcus Daly, J. J. Ruppert, J. E. Seagrims, Charles H. Smith, John Hunter, A. J. Cassat, Senator Wetmore, General Benjamin F. Tracy, Hon. John Sanford, Milton Young, Charles Reed, Gideon Lee Knapp, Jamer Galway and J. E. Madden, a majority of whom are not only owners but breeders of race horses. These gentlemen are upon the turf purely in the interests of clean sport.

AMERICANS have a world-wide reputation as inventors and ingenious mechanics, but it was left to a plain every-day horseman to top the record in the way of a clever contrivance. Helen Nichols trotted on a stone during a race last Tuesday and so severely injured one of her feet that in the opinion of all the trainers who saw the damage the mare would never race again, or if she was ever able to do so, it would be at a very remote period. They must all have been considerably startled at the object lesson they received Saturday. Enoch Wishard, who trains for the stable, evidently has paid considerable attention to the subject, as in four days after the accident to Helen Nichols' foot he won a race with her in fast time, using the most unique contrivance that has ever yet been seen upon any race track in America. The following is as near as possible the description of the enlarged form of a "scalping boot" which she wore. Take any ordinary scalping hoot and on the lower edge sew a wedge shaped flap, which tapers off into a long, narrow tongue. The flap is drawn down under and over the frog, the tongue being passed up the front of the foot and then through a buckle on the front of the hoot just above the coronet. In order to secure the whole and do away with any possibility of it slipping a long galloping handgaw was wound round the shin and met the top of the leather boot. No doubt under the leather sole there was a wad of cotton batting or tow, saturated with ether or cocaine. The public swore that they had been done and the report of the injury was a fake. Such was not the case, and it was only Wishard's clever brain that pulled off the coup for the stable.—N. Y. Mercury.

Part of the Horse Show.

The exhibition, which has occupied the Mechanics' Pavilion during the greater portion of this week—from Tuesday morning to the close, is one of two in the United States. New York made the first movement in that direction, and has continued with increasing success until that which closed lately presented such an overwhelming wave of prosperity as to place it far beyond its predecessors in the lead, in point of attendance and receipts, of all others.

It appears that San Francisco is the only other city on the continent which will sustain an exposition modeled after European standards. Chicago made the attempt, failed, went out of the field. So far as I am acquainted, other trials have not been made, therefore it seems to be an essential that a portion of the inhabitants of the cities in which the show is held should be cosmopolitan in their habits, but above all, a locality where wealth prevails and an intense desire to secure recognition as members of "high society."

A pleasing fad in many respects, these exhibitions. Much to commend, a great deal of pleasure obtainable by those who can appreciate the various spectacles presented—though I am pained to write, much to regret. In the first place I should prefer to see a good many of the foreign quips and fancies banished; an Americanized show in place of a mongrel mixture of caricatures and masterpieces; an attempt to blend the ridiculous and praiseworthy harmoniously; an effort to ape the senseless foibles of foreign aristocrats and introduce them here to the exclusion of far superior methods, and in this subordination of the good to the ridiculous lead astray weak-minded people.

It may be that in giving so much consideration to the anglo-maniacal part of the show is an error, that in lieu of argument ridicule should be the weapon, and I am ready to admit that there is great deal to provoke laughter, that kind of chagrin which reading the famous ride of John Gilpin will evoke. "Straws show which way the wind blows" and through the brutal practice of docking horses is very trifling in comparison with weightier affairs in which England dominates, influencing a weak and obstinate president to a course which has brought this country to the verge of bankruptcy, when under "American systems" it would be eminently prosperous, even trifles which have the same trend are worthy of attention. England has won the Horse Show battle. Victorious in New York and San Francisco the other big cities will be gained when the fever spreads. The part that cannot be anglicized must be tabooed. The introduction of the very short dock, hair trimmed so as appear like bristles, the first move. The cruelty to the victim, the ugliness, the vulgarity (and even a casual spectator will notice that it is highly indecent when both sexes are in the ring) did not bar its adoption. Those who uphold the practice virtually claim that if Nature had done the "right thing" that liberal mother would have replaced the fine flowing appendage, "fit for a push's standard," with an excrescence after the model shown, or an improvement on that a knob, on which a growth of bristles similar, though shorter, to those of an enraged bear, an approach to "quills on freful porcupine." "The decrees of fashion" Nonsense! the fiat of fools, which cannot hold sway when "leaders of sets" are people of common intelligence and not under the sway of idiotic duds.

I have heard the present system of docking likened to that which prevailed in the long ago past. Similar in regard to the torture inflicted, and horses have screamed in agony under the knife when nicking and docking were in favor. But the "sixteen inch dock" and "flag-tail" was a thing of beauty when compared with the hideousness of model hackneys, and that was forced out of the field when the press entered upon a crusade of deliverance of animals which could not defend themselves. It strikes me that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals could take a hand in suppressing the evil and that with better grounds than many of their interventions. That society could secure the passage of laws which would be an effectual stoppage of the barbarous custom. The general government forbid the importation of mutilated animals, the States punish with severe penalties similar atrocities within their bounds.

Cunning dealers at home have taken advantage of the craze; English breeders and handlers of horses are well aware that light quarters and narrow between the stifles do not show as conspicuously when the tail is out of the way, especially when also denuded of hair. From the specimens I have seen pictured of imported hackneys, had an embargo been laid against their importation, many worthless brutes would have been kept out.

There is still another objection I have to these horse shows, and which to omit presenting would be a dereliction of duty on my part. That is the manifest intention to vilify and asperse the breed of horses which is peculiarly American, which the genius of American breeders, trainers and artisans have brought to such perfection as to overcome all competition, excite the admiration of the whole world, always excepting those who bow, low to the ground, before the idol of button tail and spluttering action. The diatribes are issued under the authority of the managers. A few days ago I was presented with a neatly gotten up pamphlet which purported to be a reprint from the Overland Monthly. The pictures—artistic and pleasing—were glanced at when received, the reading matter perused when at home. The following paragraphs are copied though there are others objectionable.

"It will probably be some little time before the best stamp of horse for park and pleasure driving, namely, the hackney, is bred in California to any extent; for breeders are backward in following the good example set by Mr. John Parrott, who owns the imported four-year-old stallion, Green's Rufus. There seems every prospect of this horse doing well and thereby attracting attention to the breed, and if California does follow the fashion, it will be easier in a few years' time to get a desirable harness horse than it is at present, for it is only what might be called the chance shots among the trotting-bred horses that answer the requirements of carriage people, namely, stylish form and action, with substance to a proper extent. A success here and there in the prize ring with trotting-bred horses, where conformation and fine action, added to quality, have been the tests, has caused a good deal of discussion of late in the horse papers of the East, and an unreasonable degree of jealousy has been evidenced in the minds of those who have written as advocates of the trotting horse on every count. Few experienced horsemen are not admirers of the American trotting horse in his best form, but where his kind can take a prize for those attributes which count in the show ring once, the hackney will land the ribbon fifty times."

Pictures of Green's Rufus and a "half bred hackney colt" by him appear in the pamphlet, and if the original of the horse—the colt is an improvement—is like the "counterfeit presentment," it will take "fresh infusions" of other blood to secure offspring that will be "desirable harness horses." The picture is certainly unnatural, or rather the horse has been taught to pose in a strained position. The forefeet are somewhat extended from a natural position, the hind thrust so far back that one is resting on the toe. That was an old-time trick to give the appearance of greater length. Should a horse place himself in that shape without being taught the trick, a veterinarian's services would be required, or it might be that rectification would be beyond the skill of the R. C. V. S. At all events a stallion which had that peculiarity, without the interference of teachers, would not pass muster were the judges at all capable.

The slight attention I have given the reports of the N. Y. Horse Show does not warrant an authoritative statement, but my impression is that in place of one in fifty the ratio is quite different, it may be that the boot is on the other leg. That impression is sustained in an article which the N. Y. Tribune published a paragraph, of which is as follows:

"There were twelve classes of the park type, showing singly and in pairs, and in all of these classes, with perhaps one exception, trotting-bred high steppers carried off a great part of the honors. In nine of the contests they won the blue rosette, and out of the forty-five ribbons awarded they captured no less than twenty-seven, a good, clear majority over the representatives of all other breeds combined. This count includes only those trotters whose pedigrees are known."

I could copy page after page showing the animus of the hackney worshippers, and a far greater "unreasonable degree of jealousy" than that of the trotting-bred supporters.

One more quotation, however, will answer at this time Samuel Walter Taylor, Jr., editor of the Rider and Driver, of New York, was interviewed by a reporter from the Call, and his last paragraph is emphatic enough.

"We all know that trotting horses bred simply for speed—to try to get down to two minutes—bring low prices. If a breeder fail to get speed he has on his hands a lot of horses not fit for anything—long, ewe-necked, slab-sided eyesores. They should stop breeding for extreme speed, and then try to get horses with beauty of conformation, bone and substance."

If Mr. Taylor is sincere in his words—and I have no reasons to question his sincerity, he must either be woefully ignorant in regard to the subject, or has yet to visit breeding farms, where the primary object is to produce speed at the trot. Not far to San Mateo and Palo Alto, and if after the visit to these places the idea expressed to the reporter is still retained—well, I will do my best to get him a fitting testimonial.

The trotting horse folk were chary of entering at the last N. Y. Horse Show. Tails were chopped off and animals exhibited in classes designed for hackneys and coaches, but in roadster and trotting departments a paucity of entries prevailed. This coldness can only be attributed to the lack of appreciation of the American horse by those who are prominent in the management of the show, and a feeling that so long as foreign influences dominated they would keep aloof. That is a "touch of nature" which is felt everywhere, and the thoughts of intentional slight sufficient to awaken emotions of displeasure. It should be borne in mind, however, that managers of these institutions may be free of the foibles which are conspicuous in individuals, but, that in order to attract the multitude, it is necessary to "follow the fashion." Thus the New York Horse Show secured the endorsement of the big guns of society. The one-hundred-and-fifty as well as the four-hundred sanctioned the display, and then the dollars in a huge and continuous stream kept pouring in the contributions of "middle classes" who could only hope to mingle with the select on that or somewhat similar occasions.

San Francisco has to follow New York in the whole and in detail, to go further, in fact, secure instructors from thousands of miles away to teach all the points of good form "from the number of buttons on the leggins—maybe gaiters is the proper name of coachmen and footmen—to the curb chains of the leaders of the four-in-hand."

A huge mass of knowledge. A person must have a brain, encyclopedial in capacity, to hold it all. Plenty of big heads in California, ready and apt pupils, and as "our horses" have downed the best of the East, so it is reasonable to expect that in a very few years there will be teachers in place of pupils, and horses, with long tails, too, which will secure the ribbons at shows as they have the more solid returns from racecourse and trotting track.

Much more gratifying to me to appeal than to condemn, and that there is a great deal to commend in the San Francisco Horse Show is too palpable to be overlooked, and the preponderance of good features make amends, in a measure, for that which is responsible. There is a question that a large proportion of the visitors thoroughly enjoy the spectacle, and while the lessons are mixed no doubt of the teachings beneficial.

I have the utmost confidence that the good sense of the American people will lead to the correction of many of the evils, or, it will be better to state, the drawbacks to a more general appreciation of the benefits derived from the annual exhibitions.

The daily papers are doing something towards correction, and even though ridicule is quietly mixed with plaudits, that effective medicine in the treatment of diseased understanding is a potent remedy. The cure of fads and foibles which arguments cannot effect often give way when the caricaturist becomes the apostle of reform. From Hogarth to the latest artist employed by the daily press the corps of pencilers have done immense service, and when limners are reinforced by those who pen portraits with the representatives of pencil and brush there is an assurance of improvement.

At this time of writing I have visited the pavilion twice, the afternoon of the opening day, the evening of Wednesday. On both occasions there was much to admire, a great deal to please, and, I am glad to say, very little to offend.

The most attractive part of the show in the afternoon to me was the parade of trotting stallions, not that the others lacked in merit, though the only class of corresponding interest was thoroughbred stallions in which only two appeared. The parade of draft horses showed very many superior animals, a display which completely demonstrated that this part of horse breeding was not neglected in California. The ponies, too, came in for a full share of plaudits, the stallions were well worthy of high praise, and the hackneys, though adversely handicapped by the mutilation of their caudal appendages, had some meritorious points.

The show of trotting stallions was so good that it will appear somewhat invidious to institute comparison, and were attention given to all, even the salient points considered, a full page of the paper would be required and then only part of the story told. There were four classes represented in the parade from stallions, with four of their get, to those which were two years old and under three. In all twenty-one entries.

Guy Wilkes claims precedence both as to age—though his years, 15, are hardly sufficient to class him among old horses, and these are carried so bravely that there is little change in his appearance from the day he was so prominent on the tracks.

Then in point of numbers "in the list" he leads any living Californian stallion, 50 representatives, and many of them of such high excellence that two are inside of 2:10 with several others very close to that high-water mark. Hulda, one of the queens of the trotting fraternity, 2:08½, with such a good chance for improvement that it has been my firm opinion that had she escaped the accident which left her in Chicago, the "top-notch" would have been within her reach. Then there is Muta Wilkes, 2:11; Hazel Wilkes, 2:11½; Lela Wilkes, 2:11½; and Mary Best, 2:12½, for maids of honor to the trotting princess. The pacing division has Seymour Wilkes, 2:08; Rupee, 2:11; Alannah, 2:14, and Chris. Smith, 2:14½. In mentioning the notables of the Guy Wilkes family I will not do to omit the three-year-old Fred Kohl, 2:12½, and Fred Moody, the fast two-year-old, as they have been conspicuous among the great youngsters of the year.

McKinney, according to the best of my recollections, wears two championship diadems, surely one, as it does not take a great deal of research to discover that he is the only stallion with a record of 2:11½, who at eight years of age had a three-year-old son with a record of 2:13, not to mention when as second in a race at Sacramento he was "timed" in 2:11½.

The other championship hinges on the question; has any other stallion with a record of 2:11½ or better got a three-year-old with a record of 2:13, both trotting? Direct, 2:05½, I am sure has the same honor among the pacers, and his three-year-old son Directly, 2:07½.

Boodle, 2:12½, the game fighter to the bitter end has, so far as present appearances can be taken for a guide, a brilliant future before him. Combining the blood of Lady Thorne and Goldsmith Maid, and that of Jay Gould, his breeding

GOOD RACES AT INGLESIDE.

Sallie Cliquot and Oregon Eclipse Dump the Talent.

STRATHMEATH STILL A RACE HORSE.

Transportation Facilities are Very Poor—Horsemen Cannot Get Out to the Track in the Morning for Lack of Car Service.

SECOND DAY—FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 29TH.

In comparison with the crowd of yesterday, of course, the attendance looked very thin to-day, but when one came to look the crowd over there was seen to be a good many there. The weather was very pleasant, and if the opening day had been such, two to three thousand more would have been on hand. The track was muddy, yet in good condition, notwithstanding the heavy rains during the night. A couple of days like this one and it will be in perfect shape. Everything about the new track moves along with the precision and regularity of an old organization, and all the officials have quickly settled down to their duties. With some, it is but a matter of getting into harness again, while others are taking on, to them, new duties. Mr. Caldwell to-day did excellent flag work, sending the different fields away in best order and in quick time.

The transportation facilities will have to be improved very much to sustain the popular favor. The steam line consumes too much time, and the electric line is not yet in good condition. At the rate work is progressing, however, it should be in good order in another week. One cause of complaint is lack of switching facilities at the track terminal, causing a delay in getting away after the races, and another is the transferring system. Smaller cars are run over the farther end of the line. This no doubt due to the sharp curves in the extension, over which longer cars could not be sent. But it is very annoying, after a larger car has accumulated a load on its trip from town, to have the passengers packed in to a smaller one to complete their journey. To the uninitiated in the mysteries of railroading it would seem feasible to run a smaller car through from the ferry terminal to the track, and such an arrangement would be very much appreciated. Another point that is not at all appreciated by horsemen is that the cars are not run to the track in the morning, and several hundred who would like to see the horses work out are debarred that privilege.

The blue pencil was drawn through two names in the first race, which was at six furlongs, leaving ten starters. Sallie Cliquot ruled favorite, but with a lot of very good ones in, a large bundle of money went into the boxes on place odds. Belle Boyd set the pace from the start, but gave way to Sallie Cliquot on the far turn, and the latter showed the way into the stretch. Governor Budd was prominent throughout the journey. Cliquot did not get very far away from her field before Miss Brummel was sent after her and had no trouble in passing the wire a winner by a length. Sallie Cliquot was second three lengths in front of Governor Budd. Time, 1:18½. The winner was at 6 to 1 at post time.

Strathmeath, the Derby winner, was installed an odds-on favorite for the second race at a mile and seventy yards, over Jack Richelieu, Collins, E. H. Sherley and Monita. Richelieu was the pacemaker to the home turn, and it looked as though he was the only one to heat, but about there he backed up, and Collins came out in front. In the last hundred yards old Strathmeath loosened up and came on and challenged the leader, beating him out a head. Jack Richelieu third, was eight lengths behind Collins. Time, 1:51½.

The third race, to heat a mile, was declared off and an extra at three-quarters of a mile, was substituted. Oregon Eclipse was a 3 to 5 favorite, with Remus, who has a predilection for the mud, at the surprising odds of 12 to 1. Service was at 4, and Candor, Our Maggie and Magpie at from 8 to 20 to 1. Remus was the only one they had to beat after the flag fell, and he led to the wire a length to the good, with Service and Our Maggie driving for place, the former getting it by a neck. Time, 1:18½. Oregon Eclipse's race the day before did not seem to help him.

Braw Scot, the gray gelding that has carried Barney Schreiber's colors to many a victory, made his reappearance on a local track to-day, and was a warm second choice to All Over, who was at 4 to 5 at the close. The favorite was sent out after Schnitz on the turn into the stretch, after the latter had shown the way from the flag, and led him on the turn for home by a length. He was never headed and rolled in an easy winner by four lengths. Schnitz was three lengths in front of Arctic for place. Time, 1:34. Braw Scot ran a very poor race and came in last.

Ten starters went to the post in the last event of the day, a five furlong selling race. Yemen was favorite at once, every one remembering his fast run in the sloppy going against Potentate. Fly, Oliver, Babe Murphy and Contribution were all supported to show. Fly showed the way for the three-eighths, with Babe Murphy running easy in a good position, and when Fly backed up on the turn Cochran sent Babe out and she left her field like a lot of posts, winning by five lengths. Contribution was a head in front of Fly for place. Time, 1:04½.

Winning jockeys to-day were: Tod Sloan and W. Martin two each, and Cochran one.

INGLESIDE TRACK, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 30.

The showers of the early morning and the threatening weather kept many from journeying to the new track to-day, but the afternoon was clear and pleasant. About 2,500 were present, and witnessed some very good sport. The track was in an improved condition, and by Monday should be in very good shape. Transportation facilities were much better, to-day, and assurances have been given that within a few days the accommodations and time schedule will be in every way satisfactory.

The talent met with several severe shocks, as but one favorite of the day won, and the bookmakers made a clean-up on one or two races. But with favorites running as uncertainly as they have been at Ingleside, bettors in most cases have bent their energies to picking place horses, and a favorite bowled over is not always a signal victory for the books.

Basso, Montana and Maguet were on equal terms with three about them in the ring when odds were posted for the first race, a seven-furlong dash. Weight of coin forced Basso to 11 to 5. Montana receded to 5 to 1, and Magnet to 7 to 2 while Little Cripple, opening at fours, was played down to 7 to 2. Magnet was the first to show, but Miss Maxim and McLight both passed him turning into the backstretch. McLight forged in front while negotiating the far turn and Montana displaced Magnet. Basso, fifth to catch the caller's eye on the start, dropped back last, but had gotten up to fifth position again on the turn into the stretch. Turning for home Maxim headed McLight, and the latter backed up rapidly, Montana coming into second position. Half way through the stretch Miss Maxim was leading by a length, but Montana was sent along and caught and passed her in the last hundred yards. The filly was dead tired and only lasted out for the place from Basso, who had come very fast through the stretch, and would have headed her in a few more feet. Little Cripple got away badly, but finished in front of McLight. The very good time of 1:32 was hung up.

The second race was at six furlongs, for two-year-olds. Scimitar, 4 to 5 at the opening, receded to even money, while Theresia was played to 13 to 5 after backing up to 6 to 1 from three. Peixotto took command on the far turn and led into the stretch by two lengths, with Theresia second, coming very fast. Scimitar was third, having improved his position steadily from the start. In the run to the wire Peixotto soon showed the feather, and Theresia and Scimitar were left to do battle. The filly held her advantage quite easily, and when Scimitar made his supreme effort at the wire she held him and won by half a length. Canvashack was a poor third. Time, 1:20.

The third race was a second division of the preceding one. Joan was installed favorite, but Rummel was played into first choice, and the filly's price receded from 2½ to 3½ to 1. Princess Noretta was the despised one of the bunch, at 20 to 1. Princess Noretta showed the way from flag fall and kept coming on until it looked as though she was the only one in it. Joan was sent up, however, in the run through the stretch and displayed a whole lot of speed, winning from Noretta by a head. Camelia, who finished third, with a little assistance, should have bettered her position. Time, 1:19½.

The fourth race laid between Fannie Louise and Pat Murphy, if the betting was a criterion. The former opened at even money, but receded to 8 to 5, while the roan's price shortened from 7 to 6 to 5. Remus was not altogether overlooked, but was not better than 5 to 1. Billy S., at any price from 15 to 30 to 1, proved to be the good thing that had been overlooked. Remus and Pat Murphy set the pace beyond the half-mile pole, then Billy S. rolled along and headed them, turning for home three lengths in the lead. Pat Murphy had fallen back behind Remus, and Fannie Louise, who had gotten away badly, was making up lots of ground in her efforts to catch the leaders, but her terrific pace killed her off and she could not stand a winning drive through the stretch. The weight on Remus began to tell and Pat Murphy passed him and set sail for the fleeing Billy S., but could get no nearer than two lengths of him by the time the winner had crossed the line. Fannie Louise was but a head behind him, the others all strung out lengths apart. Time, 1:11½.

Last on the card was a five hurdle race, at a mile and a half. Col. Weightman was an odds-on favorite. Three Forks was the recipient of strong support and was played down from 8 to 2 to 1. All the others went back in the betting, unsupported. Three Forks fell at the first jump and Gold Dust at the next. Soon Enough showed the way for the mile, then Col. Weightman set the pace, drawing away rapidly and winning easily by ten lengths. Morgan G. made up a big gap in the stretch and catching King who felt safe, beat Soon Enough out by a nose for the place. Time, 3:02.

INGLESIDE, DECEMBER 2, 1895.

The track was heavy yet to-day, the foggy, damp mornings and evenings not giving Old Sol a chance to absorb the moisture next to the rail. From the center of the track to the outer rail it is dry and in good condition. While the crowd in the big betting ring did not fill it up, yet there were a good many people there, and probably up to, if not a little better, than an average crowd at Bay District track. The attendance in the grand stand was very light, however.

Fair fields of good horses were entered for all the races, and very interesting contests were the result. Favorites landed the first three, then Star Ruby met ignominious defeat. He did not show a liking for the mud, and finished last. Santa Anita Stable's Alvero was favorite in the last race, and was howled over by A. B. Spreckels' big colt Rummel.

For the first race Ramiro was an even money favorite, with Can't Dance a very popular second choice. Ramiro showed the way from flag fall and was never headed. Can't Dance kept him closest company and looked dangerous in the stretch, but could not get up to him. Salisbury ran up into a good position but tired in the stretch. Joe K. did not seem able to go in the mud. Time, 1:18½.

Pepper was a prohibitive favorite for the second race, at mile and an eighth, with Remus at 6 to 1 for second choice. Remus set a hot pace from the flag to the backstretch, where Tod took him back and Monita forged ahead and tried to keep up the pace, but it told on him, and when it came to a bruise through the stretch with Pepper he had nothing left. The favorite won by half a length well within himself. Tod sent Remus along on the dry going on extreme outside and tried to get up, but was not better than third. Judge Denny and Orbit dropped out early in the race. Time, 2:00½.

The next race was at a mile, with four starters. Peter II ranked favorite all the time, Moderocio a very tropical second choice. G. B. Morris was played down a few points, and Thornhill's price receded. Moderocio was pacemaker, leading to the stretch turn by two lengths. G. B. Morris was in second position till the far turn was reached, when Peter displaced him. Half way home Peter had closed up a gap of a length and was rated along easily. Moderocio was shaken up for a spurt at the last, but Tod Sloan had a whole lot up his sleeve and won with his mount under a wrap. G. B. Morris was third, four lengths behind Moderocio. Time, 1:47½.

The fourth event was another four-horse race at seven furlongs, with Star Ruby the only thing in sight. Installator received some support at the close, but the former went to the post a strong favorite. The quartet was sent away very quickly to a fair start, with Gallant soon out in front, and leading easily. He held command into the stretch, when Installator was sent after him and drew away an easy winner by three lengths from Pescador, who had made a strong run through the stretch into second place. Star Ruby made a very poor showing in the mud, and was hopelessly out of it before the backstretch had been negotiated.

The last race was for two-year-olds, at five and a half furlongs. Alvero was made favorite of the eight starters, while St. Lee and Laura F., installed first choice on even terms, went back in the betting. Doubtful, then Alvero took a turn at showing the way, but Rummel was in front at the far turn and there was nothing more to it. He came on and won by three lengths, Doubtful, a 20-to-1 shot, getting the place from the favorite Time, 1:12½.

Winning jockeys to-day were: T. Sloan, two; Chorn, W. Martin and Piggott one each.

A Look Backwards.

In looking over the record of the Kentucky Central Stakes which was inaugurated in 1883, the first year of the Latonia Club, writes "Broad Church" in the Spirit of the Times, a glance at the names of the jockeys who rode the placed horses each year, recalled a lot of riders who figured prominently in the last dozen years. A few are still in their prime, some have nearly lost their usefulness in the saddle, and some have passed over to the other side. Among the active and vigorous ones of the present time are Thorpe, Martin, Taral, Clayton, R. Williams, Perkins and J. Hill. Martin, Thorpe and Hill rode the placed horses as named in the last Kentucky Central Stakes, run on Thursday, and each is riding just now up to his best form, although they have long since ceased to be boys. Taral and Perkins nearly hold their own with the best of them in the East, while Clayton has never done better work than during the summer and fall.

Stoval piloted Troubadour to victory in 1884, and did pretty good work up to a few years ago, when he lost his grip and prestige, besides getting under a cloud. Recently he has been riding on the minor tracks, but with poor success. Britton was a crack a few years ago, and was nearly at his best in 1892, when he piloted Afternoon to victory in the Kentucky Central. A year later he met with a terrible fall at Washington Park, after which for a time he lingered between life and death. From the effects of that fall he never entirely recovered, mentally at least, and it marked the close of his best riding days. He is at Latonia now and then, but is rarely seen in the saddle. "Pike" Barnes, who rode Come To Taw in 1888, was then in his prime, and a very capable jockey. He rode for a brief time at Rohy last spring, but his days of usefulness in the saddle are over. George Withers, who was twice placed in the Kentucky Central, is now too heavy to ride except over the timber. He is here now trying in a modest way to pick winners. He was on Kirkman in 1885, when the latter was second to the winner, Silver Cloud, and the rider of Silver Cloud was Patsy Duffy, who died a few years ago. Ray, who rode Pearl Song to victory in 1893, is at Latonia every day, but is never seen in the saddle. He came under the displeasure of the powers that be on the turf, and is measurably under ban at the present time. Isaac Lewis, who piloted Huntress in 1887, got too heavy to ride a few years ago, and West, who rode the winner, Goliah, the year before, died several years ago from the effects of a fall on Saratogo track.

Porter, who rode a couple of the Kentucky Central winners, was ruled off a few years ago, but was subsequently reinstated. He is now too heavy to ride. Tom O'Hara, who rode the second horse in 1886, lost his mental balance last year, and I believe was placed in an asylum in Illinois. George Covington, who rode one of the placed horses in 1886, is now training horses in California, and Turner, who rode a placed horse the year previous, was killed half a dozen years ago. Tom Kiley, who rode Riley in 1889, is now a successful owner and trainer, and Linck Jones, who rode the third horse in 1891, is not riding any more, but doing the best he can to make a living at the Latonia track. R. Williams, who rode placed horses three times piloted Ben Brush in his races in the West.

At the Horse Show.

Said a much heriboned Hackney, a proud veteran of the Show, To his neighbor, a Green Hunter, in the next adjoining stall: "Well, what think you of the Horse Show? For I'd really like to know A novice's impressions of the people and it all."

"Why," answered the Green Hunter, "I am favorably impressed With the way the Show is managed, and they treat you very white; And the people are amusing, though I think they're overpressed And don't seem too intelligent, but 'tis a pretty sight."

"Still 'twould be a big improvement if they all were numbered, so By referring to a catalogue a horse could quickly see The ones that are worth looking at. But, after all, you know, It's the horse's at the Horse Show that really interest me!"

Col. Dickey's Reminiscences.

A reporter of one of our dailies recently interviewed Col. Dickey, and the following facts were elicited:

Colonel J. R. Dickey is probably the one man in this entire State who feels the full measure of sadness that goes with the old track. He is full of sentiment and reminiscences and as he sat yesterday toasting his feet before a bright fire, his venerable old head resting in his hand, he recalled some of the incidents of days long by.

It is over twenty years ago—Frank, my boy, was then but a little lad—that we talked of building up a race track. We had one then, but it was only a half-mile course, out there on the old Cliff House road.

We? Oh, yes; you can't remember them. They were the good people of those days; the men who helped to build up the State as well as to start this old Bay District track. There were 150 of them in all, and each put up his $500 for his charter membership. When I look back now and think how easily these men came to the front, I don't wonder at the magnificent strides racing has made on this Coast.

I don't believe there are fifty out of the 150 of those argonauts still alive. I can't remember them all now, but some of the ones I see now and again. Some of the old stock and good are: D. O. Mills, Alvinz Haywards, M. J. Burke, Bob Graves, Bob Shawhan, A. P. Hotaling, N. T. Smith, E. E. Eyre, P. A. Finnegan, W. S. Lisle, W. W. Dodge and—let me see. No; I can't think of any more just now. I'm thinking of the others.

The old Colonel weakened. A veteran who has seen as many ups and downs as any man who has ever followed the turf, who has won and lost thousands on the decisions of judges sometimes poorly qualified to sit in judgment at any race, without twitching a muscle, bent his head lower and furtively wiped away what seemed to be a tear. He added after a moment.

I remember them well. There was W. C. Ralston, a prince. You remember how he died—suicide. He was the Jim Fiske of California. Milton S. Latham, the banker; C. W. Kellogg, Billy Sharon, W. E. Dean, Jim Flood, Billy O'Brien, Leland Stanford, Charlie Crocker, A. N. Towne, C. W. Wilmerding, J. H. Tobin, Joe Jones, Abe Edgerton, Ike Bateman, W. S. Hobart, Judge Mesick, Joe Glover. It seems to me I can remember more of those old boys than I can of the others. They are all dead now, and this world is none the better for their being gone.

Colonel Dickey had much more to say of the old track, its patrons, its glorious races and of its graveyard.

Graveyard? Yes, there is a graveyard in the center field of the Bay District track. Few people outside of the horse-men themselves know that. Even the horse-men, with all their love for the beautiful animals they curry and care for as they would a human being they love, forget which favorites are buried there. Colonel Dickey remembers them or nearly all of them.

There was Thomas H. William's Return, a jumper, who broke his back on the backstretch; E. J. Baldwin's St. Cloud, who was leading a bunch of seven, and who holsted when he found the drawgate open. He was going at such a speed that he ran into the first best post and broke his neck, nearly doing likewise to his jockey. Then there was Sweet Alice with Chevalier up. Everybody remembers the story of Sweet Alice and her colored boy, who made a small fortune backing her at 50 to 1 as he walked down the line, whistling "Ben Bolt." Well, Sweet Alice's last race was run at the Bay District Track, when she broke her leg and went to the center field graveyard. Bertie R. also ruined "Chico" Johnson, who had begged and borrowed all the money he could get to back him. It was a match race, and Bertie R. was well in hand, full of speed, less than a length behind the other horse, making the last turn. The leader was pumped out and must surely lose down the stretch, when his jockey's cap flew off and landed squarely on Bertie R.'s nose. There it remained but a few seconds, suffocating the horse. He stumbled, broke his leg, was shot, and now occupies an unmarked grave in the center field. West George's Applause, Jack Splan's Bodine and Gloucester are all in the equine silent city, while not far from them in the western slope of Odd Fellows' Cemetery is the grave of poor old Percy Wilson, the argonaut of horse-race reporters on this coast, who saw all these horses die.

Of late years sentiment has given away to business, and the horses which become disabled and have to be shot are worth $3 apiece to the stable lads, who sell them to the tallowmen or perhaps to the cannery.

It was on the Bay District Track that Foster captured the $30,000 stake, four miles and repeat. Harry Wilkes won the $10,000 trot and Wildidle took the $5,000 Live Oak stakes in a four mile dash. It was also there that the two famous horses, Fullerton and Occident, had their mile and repeat to wagon and mile beats three in five to harness.

Names Claimed.

MODESTO, Cal., Nov. 28, 1895

I claim the name of Dick R. for bay colt with star, foaled 1894, sire Richards' Elector, dam Francinr, by Enchanter, second dam by Satelltte.

ECHOES FROM THE TRACK.

CONDE looked to be in fine fettle Friday.

THE Zoo Zoo colt has been named Hazard.

THE ownership of Little Cripple is given as Weber & Carr.

SEMPER LEX pulled up lame after his work Monday morning.

W. W. BEVERLY, the hookmaker, returned from an Eastern trip Monday.

THERE is no charge for scratching down to eight in the entries at the new track.

YO EL REY is being galloped on the beach and is said to be taking to his work kindly.

SEVERAL of the bookmakers were struck hard yesterday. Friday is an unlucky day, anyway.

REMUS could not stand the weight he had up Saturday after running a race the day before.

THESE should be an entrance on the northeast end of the track grounds near the Ingleside Inn.

PRINCESS NORETTA will probably not be a 20 to 1 shot soon again in such company as she met Saturday.

HARRY GRIFFIN may be seen in the saddle any day now. Burns & Waterhouse have first call on his services.

CHORN has broken the ice and won a race at Ingleside. His mount was the first of the Santa Anita stable's starts.

MEN that lose all their money at the Ingleside track will have a good excuse for walking home. "The cars don't run regularly."

DARE DOLLAR, by Darebin—Trade Dollar, who started Saturday, acts badly at the post, and got off last in the breakaway.

MONTANA ran a very different race Saturday from his recent ones at Bay District. He easily defeated some high-class horses.

B. C. HOLLY was not able to get stable room for his string of horses at the track at Ingleside, so he placed them in stalls near Dr. Masoero's infirmary.

JOCKEY KING went a-nodding on Soon Enough and was nipped out at the wire by Combs on Morgan G., who made up fifteen lengths through the stretch.

HARRY WHITMAN, who trains the horses owned by White & Clark, also has under his charge St. Lee and a full brother to Whitney, owned by Garnett Ferguson.

RILEY GRANNAN cleaned up several thousand over the victory of Rummel after a rather poor day. He had $200 up against $1,000 on Gallant to win, with Geo. Rose.

SCIMITAR could not gain an inch on Theresia in their drive to the wire in the second race Saturday. He stuck to her gamely but she held him off without any trouble.

To send the results of the races to the pool rooms down town costs the agent a dollar for admission for each race, besides the telephone company's charges for switching.

MELISS GOMEZ, the well-known trainer, who handled the speedy Little Alp sprinters, Lottie D. and Redlight, now trains Montana and the horses owned by J. P. Woolman.

FANNIE LOUISE had to make up so much ground after getting off badly that she was raced out before the struggle through the stretch and could not catch Billy S. and Pat Murphy.

It is stated that Burns & Waterhouse will construct their own stables at the Oakland track and will have a third of a mile track under cover for the benefit of their young horses in training.

THREE FORKS carried more money on his chances in the hurdle race than the favorite, but he fell at the first jump, giving Madison a severe shaking up. Gold Dust went down at the second jump.

PIGGOTT, who rode Belle Boyd in the opening race Friday, said the filly swerved out on turning into the stretch and would not try thereafter, an unusual thing for the game daughter of El Rio Rey.

BOOKMAKER HENRY G. WENDT has not been very fortunate at the new track. He began by drawing a poor stand and lost on the last two days in succession, which is something very unusual for Wendt.

THE grand stand will be a very pleasant place on sunny afternoons. The warm rays of Old Sol penetrated every nook and cranny yesterday, and everyone sat in perfect comfort, though the air was chill where the north wind could reach one.

TIPSTERS are out of condition just now. With so many Eastern horses starting against those we are more familiar with, and with nothing but a false time basis to figure from, comparative quality cannot be estimated with any degree of certainty.

J. W. KNOX, a gentleman well known in trotting circles has gone into racing. He has leased Green Morris' stable at Gravesend, and has half a dozen very promising yearlings. Mr. Knox is going to train his own string, and, as he is a level-headed, practical horseman, he is likely to be heard from.

THE telephone at Ingleside Club house, outside the grounds of the Jockey Club, is a very profitable connection for the Telephone Company now. It is about the only way of getting the results down town to the pool rooms, and is very liberally used. The company charges fifty cents for each switch.

JOAN's second win on Saturday was accomplished in such an impressive manner as to dispel all doubts as to the filly's speed and gameness. In her race Saturday she went back to Charlie Boots and then left him, while he did not improve his position. In their previous race Boots was first away and Joan ninth and she beat him out two lengths.

A Convention to be Held.

After the annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association which took place in this city last Monday evening, those present discussed the advisability of holding a horseman's convention early in January for the purpose of devising ways and means for the furtherance of the interests of light harness horses. The subject was lucidly explained by Messrs. Loeber, Harris, and Burke. Besides a review of the past and a statement of the present condition of the business, the outlook for the future was pointed out in plain and unmistakable terms. The leading articles which appeared in this journal on this subject were quoted and endorsed, and if the horsemen who have any interests at stake—and we know of none that have not—intend to breed, train and race their horses, it is absolutely necessary that they come to some mutual understanding for self protection.

Circulars setting forth the objects of this convention will be issued to every horse owner, trainer and manager on this Coast; the date and place where the convention is to be held, and the necessity for united effort, plainly shown. There must be something of this kind done at once, there is no disguising this fact. The system of making entries in vogue during the past two years has been tried everywhere and proven a failure. The conditions regarding the classification of horses is also faulty, and more definite and better ones for the benefit of horse owners must be devised. The responsibility of associations is another subject which needs attention, in fact, protection of the best interests of horsemen will be the principal plank in the platform which will be adopted should this convention be held. We want to see everyone take an active interest in it, if not, by the time the usual race meetings are announced, horsemen will be wondering what they are in the business for, because associations will not advertise their meetings and do not care to assume any responsibility of paying purses when they know there is dissatisfaction and absence of unity among the horsemen. This is the only remedy for the trouble that now confronts every horse-owner in the land.

THE race meeting at the new track at Ingleside is a revelation to those who have been playing form, for climatic changes and the condition of the track have precluded the possibility of "picking the winners" with the same regularity so noticeable at the Bay District Track. The attendance has been very fair, and as the railroad companies are perfecting their lines to this track and arranging their time schedule to the satisfaction of its patrons, an increase in attendance may be expected soon.

The Horse Show a Success.

The second annual Horse Show of the Horse Show Association of the Pacific Coast opened under most favorable auspices last Tuesday. The exhibition in every respect fulfills the estimate placed upon it by an expectant public. The president and directors, profiting by the experience of the past, seemed to fully realize that to make this exhibition a success they must have everything in first-class order. So far as society is concerned the attendance all week has been greater than it was last year, and is an excellent sign that, notwithstanding the bicycle craze, man's best friend, the horse, is a live drawing attraction, and everyone who has ever had the pleasure of riding behind a good one was anxious to see a better one. An Eastern journal says of horse shows: "A large number of the exhibitors are prominent members of society who, at considerable trouble, risk and expense, send their entries to the front for the sole purpose of helping the show and in the interests of the respective breeds. The honor of a blue or red ribbon is to them infinitely more valuable than any purse which may go with them. Another section of society is keenly alive to the advantage which the show gives them in being able to see in one ring the choicest teams, four-in-hands, roadsters, saddlers, hunters and ponies. Society is always a liberal buyer, and when the show is over it can do so with a wisdom and discrimination born of recent experience. Society, therefore, discharges most important functions. It makes the show a financial success by its liberal patronage. It fills the boxes and reserved seats with the beauty and fashion of Gotham, and thus provides a grand spectacular background to the showing which is always pleasing and attractive, and, lastly, by its liberal purchases, makes it profitable to that large number of exhibitors who are looking for a good market."

The exhibition of 385 head of fine horses of every breed would prove an attraction in any community, but when the fact is considered that this number represents the pick of the horses on this Coast, where our equines are noted for being the handsomest in the world, then the magnitude and beauty of the exhibition is realized. Last year there were very few trotting-bred horses exhibited, but this cannot be said this year, for the most famous trotters in California were well represented, while some of the best and most stylish of carriage horses were trotting-bred, and with their tails docked they showed as much beauty, style and knee action as the Hackneys.

To enumerate all the excellent features of this great exhibition, which closes to night, would occupy too much space, but in a review to be published next week we shall have more to say regarding the various exhibits.

To the officers and directors of this exhibition the entire horse industry, with all its accompanying interests, is deeply indebted. As an educator it is the best that has ever been given, as a place where every hour could be spent most enjoyable, it could not be surpassed; and the opportunities afforded of seeing society enjoy the manoeuvrings of the well-groomed horses, in harness and out of harness, and at the same time to meet their friends and compare notes, no social event of the year could compare with it.

At twelve o'clock to-night the gong in the pavilion will peal forth its farewell sounds, the band will play "Home Sweet Home," and the thousands who have enjoyed a most delightful round of pleasure all week will reluctantly leave the pavilion with the kindest impression of the grandest horse show ever given outside, of New York City.

Col. Thornton's Auction Sale

On Tuesday evening next, at 7:30, Messrs. Killip & Co. will sell at auction all the broodmares and yearlings belonging to the estate of Col. Harry I. Thornton. When one glances through the splendid catalogue just issued by the auctioneers, the splendid array of famous broodmares shown therein will create a disposition on the part of horsemen to attend this sale and purchase some of them.

The dams of so many famous race horses being in foal to such sires as Mariner and Sobrante should bring big prices, but the probabilities are they will be sold very low and farmers and breeders who have watched the progressive strides made in the thoroughbred horse industry on this coast will be blind to their interests if they do not secure one or more of these matrons, so that they will have the produce to sell every year. The accession to the ranks of thoroughbred sires every year is marvelous, and as it costs very little for service fees and no more to raise a thoroughbred colt than an ordinary business horse, the opportunity afforded by this sale to secure the very best ever offered for sale at auction in this city, should not be overlooked. Send at once for a catalogue and attend the sale next Tuesday night under the big tent at the salesyard, Market and Van Ness Avenue.

The Pool Room War.

The smoke and cannonading of the pool-room battle is seen and heard, and the "frozen eight" of the city fathers who seem to be resting on their arms, must soon come forth and state exactly what side they are on. Some of these all-wise fathers are sightless; they have never seen a pool-room and did not know there was such a thing in existence. They are not only blind, but they cannot read except by touch, and as some one must have "greased their palms" they do not want to have anyone tell them there are forty pool-rooms in full blast in this city, each of the proprietors of which are clearing from $800 to $1,500 a day.

The public that elected these city fathers and placed this "holy eight" so near to each other that they are "frozen solid" on every measure which is against the best interests of this city, are silently waiting outside the walls to learn what the results of this battle will be. They know that there are some evil influences at work to keep this solid octette from breaking ranks, and are anxious to know who it is that blows the Mazuma cloud by day and unloads the boodle sack at night.

All liberal-minded citizens, including bankers, merchants, business men and artisans are strenuously opposed to the existence of pool rooms in this city. The youth of this city know what the import of the pleading is, "Lead us not into temptation," but when these places with their army of pikers and touts are allowed to carry on their work so convenient to the offices where they are employed, it does not take long to estimate the damage done. These eyesores, as well as foreign books at every race track, should be suppressed. They have done more to injure the very best interests of racing, decreased the value of horses and brought odium on the sport of kings in America than any other causes known, and, in the interests of every horse breeder, farmer and lover of true sport, we ask that pool selling be confined to its proper place on the tracks where the races upon which pools are sold are contested.

The supervisors as a body should pass the ordinance introduced and voted favorably upon by the joint committees appointed to act upon it. The side issue introduced by Supervisor Wagner should be laid on the table and kept there until the author gives the subject a little more study, then he will realize that this flank movement of his was not only erroneous but fatal to his cause.

In the Hurst Park November Handicap, two miles, which English event was won by Banquet, he defeated a field of eight useful horses, among them Ivor, to whom he was conceding thirteen pounds, and winning easily by two lengths. As Ivor won the rich Manchester Handicap, one mile and six furlongs, week before last, defeating a good field, the game old "iron horse," Banquet, must be a long way from being a back number yet, and it was rather unlucky for his owner, Capt. I. E. Aiken, that he was not entered for the Manchester event, for taking a line through the winner, Ivor, Banquet could hardly have been beaten. The chances are that the old horse has only recently become thoroughly acclimated. The Croker-Dwyer string did not get a fair show by any means, rushed off as they were in midwinter and put in training within two months after their arrival. It matters not how clever a man may be with horses, he is more or less handicapped in his first year where the conditions are vastly different to what he is accustomed. Taking everything into consideration, Hardy Campbell did very well, winning as he did so early in the season with Eau Gallie.

STERLING IRONSIDE, known to racing men as "Bob," met with an accident last evening that proved fatal. He has been selling the racing cards on the streets and in the hotels of the next day's events and last evening he went as usual to the second story of the Bancroft Building on First and Market streets for his supply. No one saw the accident, but a few minutes after he left with his bundle of cards he was found bleeding and insensible at the bottom of the elevator shaft with the elevator on top of him. The hallways were dark and there was not even a light on the elevator. It is supposed that the elevator had been on the flat above and while "Bob" was hauling on the rope to bring it down to where he was standing so that he could descend in it he took a fit and fell down the shaft, still clutching the rope and pulling the elevator down. His friends say that he was subject to fits. He was taken to the Receiving Hospital, where Dr. Stice found that his skull was fractured and his right leg broken in two places. He did not regain consciousness, and died shortly after being removed from the scene of the accident.

HARRY GRIFFIN had his first mount here this season on Burns & Waterhouse's Princess Noretta. The fact, no doubt, influenced the betting somewhat. Rummel, the cracking good colt belonging to the Spreckels stable, ran away from him in the stretch, and Griffin rode a second to Joe Piggott.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association—A Good Showing—Election of Officers, Etc.

At the regular annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association held last Monday evening, twenty-two members responded to roll call.

The financial report of the secretary showed that the association had a cash balance in the treasury of $3,986.96. While this amount is not quite as much as they had a year ago, it is a very excellent showing in comparison, as the report shows that the association gave away a net amount in purses this year of about three times as much as in 1894.

The membership book showed that forty three new members had joined the association in 1895, which can be considered a good healthy growth in view of the hard times. Most of those who joined can be counted upon for making entries next year as they will have horses in training.

From a racing standpoint both meetings were highly satisfactory, and while no world's records were broken, nearly every race was a sharp contest in fast time. In the majority of cases the time hung out at the end of each heat would have created the wildest enthusiasm a few years ago, and in many instances would have made a new mark for the class represented.

The race meetings of the association this year were held in places where an annual fair was also given on the same grounds and track. The Summer meeting at Sacramento was followed in a few weeks by the State Fair, and the Fall meeting immediately followed the regular fair at Los Angeles. There is no question that the local people in both of these places looked forward to their own fair, which is a fixed event from year to year, and having made their arrangements to attend it, gave it the preference. In both places it was the first meeting the Breeders Association ever held there, and was rather of the nature of an experiment to the association, and a new thing to the people. However, those who attended the meetings praised in the highest terms the methods and management, and predicted that the next time the Breeders came to their town, they would have no reason to complain of the attendance.

The Secretary of the association was instructed to call a convention of horse owners, breeders, trainers and those interested in the business of racing horses to be held at such time as the largest representation could be secured for the purpose of forming an organization to advance the interests represented. Messrs. Cohen, Loeher and Harris were appointed a committee to act with the secretary in drafting a call for the convention and preparing such notices as might be necessary to send out. Mr. Burke stated that he thought a good time to hold the convention would be on some date in the near future when the long distance races at the Ingleside track would be given as they would be liable to draw horsemen from different parts of the State. He also stated that he had been authorized by Mr. Spreckels, President of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club, to notify the association that it could have the use of the Ingleside track free of charge, on which to hold a trotting meeting at any time that would not interfere with a race meeting of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club. A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Spreckels.

The next business taken up was the election of five directors in place of those whose terms of office expired this year. The vote resulted in the re-election of Jos. Cairn Simpson, F. H. Burke, E. P. Heald and F. W. Covey; Mr. C. A. Hug was also elected a member of the Board.

After the general meeting, a meeting of the Board of Directors was held, and the following were elected officers of the Association for the ensuing year: E. P. Heald, President; A. H. Cohen, first Vice-President; F. W. Loeher, second Vice President; N. T. Smith, Treasurer, and F. W. Kelley, Secretary.

The President appointed an Executive Committee for the ensuing year consisting of F. H. Burke, A. H. Cohen and C. A. Hug.

At the meeting it was also ordered that a vote of thanks and a letter of recommendation be tendered to W. P. McNair as an expression of appreciation of his services as starter at the Fall meeting of the association. A resolution was also passed that a vote of thanks be given to Mr. Ryan for the use of the track and the many favors shown by him to the association at their late meeting.

Sale of Palo Alto Stock.

NEW YORK, December 3.—Peter C. Kellogg & Co. began a four-days' combination sale of trotting stock in Madison-Square Garden to-day. Most prominent among the several consignments were the well-bred animals from the Palo Alto Farm in California, consigned by the estate of Leland Stanford. This lot numbered forty-six head, and included the celebrated colt Rio Alto, with a record of 2:16½. After some spirited bidding Rio Alto was knocked down for the top price of the day, $3,300, to E. D. Slater, of Saugerties, N. Y. Later in the day it was reported Slater had bought the colt for foreign parties. The consignment of forty-six head sold for a total of $18,225, an average of $396. The grand total of the day and night sales resulted in seventy eight head being disposed of for $21,660, an average of $278 per head. Small prices were realized at the night sale. Horses that sold for $150 and over are as follows:

THE following dispatch from St. Louis to the N. Y. Mercury will doubtless interest our English cousins greatly: "John McCafferty, the jockey and horse owner, will remain in St. Louis several days, the guest of Fred A. Foster. McCafferty recently purchased twenty two-year-olds, and is confident of winning some of the big purses next year. Foster and McCafferty will leave St. Louis about December 12, and go to England to look over the racing situation, and they may conclude to take a string of horses over there next year. Foster stated that he would close down the Sportsman's Park meeting November 30, but it is thought that a winter meeting will be run by other parties, who expect to lease the grounds."

MESSES McNAUGHTON & MUIR were not satisfied with the result of the mile race Tuesday, and their expressions of dissatisfaction brought about an offer for a match race to-day between their colt Basso and G. B. Morris' Strathmeath, with the result a match was made for $1,000 a corner, to take place this afternoon. Dan Honig was appointed stakeholder. Green Morris and James McCormick furnished the $1,000 for Strathmeath, while the owners of Basso put up their end of the wager. The race this afternoon will be the last on the card. It will be a hot contest and should draw a large crowd. The weights will be the same as yesterday. Willie Martin will ride Strathmeath and Bob Isom may ride Basso.

KAMSI, Miss Brummel and Sillie Cliquot were all heavily backed in the third race Tuesday, but those who pinned their faith to the speedy daughter of the mighty Salvator felt Fortune's smiles. Eight to five was about the shortest price at any time. Miss Brummel, not off quite as favorably, and kept in the heavy going next the rail, could not catch her, and was forced to strike her colors. Kamsin ran an excellent race, for the first time out since his journey West, and hereafter will give either of the fillies a better argument.

DR. R. A. ARCHIBALD, V. S., formerly of Sacramento, has removed to this city, and has his office and infirmary at the Veterinary College, corner Post and Fillmore streets. Dr. Archibald is one of the brightest and most capable young men in the profession, and even in a field pretty well filled with men of his profession, it will not be long before his wonderful work as a surgeon will obtain for him the recognition he deserves.

BARNEY SCHREIER is disciplining Jockey Chorn by keeping him down for ten days. As the story goes, Barney did not like the idea of Jerry having an entry in the same race in which he was riding one of Barney's horses. Hidago showed and Barney's Service was fourth. He does not question Chorn's honesty, but the thing don't look right on its face, and Barney says he wants to protect the public as well as himself.

BASSO's measure was very accurately taken Wednesday, and it was pretty clearly shown that he was defeated by the better horse. Willie Martin can ride with about as good judgment as any boy on the track, and is a good judge of horses and pace. It may be possible he could turn the tables on Strathmeath with a leg up on Basso, but the former appeared to have too much in reserve to make such a result probable.

SIXTEEN bookmakers drew in again yesterday for three days. Seilers & Co. dropped out and Joe Ullman went on with the Palace Club. In the drawing Joe Rose's name was first on the list and he drew No. 1. Summerfield & Co., second called, got No. 16. H. G. Wendt switched on his luck and got No. 2, while the Stuyvesant Club is still at the old stand, down with "Peanuts."

"BROWN DICK" is on his annual tour for yearlings. He recently bought of J. N. Camden the bay yearling colt by Spendthrift, out of Brita, by Virgil; and the yearling chestnut filly by Spendthrift, out of Apple Blossom, by Buckden. Both have shown high trials.

Hoof-Beats.

CLAUDE HILL wore blinkers Wednesday.

GRIFFIN rode Princess Noretta without spurs.

CHEVALIER will go to his home in the South next week.

L. EZELL is pretty close to the money with everything he starts.

JOCKEY LAMLEY had his first mount in California on Schnitz.

NONE of the Rancho del Paso horses appeared at the horse show.

ALL OVER is a consistent performer and wins from very good company.

"DOC" TURBIVILLE has signed to ride for a horseman racing at New Orleans.

AL SMITH, the well-known horseman, and Miss May Wagner were married on Monday.

TOD SLOAN and Willie Martin keep pretty close tab on winning mounts at the new track.

THE horses belonging to "Pittsburgh" Phil are all doing good work and will soon be fit for a race.

RICO made his reappearance Wednesday, the first time since a plate turned into his hoof at Bay District.

RUMFEL is a pretty high class two-year-old, and should develop into a cracking good colt next year.

BOB ISOM, on whom A. B. Spreckels will have first call, had his first mount here this season on Basso.

SI McCLAIN was set down for ten days by the judges for indifferent riding in the last race on Tuesday.

BOB ISOM, the clever colored lightweight, who will ride for A. B. Spreckels, arrived Tuesday. He can ride at 93 pounds.

HEWITT, the Blemton Stable's light weight jockey, who will ride out here this winter, had a mount on Nebuchadnezzar Tuesday.

THE first of the get of Salvator to win in this State was Sallie Cliquot, and John Mackey, of Rancho del Paso, was present to see the race.

ANDY BLAKELY's jumper, Bassanio, who has been turned out all summer at pasture, will be taken up and placed in training in about a week.

BYRON McCLELLAND has bought of C. Fressenden, Wattertown, Mass., the two-year-old bay colt Moylan, by Bradford—Elsa Rosalind. Price private.

BABE MURPHY's five furlongs in 1:02½ is about the first good line had on the new track, and from this performance it would appear that it will be a fast one.

LIZZIE H., Dan Honig's black filly, by John Henry—Minnie Payne, started in the first race Wednesday. She is a beautiful animal, but looked too fat for a hard race.

THE muchly-spelled name of the imp. Mariner—Mischief filly belonging to Atkins & Lottridge has come back revised and appears as Addeledi. This is probably what was intended.

FROM the very generous manner in which the fair sex responded Wednesday, overflowing the grandstand with grace and beauty, "Ladies' Day" will be a prominent feature of the week's programme hereafter.

OLIVE, that ran second to Babe Murphy in the third race Wednesday, was bred by Chas. Kerr, of Antrim Stock Farm, and was sold to Mr. Corrigan at private sale. She is by Apache, dam Virgie, and has proved a very serviceable filly.

FANNIE LOUISE has been unfortunate in her recent starts in getting a poor ride. Twice recently Donnelly messed her around and got cut off. Wednesday, however, she was ridden by Griffin in superb style, but she had to give up to All Over.

GREEN MORRIS won two good races on Tuesday, and the match race Wednesday. Strathmeath took in enough for his veteran owner in the last two days to buy a heap of oats, and at the same time showed himself to be a very serviceable sort of a horse.

MOSBY, a seven-year-old horse by Wildidle—Mozelle owned by Al Martin, recently dropped dead in his stall at the Bay District track. He was bred at Palo Alto stock farm and was considered a most promising two year-old, but broke down early.

BABE MURPHY was up against a very notable lot of sprinters in the second race Wednesday, but she verified our assertion that she could give most anything at the track a beating at five furlongs, and made her local record three straight wins in as many starts.

JOCKEY JOHNNY LAMELY would have had the mount on Charmion Tuesday, but for a slight attack of sickness preventing his keeping the engagement. He should prove a very serviceable boy at the tracks this winter, being able to ride at 100 pounds. He will ride some for "Pittsburgh" Phil, and no doubt will have many outside mounts.

A. B. SPRECKELS won two events Wednesday, the first and last races. Piggott's finish on the Antipodean mare Candid was a sensational bit of riding. He settled down to work in the last seventy yards, when his mount seemed to be hopelessly out of it, and outrode Garner on Our Maggie by a head. It was the hardest ride seen here for many a month.

HORSEMEN at Ingleside state the reason that the fields are not larger is the lack of opportunity to fit horses for a race there. They are not allowed on the main track, and owners do not care to work their horses over the sand track on the inside. They gallop them around among the stables, and also on the inside track, but cannot give horses such work as is needed to fit them for a race.

BOODLE, 2:12 1/2, THE CAMPAIGNER.

Brief History of This Royally Bred Horse and His Family.

In equine affairs the same truth in recognition of merit prevails as well as in all others which dominate the world. Let a horse that has been looked upon by jealous, rivalrous owners step to the front, and in the presence of a thousand obstacles safely pass them all and come out triumphant at the end of a hard campaign, and everyone, even that horse's former enemies, are willing to come forward and give him the credit he deserves. This is the case in regard to Boodle, the son of Stranger. His lot in life since his arrival in California has not been a happy one; his pathway has had more thorns than roses, and his work in and out of season has been sufficient to kill a stronger horse, but he has survived it all and now stands among the greatest trotters and sires the people of this State have ever seen.

Boodle's pedigree is as follows, and although it is of lines that no other stallion in California traces directly to, nevertheless there seems to be a strong chain of excellent campaigners which, link by link, have aided to give Boodle the bottom, speed, strong constitution, excellent limbs and a determination to never give up a heat from wire to wire; for he never loses a race in which he wins a heat:

Boodle was sired by Stranger 3030 (the most popular sire in the East to-day) out of Bride (dam of Trenton, 2:40 1/2), by Jay Gould, 2:20 1/2; second dam Tida, 2:38 1/2, by Ethan Allen, 2:25 1/2; third dam by Abdallah 1.

Stranger was by Gen. Washington, out of the ex-queen of the turf, Goldsmith Maid, 2:14; second dam Old Ab (dam of Daniel Webster), by Abdallah 1. Stranger is the sire of Col. Kuser, 2:11 1/2, Ballona, 2:11 1/2 and a number of others in the 2:30 list. His yearlings sold last month in New York averaged more than any sold there in two years. He is considered one of the greatest of sires.

Gen. Washington (sire of Stranger) was by Gen. Knox, 2:31 1/2, out of the peerless race mare Lady Thorn, 2:18 1/2, sister to the famous Mambrino Patchen; second dam Rodes Mare, by Gano, son of American Eclipse.

Gen. Knox was by Vermont Hero, 2:35 (son of Sherman's Black Hawk and a mare by Liberty) out of a mare by Searcher, by Barney Henry, thoroughbred.

Jay Gould, sire of the dam of Boodle, 2:12 1/2, was by Hambletonian 10 out of Lady Sanford, by American Star; second dam Old Sorrel, by Exton Eclipse, son of American Eclipse; third dam by Messenger Duroc (thoroughbred) son of Sir Archy Duroc.

Ethan Allen, 2:25 1/2, the handsomest and gamest horse on the turf in his day, was by Vermont Black Hawk, dam untraced.

What a host of game campaigners seems to pass before our eyes as we contemplate these marvelous performers. Goldsmith Maid, 2:14, the queen of the turf for many years and winner of 114 heats better than 2:30.

Lady Thorn, 2:18 1/2, another game and consistent performer, one of the greatest of her day and full sister to the greatest sire of broodmares of the age, Mambrino Patchen. That's blood everyone is seeking in every country where trotters are known.

Ethan Allen, 2:25 1/2, the handsomest and gamest trotter of the Morgan family, a horse that is revered by every old timer who remembers his famous battles on the turf. His pure, frictionless gait, style and game qualities are still looked upon as the standard par excellence of all the attributes we are seeking in the light harness horse.

Jay Gould, 2:21 1/2, the fastest stallion of his day. He won 102 heats and if handled as horses now are there is no doubt his speed, determination and iron constitution would have carried him to a record close to 2:10. He was by Hambletonian 10, out of Lady Sanford, by American Star 14, and she was the granddam of Bella, 2:22, Allie K., 2:29 1/2, Lizzie K., 2:30, and great granddam of Cheyenne, 2:14. Jay Gould's list of 2:30 performers is increasing every year, and when it is known that his daughters are considered the very greatest of all broodmares, the one most sought after in the East, then it is apparent that Boodle comes by his speed and gameness naturally. Jay Gould is sire of the dam of such horses as Robert J., 2:01 1/2, Cebolla, 2:12 1/2, Col. Kuser, 2:11 1/2, Poem, 2:13 1/2, and over forty others, all of them with records below 2:27.

Stranger, the much sought-after son of Gen. Washington and Goldsmith Maid has not Boodle alone as a representative, but breeders everywhere are declaring that his list is increasing with the names of more extremely fast trotters than any other horse now standing for public service.

Thus we might go on enumerating all that the ancestors of Boodle have done and are still doing, but space forbids, and we must speak of Boodle as he is to-day, a recapitulation of his races since that memorable day in San Jose in 1891, when with the bone in one of his forelegs cracked from an injury, he went out and won a record. This journal at that time published the following and shows that the same indomitable will and courage is noticeable in him as well as his descendants to-day.

"Boodle got his record of 2:27 1/2 in 1891 in a race at Stockton. Shortly afterwards he was taken to San Jose where he met with an accident and cracked the bone in his foreleg during the latter part of July. He recovered slowly. When the races took place at San Jose Mr. C. A. Stockton wanted to withdraw him, but several friends advised him to give the horse a show, and after W. Donathan started with him grave doubts were entertained as to the horse being able to stand up to his work, but the game blood of his great campaigning ancestors was in him and he won the race. As one of the daily papers said: The victory won by Boodle in the first race was well earned, and his mark, 2:25 1/2, won in the fifth heat of a hardly-contested event, is one which the owners of this extremely well-bred stallion may take great pride.

Boodle was foaled in 1886 and brought to California by J. W. Knox of New Jersey, and sold to Montgomery & Rea, and by them to C. A. Stockton & Co., of San Jose. He then passed into the hands of Montgomery & Hostetter, who have had him campaigned through the circuit this year. He was driven in his races by C. A. Van Bokkelen. He is in color a beautiful brown; in height he is 16 hands and weighs 1,100 pounds, and is a handsome type of a trotting horse. In conformation he is as perfect as one could wish; no judge of a horse could find a place where he is faulty; from the coal-black hoofs to his withers, and from the tip of his nose to his tail, head, neck, shoulders, barrel, coupling, quarters, legs and feet, he is a model. In disposition he is kind, and seems to have inherited remarkable intelligence. In action he is bold, open-gaited and of the untiring kind. It is no trouble for him to trot. That he was one of the sensations the year every one admits.

He won his record of 2:12 1/2 this year in a hard race and won it so easily that it is believed he could have gone in 2:10 if forced. In all his racing career he seldom lost a race in which he won a heat. He always comes from the half to the wire faster than in the first half of every mile he trots. He is wonderfully intelligent, and C. A. Van Bokkelen, his driver, says he has no fear of losing a heat if he is within three lengths of the first horse into the stretch. It takes a phenomenally fast and game horse to keep there.

As a sire Boodle should take a most prominent place in the ranks of the very best ones in this State. There are none better bred, and as his blood lines will cross well with the great "California families," we can commend him to the attention of all owners of broodmares. He comes from families that never produce pacers, and as the gamest campaigners on the turf are his ancestors, there is no reason why he should not transmit his valuable qualities to his progeny. Boodle is a young horse that has had limited opportunities in the stud, nevertheless let us see what he has done.

Boodle's first foal was Ethel Downes, the handsome five-year-old mare that got a record of 2:13, and won a race in which the five heats were trotted faster than in any race in California, and Ethel Downes was the contending horse in every heat. Out of twelve races she won nine, was second twice and once third, a showing that is unsurpassed by any other mare of her age in California. She is five years old.

Boodle's second colt was Thompson, 2:15. His dam was noted for her quitting propensities, but no one can say he ever showed signs of quitting. These two were all that were handled out of the only five colts that were sired by him in 1890. In 1891 he was bred to two mares and the two colts by him were never trained. He has but three three-year-olds one of which has been driven a little, and will undoubtedly enter the list next year. This shows what limited opportunities he has had in the stud, and how his progeny have been neglected. But several of his colts will be handled this spring, and no doubt will be seen in races in the circuit.

This is the first time in the history of the trotting turf when a sire gets a record of 2:12 1/2 and has his first two colts also enter the 2:15 list the same season, and they were the only two ever raced. There has never been but four of his colts driven for speed, besides the two above spoken of. There is a three-year-old called Merle M. that with little handling trotted a mile in 2:36; the fourth is a yearling Shy Ruth owned by Jesse D. Carr. She has shown her ability to beat three minutes easily.

Boodle will make the season of 1896 at San Jose, and owners of good broodmares, who desire to get fine large stylish pure-gaited game trotters should not overlook him. He is a sure foal getter, and every foal he sires will be worth handling.

Answers to Correspondents.

Answers to this department must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

O. K.—What is the pedigree of a pacer called Sam Lewis, 2:25? Answer.—Sired by Echo 462, dam Bessie Taylor (dam of Costello, 2:24), by St. Clair 656.

J. McC., Sacramento.—Will you be kind enough to inform me of the registered number of imp. Loyalist? I have a very promising filly one year old by him and am anxious to know particulars. Answer.—Thoroughbreds do not have a registry number.

G. Oakland.—Will you kindly give me what information you can regarding the mare Kate Charleston, ten years old, raised on Stanford's ranch, sired by Singlet in, dam unknown by me, therefore my inquiry. Any information will be most highly appreciated. Answer.—Write to F. W. Covey, Palo Alto Stock Farm. He may be able to give you the desired information.

J. B.—Please give me the age and color of the stallion O'hello, sired by Hawk Hawkins and raised by J. B. Haggin and owned by Cap Harris, of Los Alam. Answer.—There is no such horse registered and there must be some mistake about the name of the sire, Hawk Hawkins. Such a name does not appear in any of the Haggin catalogues as far as can be traced.

Quartz, Australia.—A horse was imported to Australia called Commercial, bay, foaled 1889, s. t. b. by Combination—Braine, by Echo 462. 1. What is the pedigree of this Combination? 2. Give extended pedigree of Braine on dam's side. Do you know anything of a black horse called Roscoe, imported to this colony some years ago, a trotter. Answer.—There is no "said to be" about Commercial's pedigree. If the writer will communicate with Hon. John Seales, Duckenfield, N. S. W., he will ascertain that the horse is bred just as R. E. deB. Lopez, who sold him to Mr. Seales says. Combination was bred by F. S. Malone, of this city. He was by Inca, 2:26 1/2, son of Woodford Mambrino 345, out of Gretchen, one of our great broodmares, by Mambrino Pilot; second dam Kitty Kirkman, by Canada Chief; third dam by Fanning's Tobe; fourth dam by imp. Leviathan. The dam of Combination was by Irvington, son of Hambletonian 10; second dam by John Nelson, by a son of imp. Trustee; third dam by St. Clair. 2. Braine, by Echo, son of Hambletonian 10, dam Lady Dudley, by Tom Dudley; second dam by Bertrand Jr.; third dam by Pacolet; fourth dam by Sir Solomon, son of Sir Archy. 3. We do not find any record of this horse. What year was he sent to Australia?

A HERSE named Capstone, entered in a race at Lexington, Ky, last week, sroused the suspicions of the judges and they refused to allow him to start. From evidence since developed, they find that the horse is no other than the noted ringer Post Odds, and have ordered him branded, his reputed owner ruled off, and declared that they believe the ubiquitous Brannon is mixed up in the affair.

The Judges' Stand.

Written for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

The question of efficiency in the judges' stand at all race meetings has been commented upon so much that it would seem superfluous to try to add anything more at this time. Many, who are more able than the writer, have given it their best thought and yet, year after year, the same "prominent citizen" and "good fellow" is conspicuously before the public and particularly before the horsemen. The running horse fraternity long since discarded the old plan of picking up judges, and now upon every track they have the best judges possible to get, paying them long salaries and demanding of them a service accordingly. That is an improvement no one will attempt to deny. It is a good business proposition, and in these days of progressiveness it is rather surprising that the harness horsemen have not "risen in their might and demanded the change." When the question of what is at stake is considered, all must agree that there is altogether too much at stake in every race to trust even the smallest detail in the hands of incompetent persons. This is particularly true in reference to the starting judge. In all cases where harness racing is on the card, there should be no question of the ability and honesty of the starter. Into his hands is entrusted what may and does represent many thousands of dollars to the breeder or campaigner, and if he is lacking in these two qualifications, no person can calculate the injury he may do at any meeting. The starter to be thoroughly efficient must be popular with the men in the sulky and also with the people in the grand stand. He should be sufficiently friendly with all horsemen as will give them a fair chance, but beyond that he cannot go. It may become necessary for him to inflict the severest punishment upon a personal friend, but friendship must not be placed ahead of duty. He must be absolutely without prejudice at all times. Never allowing his personal feelings to present themselves to the disadvantage of man or horse. An efficient starting judge must be absolutely honest as well as fearless. The many temptations must be met and frowned upon else his good name must suffer. No man known to be a gambler or drunkard should be employed, for no matter how efficient they may be for the time being, the time for their usefulness is limited. The salary of a starting judge should be and in the great majority of cases is, such an amount as to render any excuse for gambling void. Certainly no good excuse can be given why he should dabble in the pool-box. It is an utter impossibility for any man to occupy the position of starting judge and maintain his good name and reputation unless he prohibits betting from his list of money getting schemes, and keeps out of the way of all jobs or gambling ventures. This is not a hard thing to do, and if it is recognized generally by associations as an essential qualification, will do much toward eliminating what has been an unpleasant incident in the past, the charge of a starter or judge working in the interest of the pool-box. Then, there could be no reason for a poolseller going into the judges' stand to make a public statement that an official of the association was not interested in the pool-box as was the case at the Los Angeles District meeting. A starting judge can be the most efficient and show the quality of his work to better advantage when employed to go through an entire circuit. At the first, and each succeeding meeting, he should make for his own use a form book, and by the time the racing season is fairly on, he will be in position to know each and every horse and driver, and at a glance be able to judge his field correctly. At the fall meeting of the Breeders Association, Judge McNair had a form book and upon the second appearance of a horse, he could, by reference, tell the peculiarities and was governed accordingly. While the form book used by Judge McNair was the only one of the kind ever seen by the writer, and though it may not be customary to use it, there can be no denying that it is a great help, yet any form can be used to suit the convenience or wishes of the starter.

Too much care cannot be given towards interesting the public. Often what might be considered a tedious wait, because of not knowing the cause, can be made pleasant in many ways. The starter should have a good voice and make himself heard at all reasonable distances. The idea of analysing the time of heats, giving the time to each quarter is a good one. It gives the audience an opportunity of judging how fast a horse moves when going at a faster gait than many have ever seen before and helps very materially in holding the interest of the crowd to each event as it is called. In a few words it may be said starters are "born not made" and there is no reason why the Pacific Coast meetings should be behind any locality in the matter of securing a good starting judge. On all the meetings of the Eastern States, many of them inferior half-mile tracks, make a specialty of this feature and always have the best of results. Why may we not increase the interest as well as they?

I have a friend, a real true friend
With whom my pastime hour I spend;
I doubt which one enjoys it most
Or which is guest and which is host;
For though I dole his early food,
A hundredfold he brings me good.
He gives me life and health; and blood,
Which seemed too slow, comes in a flood,
And colors all the world with rose,
Which seemed before in pale repose,
New joy we feel as we stroll out
For romp and riot, run and rout.
He dances o'er both sides the way
As if by acts he'd plainly say,
We do not love, nor you nor I
This earth, dull, sodden earth, let's fly!
My foot is fleet, my spirits high,
We spurn the ground, let's try the sky!
The gentle pressure of my hand
Confines his ardor to the land,
But, as his feet invade the air,
And speed me on, we happy pair
Forget all duty, and the hour
With its intense, absorbing power
Has unobserved so quickly sped
That two instead of one have fled;
Ah, Jacob, boy, whenever we part
You'll take with you my saddened heart.
No need can e'er more gladsome be
Than you, dear brute, have been with me.

A CHAPTER OF THE LONG AGO.

An Interesting Story About the Famous Horse
Ethan Allen and Those Who Owned
Him in Kansas.

The following article, written by A. A. Austin in the Horse Review, has a peculiar interest for Californians, for in 1874 a large number of descendants of Ethan Allen were sold at auction in the Armory building on Howard street opposite New Montgomery. The horses sold were a portion of the lot bred by Sprague & Akers, and their descendants are to be found on many of the stock farms in California:

It was our charming privilege lately to visit the home of Amasa Sprague and to be delightfully entertained by the genial host, his sweet-voiced, refined wife, and the courteous, obliging son of twenty, all of whom have a fondness for the horse and were willing to impart information about the many good ones that have been owned in the family.

"Come to the stable and see a son of Ethan Allen." We knew sons of old Ethan were very scarce; indeed, a statement appeared in an Eastern turf paper a few months ago that there was but one son of Ethan Allen in New England and he was owned in Vermont, and although a letter was written to its editor correcting the blunder and informing him of Sam Weller, son of Ethan Allen, owned by Amasa Sprague, the letter was never published.

But here stood the horse, foaled June 15, 1872, bred by Mr. Sprague, dam Levine, a strictly thoroughbred mare, foaled 1864, bred by Alex. H. Brand, of Kentucky, and sired by Revenue, dam Lady Margrave, by imported Margrave. This son resembles his sire. A light bay, star, with a little white on both nigh pasterns. Fifteen hands and weighs 950 pounds, round in harrel, smooth and finished all over. He never started in a race with other horses, never was registered, never served but a few, perhaps a dozen, mares. Locally, he is known as Skip Jack, and is known also to have speed. When three years old he was matched for a basket of champagne to beat 2:40 and he trotted in 2:39. He has been inclined to pace, except to sleigh, when he trots square. "He is and always has been a horse of great endurance. It was thirty-four miles from my home," said Mr. Sprague, "to Narragansett Pier and with two in a buggy, over a road sandy and hilly, Sam would be four hours in getting there and return same day in three. No doubt he could have been driven 100 miles in ten hours."

Sam Weller is now sound and lively as a colt. Isn't it strange that a foal from one of the purest-gaited trotting stallions that ever lived, out of a thoroughbred dam, should be inclined to pace and could have been easily converted to a pacer? Isn't it stranger that the New England apostles of the Morgan and thoroughbred blood have allowed this horse that is such a splendid combination of the two factors to grow old in their very presence and not use him and, much more, not know of such a horse? Possibly it is not strange when we think that the two most powerful turf writers of the East, who for years have been advocating running blood in the trotter and both been breeding the trotter for years, never have, nor do they to-day, own a thoroughbred mare, nor a daughter of a thoroughbred mare, nor have either one of them ever bred a mare to a thoroughbred stallion. While beautiful and plausible in theory, they know that their "Woven Winds" and "Alclayones" are bred a long way off from the crazy-headed, tree climbing, break-necking stuff called thoroughbred blood.

"I had rather own Ethan Allen to-day," said our host, "for a gentleman's driving horse than any horse I ever saw in my life. He was a beautiful trotter, the perfection of gait, of style superior and he possessed intelligence of the highest order. He indeed was a grand horse. I often saw Rysdyk's Hambletonian and while he was a wonderful transmittor of speed, to drive on the road, to use in any capacity as companion for man, there was no comparison between the two horses. When I bought Ethan Allen he was twenty-two years old, yet I paid $7,000 for him. He died at Lawrence and after he had been buried some time, his body was taken up, hung on wires and placed in the Museum of the Kansas University.

"For Rhode Island I paid," continued Mr. Sprague, "$22,000; he was much faster than his record of 2:23; a large, handsome brown horse, weighing from 1,300 to 1,400 pounds according to condition. I regarded him as my best stock horse. He was in the race with George Wilkes at Narragansett in 1868 when that horse took his record of 2:22 and when Rhode Island took his record of 2:23½ over Fashion Course, N. Y., Oct. 27, 1868, he defeated George Wilkes and American Girl in 2:25 and 2:23½, and in another race he defeated Goldsmith Maid in a third and fourth heat in 2:26 and 2:26; he also in another defeated Lucy, 2:18½, in three heats. Rhode Island was brought back here from Kansas, in 1875 I think, sold to Mr. Sisson, of Stone Bridge, R. I., but unfortunately in being shipped down the bay on a steamer he contracted a cold, was taken sick and died."

As showing the remarkable progress made in breeding and the wonderful change in fashion in trotting stallions, and, moreover, showing what stallions were selected to preside, twenty-one years ago, over one of the largest breeding establishments in this country, we reproduce the following:

Stallion Roster
Kansas Stud Farm.

Ethan Allen. Bay, foaled 1849. By Hill's Black Hawk; blood of unknown. At 3 years and 6 months old, defeated Rose of Washington in 2:36, 2:39 and 2:42. Distanced Princess to harness in 2:25½. Also, distanced George M. Patchen, to a 100-pound wagon, in 2:28. With a running mate, defeated Dexter in 2:15, 2:16 and 2:19. (Here follow the names of the trotters of which he is the sire and grand-sire.) He is limited to ten mares, in addition to our own, at $500 cash the season.

Rhode Island. Brown, foaled 1859. By Whitehall; dam by Negro Baby, son of Tiger Whip. Whitehall, by North American, son of thoroughbred Sir Walter. (Here follow his performances and the noted trotters he had defeated.) Will serve at $50 the season.

Bourbon Chief Gray, foaled 1860. By Mambrino Chief; first dam Puss, by Gray Eagle; second dam —, by Sir Peter; third dam —, by Hambletonian; fourth dam by Aratus; fifth dam —, by American. Will serve at $50 the season.

Erie. Gray, foaled 1863. By Young America; dam Grant, by Roe's Abdallah Chief. Young America, by Hoagland's Gray Messenger; dam and granddam by Abdallah. Limited, to ten mares in addition to our own, at $50 the season.

St. Elmo. Brown, foaled 1860. By Alexander's Abdallah; dam a fast Bellfounder mare. He defeated Josh Goldust and McClellan in 2:30, 2:33½ and 2:33. Will serve at $50 the season.

St. Nicholas. Brown, foaled 1869. By American Clay; dam Fayette Belle (the dam of Mambrino Bertie), by Mambrino Chief. Will serve ten mares at $50 the season.

Bullock. Chestnut, foaled 1870. By Narragansett; dam Minnie by Abdallah. Narragansett, by Mambrino Pilot. Limited to ten mares at $50 the season.

Comus. Chestnut, foaled 1863. By Green's Bashaw; dam Topsy, by Propbet, son of Hill's Black Hawk, sire of Ethan Allen. Will serve at $25 the season. SPRAGUE & AKERS.

Address communications to B. F. Akers, Lawrence, Kansas.

At this day we are prone to criticize these stallions and their breeding, but we must remember that the Abdallah blood was then at the front and several of these stallions are intensely of Abdallah blood. Ethan Allen was then twenty-five years old and had six in the list, while his son, Daniel Lambert, was the sensational beauty of the land and had two in the list. Hambletonian, then twenty-five years old, had thirteen in the list. Volunteer, then twelve, had five in the list. George Wilkes, then eighteen years old, has no representative with a record of 2:20 or better. Dictator, eleven years old, had none. Electioneer, then six years old, was unknown, and still owned at Stony Ford, because no one would buy him. Blue Bell, twenty, had five in the list. Harold, ten, had none. Happy Medium, eleven, had none. Belmont, ten, had none. Mambrino Chief had been dead twelve years and has four in this list. Robert McGregor was then only three and Nutwood was four years old, and here was no Onward, Guy Wilkes or Red Wilkes. Surely since then the trotting horse has had a wonderful boom.

On a center table in one of the delightfully pleasant rooms at the home of Hon. Amasa Sprague lay a silver-plated horse shoe engraved with this inscription: "Mr. Amasa Sprague's sorrel mare, California Damsel, raised in Columbia County, N. Y., Died in Cranston, R. I. Trotted twenty-two races, winning twenty; fastest private trial 2:20 to a wagon in California. Fastest in public, 2:24½, in harness, Fashion Track, L. I."

The Year Book says: "California Damsel, ch m, foaled 1852, by Andrew Jackson, Jr., 612; dam not traced. Bred by Herman Mamm, Cleveland, O., Fashion Course, N. Y., Sept. 16, 1863, 2:25½." Andrew Jackson Jr. was foaled in 1848, sired by Black Hawk (Long Island) by Andrew Jackson, son of imp. Bashaw. He was bred and kept by Grosvenor Rossmen, Columbia County, N. Y., where he died in 1858. After California Damsel's wonderfully successful trotting career in California she was brought East and Mr. Sprague purchased her from John Crooks, paying $10,000. She was a very handsome mare, an elegant driver and her winning of twenty races out of twenty-two shows that she must have been not only a very fast mare but an ideal race horse. Mr. Sprague prized her highly, and had made for her a paddock wherein she could take exercise. One day she was turned into this paddock and in a few minutes she was found dead. Presumably death was caused by rupture of some blood vessels produced by excessive exertion in running.

"I was in New York one day, and Dan Mace said to me: 'Mr. Sprague, I now own Pocahontas and I would like to sell her to you for a broodmare. I told Dan that I had enough broodmares but would like to have her were she not so old as to make it very uncertain about getting her in foal. This we both thought was a chance game. However, I bought the old mare of Dan, paying him $1,000 for her. I then owned Ethan Allen and a five-year-old daughter of Pocahontas, sired by Ethan Allen, had been sold to Mr. Robert Bonner for $40,000. The old mare was a natural pacer, always paced, and it is very doubtful if any horse ever lived that could go faster than this daughter of Iron's Cadmus. She could fly—run away pacing. She was bred by John C. Dine, of Butler County, O., was foaled in 1847, and took her record in a race to wagon when quite advanced in foal, June 21, 1855—forty years ago, over Union Course, N. Y. I owned her about two years before she died. 'I tell you,' said Mr. Sprague, 'the trotters and pacers of to-day are no faster than those of years ago, only there are more of them and more attention is paid to their development, and all the paraphernalia of the business. Where is the pacer to-day rigged with the heavy harness, clumsy shoes, practically no boots, hitched to the old sulky of thirty or forty years ago, clumsier and heavier by far than the cart of to-day, that could pace a half mile in 58½ seconds as did Pocahontas?'

"That she was an extraordinary mare is further shown by the great amount of speed possessed and transmitted by her descendants. Talk about trotters! I stood with George C. Hall (the gentleman who owned the stallion Jay Gould in partnership with Henry N. Smith, and Jay Gould), and saw Lady Thorne trot a half in 1:04½. I am confident that Lady Thorne could trot as fast as any horse ever foaled. Across the road from near the entrance to Narragansett Park is the barn of the Park Stock Farm; in the rear of this barn, near the grove, are buried close together Pocahontas and California Damsel, but no stone or slab marks the spot.

"Belle Brandon was an awfully good mare," continued Mr. Sprague, "and a fast trotter. I bought Belle, that was a daughter of Hambletonian, from George B. Alley, of New York, paying him $5,000 for the two. Mr. Alley owned Dexter, buying him of his breeder, Jonathan Hawkins, for $400. The pair only mated as to sex and drove splendidly together. The stallion was rather faster than the mare to pole. I don't remember how the stallion was bred on his dam's side.

"In March of 1870 I bred Belle Brandon to Rhode Island (formerly called Dan Rice), and February 24, 1871, she foaled a black colt which was a lively, strong, good-gaited youngster and was a favorite with the boys in the stable, who called him Gov. Sprague and the named stayed with him. That fall I shipped some horses, I think Ethan Allen, Rhode Island and others to Kansas, and the little black son of Belle Brandon was sent along with them. He ran out with other youngsters at the farm until July, 1873, when he was broken to harness and in October of that year was sold to the Higbee Brothers, of Canton, Ill., for $1,500. He was a trotter from the beginning. Gov. Sprague started in his first race at Dexter Park, Chicago, July 20, 1876, in the 2:35 class, purse $1,500, and won over a field of seven in 2:21½, 2:29, 2:30½, and on the next day was sold to Hon. Jerome I. Case, of Racine, Wis., for $27,500. Of course Sprague had shown must faster in his work than this, having trotted a mile at Buffalo, during the meeting, in 2:21½ and the third quarter in 34 seconds. He was black with no white. He afterward trotted to a record of 2:20½. The year before Sprague was foaled Belle Brandon produced Cranston Belle, brother to Sprague. In 1875 Belle produced Amasa Sprague, another brother, record 2:29½, and now known as Wilmar. In 1865, before I owned Belle, she produced Amy, 2:20½, by Volunteer.

"Belle Brandon has another foal that I don't think has a record or was ever registered. He was sired by Ethan Allen and we called him Tommy, and he was a genuine 'jim crack.' "Yes," joined in Mrs. Sprague, "Tommy was the best of them all, for I could drive him and speed him too, and O, how handsome, stylish and intelligent he was!"

"That is so," rejoined Mr. Sprague. "Tommy was a wonderful horse; he only stood 14½ hands, weighed 800 pounds, but when he moved he was a big horse and weighed 1,000 pounds. That little game-cock beauty could haul two of us in a buggy down the road any time a quarter in 35 seconds. I believe he was sold to Pickard & Kuttriff, wholesale druggists of New York, but I long ago lost all track of him. It would be hard to find another such a horse with so many excellent qualities as had Tommy.

Laying aside the blood elements and considering individual excellency, we have two strong witnesses in Mr. and Mrs. Sprague when he declares that of the hundreds of horses he has owned, he to-day had rather have Ethan Allen than any of them and of the bright, well-informed wife in asserting that Tommy, son of Ethan Allen and Belle Brandon, was the best horse of all. Beyond question had Tommy not been such an ideal road horse, extremely fast without training, not so stylish, nor so beautiful, instead of passing his life in the private stable of a city gentleman he might have drifted into other channels and, possibly, overshadowed in fame his distinguished half-brother, Gov. Sprague.—Horse Breeder.

Winter Polo.

The first game of the winter polo tournament of the Burlingame Club was played last Saturday. The teams were: Reds—W. S. Hobart, Harold Wheeler and R. M. Tobin. Blues—C. A. Baldwin, Perry P. Eyre and H. R. Simpkins. The Reds played carefully and covered the field much more effectively than their opponents, finally winning by three goals to one and a quarter.

The winning team will play the remaining team on Sunday next at 3 p. m. This team will be S. S. Tobin, Malcolm Thomas and A. Fane-Wainwright. The teams are evenly matched and a fine game may be expected if the weather is good upon that day.

This match was to have been played on Saturday, but was postponed so as to give an opportunity to the patrons of the Horse Show to see this game, which is expected to be exciting and interesting.

THE greater bulk of the Fleischman horses have been retired to Winter quarters at the Oakley track, where they are housed in splendid quarters belonging to the stable. Halma retires in pretty fair shape, but by no means the Halma he was in the spring, when he was the champion three-year-old of the West. There are other good ones in the string, but none of them have been up to their best form during the fall, and the stable fared very badly both at Oakley and Latonia. Halma and Sherlock alone cost the Fleischmanns $33,000, but both went amiss shortly after their purchase. A couple of weeks ago it was stated in an Eastern paper that Fleischmann & Son would retire from the turf at the end of the present season, but the elder Fleischmann in a talk the other day denied this. He says he will have a strong stable next year, but that his horses will race exclusively in the East. It is said he has some grudge against the local tracks, growing in part out of the handicapping. It may be said here, however, that the handicapping at both tracks has, in the main, been very equitable indeed.

J. C. KIRKPATRICK, manager of the finest hotel in the world, The Palace, purchased the magnificent black gelding Harvey Mc, 2:15, last week. Harvey Mc got a record as a two-year-old of 2:1½, and lowered it this season to 2:15. He will be seen on the speed track in the Golden Gate Park hereafter. Mr. Kirkpatrick is one of our most enthusiastic oadites.

THE rumor that J. R. Keene is to purchase Bramble, the son of imp. Bonnie Scotland, that sired Clifford, Ben Brush and others, has been revived. It is not probable that Mr. Keene would purchase a stallion twenty-one years old, even though a great sire, unless the price was low, and it is not probable that Bramble's owner would sell him cheap.

THERE is not a newspaper published in the United States that has ever had one word to say in favor of foreign books or city pool rooms. The Supervisors who are in doubt about how to vote at the next meeting of the Board should remember this.

Barney Schreiber.

The names of Braw Scot, the good old grey gelding, and Jack Richelieu, both idols of local turf goers, are inseparable from Barney Schreiber, the genial horse owner and bookmaker who hails from St. Louis. He is so genial and whole-souled that his host of friends presume on his good nature and variously style him from plain Barney to most anything suggestive of his nature. He is out here again this winter, making book and racing horses. He does business under the firm name Doyle & Co., of St. Louis. Everyone is assured of most courteous treatment at his hands or any of his assistants.

His stable contains some very notable horses. Besides those above mentioned are Yemen, a record-breaker, and full brother to the sire of Domino, Ferris Hartman, a shifty horse and frequent winner, Thersia, who won from very good company last week, and others.

His business interests are so conducted as to have no interference between the ring and the stable, and he is always ready to back his own horses when they are out. They are always out to win, and Barney thinks they can win or they would not be there.

Barney Schreiber is among the many familiar figures of the betting ring during the past two seasons here, and every day makes additions to his already long list of friends.

An Object Lesson.

One of the most unique and instructive exhibits at the Midwinter Fair was the rare collection of plows of all nations. It was thought at that time when one contrasted the pointed stick plow of the Chileneans with the highly-finished, nickel-plated modern gang that the superlative degree of existence and utility had been reached. It would seem, however, that as great a revolution as from the primitive to the modern plow has just been made. Recently the Honorable Secretary of Agriculture wrote:

"I am inspired to allure the inventive genius of all interested to study the possibility of a plow which shall loosen and tear up the bottom of a furrow to a depth to say two or three inches below the cut of the plow. I do not mean to say the ground turned up, but simply to have it loosened, so that the rains may percolate below the depth of the furrow, instead of being forced to run off, as though the furrow were an eave trough. The object that I seek is to stir and separate the earth at a greater depth with the same plow than it is possible to stir or separate it with the contrivances or implements for plowing now in use."

We have at last just such a plow as the one demanded, and that meets all the above requirements and possesses the additional one of being the lightest draught plow known.—This great invention has just been perfected by the John Deere Co. of Moline, Ill. They say of it:

For a quarter of a century the revolving disk has been known as the best means of cutting and turning the soil, but the difficulty of keeping it at a uniform depth in the ground and in a straight line of progression, setting as it does at an angle to the furrow, has prevented any general success of it as a plow for opening up and turning the furrow.

We have been experimenting in this line some years, and have at last hit upon a hook-shaped tine which penetrates the soil, pulling the disk any desired depth and holding it to a straight furrow line.

In this we claim an invention of rare merit, and its operation has only to be seen to commend it.

In shallow tillage, with a cut, say four inches in depth, the leverage of the plow point against the earth, the whole weight of power of the team producing a downward pressure at the cutting edge of share, leaves the base of the furrow that is turned over smooth and hard. In fact, it renders it almost impervious to water. Therefore when a torrential rainfall comes upon land thus plowed and lying upon a land slope, the wash is enormous, and all the good surface earth is carried away. Furthermore, the water being unable to percolate through the subsoil, drains off and leaves the subsoil dry and hard.

By the use of the "Secretary" the ground is left in an entirely different condition. The disk scoops out the furrow, and in throwing it over thoroughly pulverizes it. The bottom of the furrow is left by the disk in its thoroughly natural condition; that is, there has been no downward pressure on or sliding over of the surface to make it hard and smooth. The penetrating point, which runs under the disk, thoroughly breaks and stirs up the subsoil, and leaves it in the best possible condition to receive and retain moisture. The result is that in very heavy rains, the water, instead of running off, will sink down into the subsoil, and when the dry weather comes on will be drawn up to supply moisture to the plants. Write to the Deere Implement Co. for illustrated circular giving complete description. Their number is 305-307 Market Street.

Napa Stock Farm.

This well-known breeding farm is located at Napa, and is owned by Prof. E. P. Heald, president of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association. In the past, very few of the horses bred at this farm had been trained, but it is the intention of the proprietor to train quite a number of the get of Pilot Prince and other popular sires during the coming season. Notwithstanding the few that have been worked at this farm, the following campaigners have been turned out from this establishment: Gold Medal 2:14½, Nevada 2:23, Nona Y 2:25, Irene 2:25, Directa 2:28, Mollie Patton, 2:28½, etc.

The sires at the Napa Stock Farm are: Pilot Prince, Dexter Prince Jr., and Prince Howard. All these stallions are sired by that celebrated horse Dexter Prince, now at the Palo Alto Stock Farm. Great faith is expressed by thoughtful horsemen in the future of this popular family of horses. Pilot Prince and Dexter Prince Jr. are full brothers, but quite different in gait and conformation. Pilot Prince is a "Nutwood" in gait, disposition and appearance, while Dexter Prince Jr. is a perfect counterpart of his noted sire. It is confidently believed that this young horse will eventually become as equally celebrated as his sire in the breeding line and keep up the popularity already acquired by that family. The dam of these two young horses was Emma Nutwood, by Nutwood, second dam Lady Emma (the early day campaigner of California), by McCracken's Black Hawk; third dam by Gen. Taylor; fourth dam by Belmont (Williamson's). The dam of Prince Howard is the well-known mare Norma (dam of Grandee, 2:23½, and Grandissimo, 2:23½), by Arthurton, second dam Nourmahal, a full sister to A. W. Richmond.

Nourmahal was brought to California by that veteran turf writer, Jos. Cairn Simpson, and was herself celebrated as a five and ten-mile campaigner. Prince Howard promises to be as fast as any of his noted relatives and will be trained for the races after the stud season is over.

The broodmares at the Napa Stock Farm are among the best in the State, and many of the younger colts growing up promise to become celebrated in the racing world. Quite a number of these will be trained the coming season, as it is believed that next year will offer a good opportunity for those who have good colts to win money with them. Notwithstanding the hard times good purses will be given next season throughout the Pacific Coast circuit, and the trotting horse interest in California is certainly looking up. Now is the time for trainers to pick up good material, and they will certainly find the investment a profitable one.

George Rose.

Every one who knows a horse race from a rabbit drive knows who George Rose is, and everyone favored with his acquaintance has but one thing to say of him: "He is a gentleman, sir." Always courteous, whether you meet him on the street, or on the block, and your little bets are taken with as gracious a smile as the largest ever offered. In his dealings with the crowds that frequently surge around his board he is quick and accurate, and yet so cool and deliberate as to enable him to handle a vast amount of business in a very short time. Mr. Rose has been a successful layer of odds now for several years. He early developed a desire to have the business end of matters in his own hands and has been successful in all his ventures. Last fall he made a bid for the bookmaking privilege at the State Fair and secured it over all competitors on his bid of $15,600, which was $6,000 more than the association had netted from commissions on bets the previous year. The venture proved a good one, Mr. Rose clearing $5,000 during the two weeks' meeting.

He also owns and manages quite a racing stable, and it contains such good ones as Geraldine, recently purchased, Nephew, Empress of Norfolk and others. He sold a few months since Mulberry and Leonville. There has never been any clashing of interests between the stable and the book, and both have been run wholly independent of each other.

Frank Eckert.

All the followers of the turf through the Western States are very familiar with the firm name of Eckert & Co., and all, at one time or another, must have had dealings with the courteous gentleman who takes in the coin and passes out the pasteboard equivalents. He has been seen on all the Western and Southern tracks, as well as some in the East, but makes Chicago his headquarters. In 1892 and again in 1893 he made book at the local track, and made money both years. This winter the familiar name was seen among those to draw in the first day at the new track, and the block it surmounts is always the center of attraction for a large number of the speculative gentlemen who are constantly on the lookout for 'Le best odds.

Mr. Eckert is an expert and successful bookmaker, and is not afraid to give his customers the very best going. His success in the past guarantees him a continuance of good fortune. Every bookmaker has his individualities and little tricks that the public become familiar with. Mr. Eckert tumbles a handful of half-dollars over each other in the palm of his hand in such a way as to give out a very pleasing musical jingle and then stocks them up so they emit a clear, metallic ring. Unconsciously he keeps up the rhythm of sound while the talent is sizing up his board, and none can imitate him.

Summerfield & Co.

Like all others who have once felt the seductive influence of a winter in California, Sam Summerfield was not content to remain the other side of the mountains, and shortly before the Ingleside track opened he put in an appearance here. Last winter the firm of which he is a member made book on the Bay District races, and was among those to draw in during the last few days of the recent meeting there. Mr. Summerfield has been following the business for seven or eight years, meeting with very general success. His business has been mostly confined to the Western tracks, Chicago, his home, being the center of operations. About two years ago Mr. John T. Miner became associated with Mr. Summerfield, and these two constitute the firm above named. Both have keen business tact, and are very conservative in their dealings in the ring. Affable and generous, they well merit the success that attends them. During the current meeting at Ingleside they have been among those to draw the higher numbers each time they cut in, and have been "down the line," but their patrons always find them out.

A WESTERN horseman in attendance at the sales asked why, if the society element patronized the New York horse show so extensively that the management were enabled to clear nearly one hundred thousand dollars in the six days, it did not patronize the race tracks in proportion. "The answer is very simple," answered the gentleman to whom the question was addressed. "Racing is not conducted on the society standard. There is too much democracy of the unpleasant kind. The flashy young man and the shady young woman, if—as Chimmy Fadden says—they have the price, can rub elbows with the young daughters of the millionaire, and while, theoretically, one fellow is as good as another in this land of the free, the society people do not see it in that way, and there you are. If the racing season was confined to about six weeks a year, the riff-raff and tin-horn gambling element kept within bounds at a comfortable distance, and the too general pandering of some race track managers to the very worst elements of society curbed, I believe that we would see an outpouring similar to the horse show crowds on the grand stands of Morris Park and other metropolitan courses, as was amply foreshadowed at the late Westchester club's meeting."—Horseman.

REQUITAL is without doubt the best colt of the year, and goes into winter quarters with laurels of many a good, hard-fought race to his credit. He won the great Futurity with ease. Then comes Crescendo, Hastings, Hazlett, Ben Brush, One I Love, Handspring, Applegate, Prince Lief, Bloomer, Margrave, Refugee, Patrol, Floretta IV, Woodvine, Merry Prince, Formal, Ahuse, Wishard, Ramiro, Argentine, Captive, Damsel, Silver II, Hamilton II, Del Paso, St. Agnes, Sapelo. The first eight named have proved to be the star performers of the season with Requitil heading the list. All of these colts are very likely to be seen in their three year-old form, and all sound, except Applegate and Hastings. These first named have all shown decidedly the highest form of the year. Among these promising youngsters no colors will be oftener seen in front the coming season more than Messrs. Keene's, "the white, blue spots," of which they are bound to be prominent.

INGLESIDE TRACK, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1895.

The track to-day was of various conditions. Next the rail it was soft and heavy, while on the outside it was hard and dry. The hoof beats resounded distinctly as the fields came down the homestretch, and little puffs of dust followed each lifting of the foot. Undersuch conditions, the result of more than one race was materially affected by the course of the jockeys. It was an open question whether it were better to turn wide and come on the dry track or to save distance and hug the rail in softer going. The results proved the advantage was with the dry strip, as the winners came from there. Another day or so of dry weather and the track should be in excellent shape.

With more certain transportation facilities, the attendance at the track shows an increase, and the betting ring was well filled all afternoon. Nearly all the races were good betting affairs.

Wednesday being "Ladies Day," with a free gate for the fair sex, the grandstand will, no doubt, be well filled.

Three favorites won this afternoon, and the two other winners were at the very comfortable odds of 7 and 7½ to 1.

Toano, the favorite at post time in the first race, at five and a half furlongs, won cleverly after cutting Carmel off in the stretch. Sir Richard, a very popular second choice, was outside the money, while Carmel, 30 to 1, and Piquante, 15 to 1, finished second and third. Mainstay ran a very poor race. He was backed down in the betting from 4 to 2½ to 1, and looked a likely winner. He was back in the rack at the finish. Time, 1:11½.

Strathmeath, ridden to a nicety by Willie Martin, came on the outside in the stretch and showed a length in front of Basso at the wire, in the second race, at a mile, the latter four lengths ahead of Collins. Basso was favorite all the time, going from 2 to 1 to 8 to 5. Montana was played heavily, being hacked from 4 to 3 to 1, but receded a point or two before the close. He ran around the backstretch in a good position but fell back from third on the turn to fifth. Time, 1:46.

The third race was at six furlongs, for two-year-olds, with eight starters. Sallie Cliquot ruled favorite, and Kamsin and Miss Brummel had their friends. Redington was at shorter odds than the balance. Sallie Cliquot raced out in front at the flag-fall and came into the stretch three lengths to the good. Miss Brummel was next up, with Kamsin lapping the latter, in which order they finished. Redington spurred up to the leaders on the backstretch, but slacked up again before the turn for home was made. Time, 1:17½.

The fourth event was a selling race, at six furlongs. Shield Bearer was a 9 to 5 favorite, with Billy S. at 2½ to 1, May McCarty at 4 to 1, was the only other short-ender. Billy S. showed first to a fair start for all except Johnny Payne, but Cochran sent Shield Bearer to the front at once and paid strict attention to keeping his mount there. Billy S. could not get nearer than a length of the pacemaker, with Red Bird trying to get up to Billy. Sligo passed the Bird on the far turn, and then on to the wire positions were not changed, Shield Bearer winning easily by two lengths, Billy S. four lengths in front of Sligo. Time, 1:18¾.

The last race was at six furlongs, for three-year-olds and upwards. Service was the pick of the talent and was believed to be a cinch. Chartreuse receded from thirty to 13½ to 2. Hidalgo opened at 3 and receded a point by post time, after receiving warm support. Chartreuse was first to show, but Abi P. headed her on the backstretch, and she in turn gave way to Hidalgo. Chartreuse made the turn for home third and ran wide onto the dry strip of track and reached the wire a head in front of Abi P., who was in the worst going. Hidalgo was third. Time, 1:18.

Winning jockeys to day were Hennessy, W. Martin, Chorn, Cochran and Tod Sloan.

INGLESIDE TRACK, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1895.

To-day was Ladies' Day, and from the way the fair sex flocked out to the track and filled the grandstand it was evident they intend to take advantage of the favor accorded, and hereafter Wednesdays will be a day of big crowds. They began to arrive early to day, and continued to arrive even after it had become late for the regular turf devotees. Many of the ladies who wanted to see the races had not fully made up their minds about it in time to get there before 3 o'clock, but they came along when they got ready and made the most of the events remaining. Of course many brought their brothers, or some one else's brother, and the male attendance was very materially augmented by the free gate for the ladies. The attendance was estimated at fully 7,000, over 4,000 of whom were ladies.

The races throughout were of a very high class and exciting and game finishes were more the order than has been the case on any other occasion. Honors were divided between the talent and the hookies, though, no doubt, the latter had the best of the day's innings over Grannan's heavy plunge on Basso.

The track was improving very rapidly, and if the weather had remained propitious for a few days the question of the speed of the new course would have been fully answered.

The first race was at five and one-half furlongs, selling, for two-year-olds, with ten starters. Princess Noretta opened favorite at 6 to 5, was played to even money, and finally, when everyone had got their money on, drifted back to 6 to 5 again. Rummel, A. B. Spreckels' big two-year-old, was a very warm second choice, opening at 5 to 2 and backed to 8 to 5. All the others went back in the betting from want of support. Harry Griffin, the crack jockey, had his first mount here this winter on Princess Noretta, which, no doubt, had some weight in the betting. Princess Noretta headed Rey del Bandidos after he had led a short way, but Rummel was kept within striking distance, and turned into the stretch a head behind the Princess. Rummel, turning wide, came on the dry track and drew away easily, winning by five lengths. Princess Noretta finished second, but a head in front of Doubtful.

The event of the day was the match race between Basso and Strathmeath, at a mile. The former carried 91 pounds and Strathmeath 107, the same weights carried in their race the day before. Willie Martin again had the mount on the erstwhile Derby winner, but Boh Isom rode the son of Falsetto in place of Garner. Dan Honig's light weight. Mr. Honig was stake-holder and did not want his jockey to ride on that account. Strathmeath ruled favorite in the betting at 4 to 5 and 7 to 10, while 6 to 5 was to be had against Basso, though most of the books stuck pretty close to 11 to 10. The start was made at once. Mr. Caldwell called the jockeys over to him, gave them instructions how to come up with their mounts, and as they passed the starter on even terms the flag cleaved the air and they were off. Basso made a spurt for the rail on the first turn and secured it, then eased up. At the quarter-pole he led by three lengths, galloping easily. Strathmeath moved up a little on the backstretch, and while negotiating the last turn the magenta showed in front. Then a mighty shout went up from the backers of the winner of the classic event. Both horses turned wide into the stretch and Strathmeath came through on the inside. About half-way home Basso responded so promptly to Isom's urging and moved up with such apparent ease that it seemed to be all over. Basso got his head in front of Strathmeath, then the old gelding came again and drew away so easily that Isom went to the hat, but without avail. Strathmeath rated along easily, Martin looking back, and won by a half a length. Basso was under whip but could not get up, and clearly gave way before the better horse. The race was a slow one, 1:44 being hung up.

The third race five-eighths selling comprised the best field of sprinters seen for a long time on a California track. There were ten entries, each of which had its supporters, and in consequence the odds were good on the winner. Babe Murphy was the favorite at from 2 to 2½, Olive was second choice, going to the post at 4 to 1, while Yemen was 20 and Old Rico 100 to 1. Pat Murphy by refusing to break, spoiled an excellent start on the first attempt to get away. Delay was still further created through the bad acting of Fly. When the flag dropped it was to a good start with Rico in the lead, followed by Olive, Babe Murphy and Pat Murphy. At the half Miss Gentry had assumed the lead, with George Dickerson second, and Fly third. At the three-quarters Fly was in front, with Miss Gentry three lengths back and Olive third. Into the stretch Fly maintained his lead by a length, but from there out the stronger sprinters came to the front, with the result of Babe Murphy finishing first by half a length in a drive, Olive second and Yemen third. Time, 1:02¾.

The fourth race was at seven-eighths with seven starters. McFarlane was the favorite at 8 to 5, Sir George was 2 to 1, E. H. Shirley from 6 to 8 to 1, while Outright opened at 50 but went to the post 30 to 1. Charmer got away in the lead, with Outright, Sir George and E. H. Shirley next in order—the favorite McFarlane being last. At the first quarter McFarlane led by two lengths, Outright second by two lengths, Charmer third. At the second quarter they ran in the same order but a length only separating each, with Shirley still fourth. Coming into the stretch Outright was in the lead, Charmer second by a head, McFarlane third, and Shirley a length back. Down the stretch these four horses came in a line with Shirley slowly gaining until the wire was passed with Shirley a winner by two lengths and Outright second a head in the lead of Sir George. Time, 1:32½.

The fifth race was also at seven-eighths but between a higher class of horses than the preceding one. There were six starters. All Over was favorite at even money, Fannie Louise, on whom there was a big play, opened at 3 and went to the post 2 to 1. Little Boh opened at 10 and receded to 15 to 1. Schnitz at 50 to 1 was the outsider with considerable money played on him. Jack Richelieu went off in the lead, Schnitz second, followed by All Over, Fannie Louise Little Boh being last. Fannie Louise soon went to the front and at the first quarter led by a length with Jack Richelieu second, Schnitz third and All Over fourth. At the second quarter Fannie Louise still led by a length, with All Over in second position, while Jack Richelieu had gone back to fourth place. Fannie now increased her lead to two lengths but All Over again reduced this to one length when turning into the stretch, down which All Over steadily gained on the leader and finished a winner by two lengths with Fannie Louise second two lengths from Jack Richelieu. Time, 1:30½.

The sixth race was at one mile with eight starters. Collins was the favorite at 2 to 1, Candid 3½, Our Maggie 4 and Remus 6 to 1, Josephine at 100 to 1. When the horses broke, Remus, who had the outside, was pulled up, but Sloan seeing that he was spoiling a good start, drove his steel into the sides of his mount and off they went with our Maggie in the lead, Candid second, and Garcia third. Josephine, Collins, Our Maggie was the order at the first quarter, while Candid had fallen back to fifth position. Our Maggie, Collins, Montalvo well hunched was the order at the half. Here Remus came around his field from the rear with a surprising burst of speed and entered the stretch a leader, followed by Our Maggie and Montalvo, Candid was next, not over a length separating all four horses. A hot drive for the wire ensued, resulting in Candid winning by one length, Our Maggie second and Collins third. Time, 1:44½.

Maiden Bell Dead.

W. O. B. Macdonough has suffered another great loss in the death of Maiden Bell, one of his imported English mares that came over to America with Ormonde. She died yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. She was in foal to Ormonde, which makes the loss all the more. Maiden Bell was by Beau Brummel and cost $7,500 in England. The fact, however, that she was the dam of Santa Bella had increased her value very materially. Maiden Bell was taken with colic at 2 o'clock in the morning, and despite the efforts of Dr. O'Rourke died several hours later. This is the third loss by death that Mr. Macdonough has suffered in the past month, including the celebrated Ormonde-Getaway colt.—Chronicle.

ROD.

Are They Trout or Salmon?

The Columbia river fishermen, others along the Coast and the San Francisco marketmen have combined forces in a pool for the purpose of fighting the law against catching steelhead trout (salmo gairdneri) other than with hook and line in tide water.

On Saturday, November 21st, the fishermen of Swauger's Station held a meeting and completed a permanent organization. Committees were appointed and $230 was subscribed to assist the pool.

Deputy Fish Commissioner W. P. Huestis reports that he has been informed that the Eureka and Eel River Railroad Company have promised to contribute to the fund.

The San Francisco marketmen have secured the services of a prominent lawyer, and propose to act at once. Their plan is as follows: Parties on the Columbia will ship a steelhead to this market, where it will be offered for sale. Deputy Fish Commissioner Babcock will purchase the fish, and will be given a bill of sale for the same. Mr. Babcock will then arrest the seller, and the Attorney-General will prosecute the case. Professor David Starr Jordan will then be called upon to tell the court whether the fish is a true trout or a salmon.

The steelhead question has been a bone of contention between practical anglers for many years. The majority do not agree with the learned President of the Stanford University, and believe the steelhead to be a distinct species of salmon.

Under the present law steelheads may be caught by hook and line in tide water at any time, but they cannot be caught by net at any time, and in fresh water can only be caught during the open season for trout, from April 1st to November 1st. The fishermen wish to net them during the open season for salmon, from November 1st to August 31st.

The question is whether the steelhead is a salmon or a trout. Professor Jordan has already given his opinion in his article on the "Salmon and Trout of the Pacific Coast" in the report of the State Board of Fish Commissioners for 1893-4.

The portion of the article relating to steelheads is as follows:

Another California trout is the so-called steel-head, often known in California as salmon trout, a fish really very much like the salmon trout of Europe. The name comes from the color of its head and the hardness of the bones of its skull as compared with the bones of the Quinnet salmon. The steel head is found very abundantly in the mouth of the Columbia and other rivers at the time of the salmon run. Its usual weight in the Columbia is about twelve pounds, but it occasionally reaches twenty or twenty-five pounds. The fishes seen in the river mouth at the time of the early salmon runs are evidently spent fishes. They are lean and lank, the flesh is pale and poor, and the bones are hard, for all of which reasons it is, or ought to be rejected by the canners, although there is no doubt that the steel-head, when taken at its best, may be one of the finest of all trout. It certainly reaches a larger average size than any other real trout in any country. Its scientific name is Salmo gairdneri, named for Dr. Gairdner, of Fort Vancouver, who first discovered the species. The fact that these fishes are spent in the spring would indicate a spawning time later than that of the salmon—probably midwinter—they are probably found in the rivers at this time, because they are returning toward the sea. Steel-heads are most abundant in the Columbia, but they are common in the Sacramento, as well as in the Klamath, the Eel River and the streams about Monterey. It is not unlikely that the most of the trout in the coastwise streams of northwestern California belong to these species.

Comparing the Steel-heads with the Rainbow trout, I find no differences, other than that the former is of much larger size and has a larger mouth, and its caudal fin is square at tip instead of forked. But the tail becomes less forked and the mouth larger with age in all species of salmon and trout. If a Rainbow trout were to reach the size of the Steel-head, it ought to acquire character similar to those of the latter species. It is not at all unlikely that the Steel head is simply a Rainbow trout which has descended into the sea and which has grown larger and coarser, and acquired somewhat different form and habits on account of its food and its surroundings. If this be true, the very young Steel-heads would not be distinguishable from the young Rainbow trout, and I do not know a single structural character of any kind by which the two may be separated. Dr. Gilbert writes me that at Astoria he can distinguish young Steel-heads in the brooks from the Rainbow trout that live with them. In California neither he nor I have yet been able to do this. In every other case of closely related species there is some mark, some difference in the number of scales or bones, by which we can tell the species of trout, the one from the other; but in the case of the Steel-head there is absolutely no such difference. The Rainbow trout is a small, plump fish, found in the fresh-water streams, and having certain peculiarities of form and coloration. In every internal respect, in every bone and every part of its structure, the Steel-head and the Rainbow trout agree. It is still one of the unsettled problems connected with the fisheries of California whether the Steel-head is a distinct kind of trout, or whether any Rainbow trout, placed in the ocean or the river mouth, and allowed to feed on the rich food which the salmon gets, would not, in time, develop into a Steel-head regardless of the form of its parents. The evidence, so far as it is in, is conflicting. There are some things which go to show that the two are distinct fishes. Other evidence would show that they are simply forms of the same thing, and a still more thorough study of the coastwise streams of this State is necessary before this point can be settled. If the two are absolutely the same, then the name Salmo irideus must drop from our lists, because the Steel-head was first introduced to science and the name of Salmo gairdneri is the oldest.

It remains to be seen whether the Professor is still of the same opinion.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

The October number of the Fox Terrier Chronicle just at hand contains a very interesting description of Mr. Vicary's noted kennel of fox terriers.

C. J. Hebert's pointer bitch Doris is doing such good work as a field dog her owner has decided not to run her in the All-Age stake. He thinks he can't spare her that long.

A meeting of the Association was held on the evening of the 19th inst. at Newton, N. C. It was decided to make a gift of the balance in the treasury, $30 and a few cents, to the Champion Field Trial Club and to disband the association, which was done accordingly at an adjourned meeting on the 21st inst.

The meeting of the Interstate Coursing Club at Merced next week promises to be one of the biggest meetings ever held by that popular club. The enclosed parks have deferred their meets in courtesy to the Interstate Club and the attendance will be unusually large. The fare for the round trip is only $5. The draw took place last evening, too late for insertion in these columns, but at present it is expected that at least sixty dogs will be entered.

NOTICE TO IDIOTS.—Whenever you see a dog pant in hot weather or act strangely, kill it. If possible, collect a crowd of other idiots, and stone it to death, or treat it in such a way that it hits you in self defence. Then you are sure it is mad. The dog, of course, is not mad, and is, as a rule, by far the most intelligent actor in scenes of this description. To one case of rabies there are thousands of human idiots whose good luck it is that the dogs possess wiser instincts than themselves.—Life.

The entries to the Bridgeport show numbers 295, divided as follows: Mastiffs 1, St. Bernards 23, Great Danes 4, Russian wolfhounds 2, greyhounds 11, pointers 24, setters 56, Clumber spaniels 2, field spaniels 5, cocker spaniels 31, foxhounds 10, Chesapeake Bay dogs 1, collies 13, poodles 2, bulldogs 7, bullterriers 9, Boston terriers 9, Dachshunds 1, beagles 12, foxterriers 30, Irish terriers 6, Scotch terriers 1, Bedlington terriers 3, Skye terriers 5, Dandie Dinmont terriers 1, black and tan terriers 6, Yorkshire terriers 3, pugs 7, Italian greyhounds 3, whippets 3, miscellaneous 5.

The man that cannot see any merits in any dog but his own or any breed but the one he is interested in: the man that wrote that infamous report of the last Pacific Coast Field Trials in the American Field says that kennel editors should make the best kind of delegates to the American Kennel Club. As usual we do not agree with him. A kennel editor should be free to praise or censure the actions and rulings of any and all clubs. This he cannot do if he be an officer of that club or a delegate to any parent club. A man cannot censure himself with a very good grace though we all know that "Grandpa" is an adept at praising himself. It has always been our theory that no kennel editor should accept any office, judge any show or field trial or act as delegate to any club. He cannot do justice to either his paper or his position when acting in any of these capacities.

The Eastern Field Trials.

We give below the summaries of the Derby and All-Age Stakes of the Eastern Field Trials, as given in current American Field:

THE DERBY.

Sanford Druid with Rancocas Belle.

III

Jingo with Harold Skimpole.
Tippoo with Tick Boy.
1st—Jingo.
2nd—Harold Skimpole.
3rd—Tony Boy and Tippoo.

Hints to Budding Fanciers.

If you have no love for man's best friend, and cannot appreciate his many good qualities, take up pigeons, poultry, rabbits, flowers, or some other hobby, but if you must try dogs, then go to a dog show, two dog shows or more if necessary, also learn something of the different varieties from books, and when quite decided as to the kind you like most, get some really good specimens, secure the guidance of one experienced for your first selections and learn all you can from his experience, says the Amateur Sportsman.

Presuming you have made a wise selection in having a small breed if your space is limited, sporting dogs if you are fond of the gun or sport, and the larger kinds if you have ample space for kennel and exercise, the first matter for consideration will be the kennel arrangements. The space vacant under the stoop, and many similar places have been used, and experience dearly bought for warmth, ventilation, a dry situation, light, freedom from draughts, are all important to health, and consequently to success, either financially, or in competition in the field, or on the bench. If a barn is selected, drains should be seen to and manure heaps removed, for disease attacks dogs as well as other animals. If there are trees, remember that whilst they give shade that is much needed during the summer, they will keep off the sunshine in the other months and render the situation damp and cold, and it is an easy matter to allow creepers to run up the fence, giving all the shade required and avoiding other detrimental influences.

Dogs must not be kept too confined to sleeping quarters, and the runs should be large enough for romping, and twice a day, first when let out from the sleeping quarters in the morning, and after feeding in the evening, a run across the field will help materially in keeping them in health and their coats in good condition. The run should be the ground, not cemented or asphalt, for such will be found ruinous to the feet, and in no way conducive to the general welfare. For the floor of their sleeping quarters, to insure a greater degree of cleanliness and an easy way of keeping away odors, these materials may be used, but boards must be provided for their beds. In warm climates bedding is unnecessary during the summer, and as fleas breed in straw and other materials generally in use, the dogs are better without any. Leaves, salt meadow hay, straw and wood shaving will be found very suitable for winter litter, and draughts must not be allowed to go through the sleeping quarters, or sickness and loss of vigor will result. A bench well above the floor, that may be turned back when the quarters are cleansed and so fixed that the dogs may be snug and warm, with the sides somewhat sloping to a central flat space, according to the size of the dog, for it will be found that after a day afield, more rest can be obtained by dogs so provided for, and, if allowed to select their own sleeping quarters, such like positions will be chosen.

As to feeding. For various reasons many use biscuits specially made for dogs, which may be given as the makers instruct. At any of the large kennels feeding time is but once a day, towards evening; and if the sporting, hardy or large breeds are kept, raw meat is given once or twice a week in the winter, and other days the meat is broiled in a large pot, given when well cooked, and in the broth corn, wheat middlings and oatmeal is mixed with carrots, onions, turnips, tomatoes, heels, cabbage or other vegetable in small proportions, and when well boiled it is allowed to cool, when it may be cut up and fed.

Dogs are carnivorous and need flesh diet to some extent, and excepting, perhaps, those of the pet dog persuasion, a little raw meat occasionally is needed and may be given to pups soon after weaning with benefit. Our remarks as to feeding do not apply to pups, for those just weaned will require food at least three times a day; when five to ten months twice daily may do, and after this the matured dog system may be adopted.

Pacific Kennel Club

The regular monthly meeting of the Pacific Kennel Club was held at the Occidental Hotel Wednesday evening, Pres. H. Bier in the chair. After the regular routine business the question of showing dogs with cropped ears was discussed and the secretary was requested to instruct Mr. James Mortimer, the club's delegate to the American Kennel Club, to vote against the proposed resolution prohibiting the showing of cropped dogs at American Kennel Club shows.

The proposed rule does not affect the bull terrier classes materially, as the breeders purchase dogs of that variety from England when they want new blood; and in England cropping is prohibited. With the Great Danes, however, it would work a positive injury, as the best Danes come from Germany, where all Danes are cropped. If imported specimens could not be shown it would injure the future of that breed.

Article 6 of the Constitution was changed so that seven members will constitute a quorum, in place of ten.

The Bench Show Committee reported having secured the option of the Mechanics' Pavilion for May 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, for the next bench show. The question of judges then came before the meeting, and the members present all favored James Mortimer, of New York, as judge of all classes at the next show.

He Did Not Use Ferrets.

I recently met two rabbit hunters in the road, and entered into conversation with one of them. While talking I noticed a peculiar scratching noise, which seemed to proceed from a game bag carried at his back.

"Surely you are not using a ferret to hunt rabbits with," I remarked.

"Of course not," he replied.

"What have you in the bag, then?"

"Oh! that is a little bird," said he, and at once pulled out a small turtle, or tortoise, which had a small chain attached to a hole drilled through its shell. He then told me how he used it, by rubbing some phosphorous on the shell, and entering the turtle in the rabbit hole. When he pulled a little on the chain it would start the turtle along, and by that method he kept the little fellow moving. When the rabbit saw the phosphorous shining in the darkness of the burrow, it would light out at the most convenient place in a great fright.

"It's a great scheme," said he, "and is equal to a ferret to drive rabbits out of a common burrow; and there is no law against it."

I was considerably amused, and somewhat interested, but was inclined to take the statement cum grano salis. Yet, it might work at certain times and places. It seemed to be a novel idea, at least, and a new one to the writer.—Shooting and Fishing.

Irish Setter Trials.

The field trials of the Irish Setter Club began at High Point on Monday last. The entries were as follows:

IRISH SETTER DERBY.

Dr. Wm. Jarvis' bitch Signora, by Signal—Olive, whelped July 20, 1894.

Dr. Wm. Jarvis' bitch Signorina, same litter.

F. E. White's bitch Mollie Gibson, by Dakin—Jessie Fremont, whelped October 13, 1894.

Alfred von Cotzhausen's bitch Lady Finglass, by Finglass—Lady May Swiveller, whelped March 21, 1894.

IRISH SETTER STAKES.

W. L. Washington's dog Finglas, by Fingel III—Aveline, whelped April 13, 1890.

Dr. G. G. Davis' bitch Loo, by Finglass—Curren Belle IV whelped July, 1893.

Muckross Kennel's dog Hennesse Shamrock, by Muskerry—Avoca, whelped January 28, 1888.

James B. Blossom's bitch Squaw, by Dorrah Pat—Ruby Glencho, whelped April, 1890.

Alfred von Cotzhausen's bitch Lady Finglas, by Finglas—Lady May Swiveller, whelped March 21, 1894.

W. F. Worthington called at this office on Wednesday with his R. C. St. Bernard dog King Frisco, by Reglov—Queen Bess, and to say that he is a good one is putting it mild. His head is phenomenal for his age. At eight months old his muzzle measured 16 inches with skull in proportion. His ears are small and fairly well carried, blaze good, good white nose and dark shadings and good expression, barring eyes a trifle light in color. Bone very good, 11 inches at elbow. Coat good, tail excellent. He is straight but a trifle thin in second thigh. If he keeps on at his present rate he will make one of the largest and best dogs on the coast. Dr. Regensburger is very proud of him and justly so, as he has owned, or does own, the sire, dam, grandam and great grandam.

The entries to the Pacific Coast Field Trials Clubs All-Age stake closed on December 1st, but the first fell on Sunday and they should have been in on Monday night at the latest. Those from the south should have been received on Tuesday or Wednesday. On Thursday afternoon the entries, as usual, were not obtainable. So our readers will have to wait another week for this information. We earnestly hope that a secretary will be elected next year that will attend to business.

The well-known pug, Mrs. Brittan's Champion Bradford Marvel, will be shown at the Westminster Kennel Club show before coming out to the Coast. Marvel has won sixty-two first and special prizes and should not be far from the top at the coming show.

Mr. McNulty has sold through Hugh McCracken, the pointer dog Blithedale, by Upton of Blithe—Junio H., to Arthur Sherman: Dinuba, Cal.

Anyone desiring to purchase a Japanese spaniel should consult our advertising columns.

THE GUN.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Goose shooting is said to be excellent at Brentwood now.

The Empires did not have their usual luck Sunday at Black Point.

Wm. McCrae and two friends were at Antioch on Sunday. They bagged forty or fifty ducks.

D. B. Alden made one of the banner bags of the season at Suisun on Sunday. He got 126 ducks.

Achille Roos was at the San Pablo preserve on Sunday and bagged 37 ducks, including several canvasbacks.

Frank Hart, J. Robert Mead and Fred Swift bagged 236 ducks at Jewett's near Portland, Oregon, last Sunday week.

Otto Feudner's hand-loaded shells are getting to be more popular than ever. His patrons keep him busy loading.

The Board of Governors of the California Inanimate Target Association will meet at the Olympic Club rooms next week.

Lloyd Eaton and Chas. Deitz were at the Mallard Club's ark on Sunday. They walked up a couple of dozen, mostly mallards.

Governor Budd is reported to have killed twenty ducks without a miss on the Traylor Pond at the Teal preserve one day last week.

A number of American sportsmen have purchased large tracks of land in the caribou country—Newfoundland—to be used as game preserves.

The next tournament of the California Inanimate Target Association will undoubtedly be held in Stockton and it will be well worth attending.

R. Liddle & Co. have just received a new line of sweaters, tights and athletic goods, also a new line of wooden duck decoys. Call and examine them.

When you go to the Bridges duck shooting, take a me tackle along and have a try at the grilse. They are running up Coyote creek in goodly numbers.

Two of the best bags made this season. D. McCrae's 70 big ducks at Teal and W. N. Wetmore's 117 at the Bridges were made with 45 grains of "Gold Dust."

Donald McCrae was among the lucky ones at Teal station Sunday. He is always a reliable shot and good hunter, but on Sunday he excelled himself. He got 70 ducks and a swan. The ducks included 21 canvas back.

Bell's ark is anchored at Espino a Station and the evening train stops within a very short walk of the ark. There is plenty of unpreserved ground in that vicinity where excellent duck, goose or snipe shooting can be had.

L. P. Bolsander got 55 ducks at McGill's on Saturday and Sunday. Dr. S. E. Knowles was at the club during the middle of the week and got 63. The shooting was very good on this marsh on Saturday, but on Sunday it was poor.

The good bags of duck were confined to the Suisun marsh last Sunday. The Sonoma marsh was deserted by the ducks, and with the exception of San Pablo the bags were very light all along the bay. At Alviso there were thousands of ducks, but very few were bagged.

C. W. Burgins brought home 16 ducks from Alvarado on Sunday last. He was the lucky one. The Spooner Gun Club were nearly birdless, and the outside shooters did not average 7 birds each. Frank Umphred bagged 7 ducks, including 2 cans.

Quail are as numerous as could be wished for, and the sportsmen all report splendid dog work and fair bags. The best bag made last week was that of Robert Armstrong and Chas. Pearch, of Napa. They shot near the Russian river and bagged 122 in five hours shooting.

One of the best duck killing records that we have ever heard of is that of Robert S. Brown and Chas. Northrup, of Petaluma. On last week Wednesday they shot in one hour 107 ducks, a few mites from Petaluma. Brown had but 50 shells with him, but they accounted for 47 ducks.

There is one thing missing in Shooting and Fishing's page of illustrations of "days with the gun" and that is a duck hunter with or without a gum coat, in a pelting rain storm, with the water pouring down the back of his neck. Duck hunting is not all "beer and skittles" by any means.

One party, name unknown, got tired of gazing into empty space for ducks at Alvarado on Sunday last and killed from 75 to 100 meadow larks. This is what we term a sin. Meadow larks are quite difficult shooting when wild, and good practice for an amateur, but such slaughter as this can only be condemned by all sportsmen.

The live-bird shooting grounds at Oakland Race Track will become quite a popular resort next year, after the new grand stand is finished. The track will be kept up better under the new management and the irrepressible "kid" element will be less in evidence. Of late they have been a great nuisance and it is a wonder that some of them have not been seriously injured.

Thos. O'Donnell and Wm. Kendt were at Jersey Landing on Tuesday and bagged fifty seven ducks. They could not find a solitary duck until dusk when they began to pour into the ponds by the hundred. They speak in the highest terms of the accommodations furnished by Chris Christensen at the Landing. Chris is fitting up an ark for the accommodation of hunters. It will be finished in about two weeks.

D. J. McAllen, of Modesto, asks: "Is it unlawful in the shooting of geese to use an ox or cow. It is not unlawful to shoot geese in this State at any time or in any manner except with a gun larger than a ten bore. Geese are not protected on account of the great damage they do to the crops of the ranchers. It should be remembered that possession on marsh, field, lake or stream of a gun larger than a No. 10 bore is evidence of its illegal use.

The Sportsmen's Protective Association has called a mass meeting of sportsmen for December 15th at the Knights of the Red Branch Hall to take action in regard to the "salt water marsh land" law and for the purpose of raising a fund to make a test case and carry the question before the higher courts. All sportsmen are invited.

W. N. Wetmore, a member of the Pastime Gun Club and C. W. Debenham made the best bag on Friday and Saturday of last week that has been made at the Alviso Bridges for two years if not longer. They killed 114 ducks and one sand hill crane and refused to shoot at flock after flock of spoonbills because they were afraid they would run out of shells and they wanted all the canvas back and sprig that their ammunition would account for. On Sunday they were too tired to shoot and lazed about the club house.

A lot of market hunters and others are rapidly spoiling the duck shooting on the Alviso marshes by shooting all night long on moonlight nights. There has been more ducks on the Alviso marshes this year than for several years, but they will not stay long if they are frightened from their feeding and resting ground at night. Moonlight shooting should be prohibited by law. The hunter not only frightens off the ducks by the flash of the gun, but wounds and kills more than he retrieves. At Alviso the hunters have built dams about all of the wells, and the shooting can be heard the entire night at these favorite resorts of the mallard and teal.

Part three of Schreiber's Shooting Pictures should arrive this week. This part contains a picture of English snipe shooting and a picture of prairie chicken shooting. Mr. Frost has treated a difficult subject admirably. The sportsman is appropriately dressed, in a natural attitude, and looks like a man who knew what he was out for. The dogs, two setters, are very true to life, their feather slightly wet and mud soiled and their attitude good. The meadow looks like good snipe ground. The chicken shooting represents hunting in a cornfield in the middle west. The corn is shocked and the sportsman, as in the snipe picture, is remarkably true to life. Every sportsman should purchase this series.

The Game Law Squabble.

El Dorado county has passed an ordinance prohibiting market hunting. The Bee, the market hunters organ, censured the Supervisors for their action, and the El Dorado Republican replies with the following able article:

The Bee asserts that the clubs of wealthy sportsmen in the cities are endeavoring to establish game preserves in this country after the fashion of Merrie England, and that by and by, in natural sequence, we shall have game keepers, penalties for poaching and all the other characteristics of that kind of monopoly.

There may be and probably are some attempts by wealthy people to control the game of this State and others for their own pleasure, but the value of the game is a mere bagatelle to the people compared with the land and water or, in reality, the very earth itself, the arbitrary control of which in the social development becomes almost unavoidably thrown into the hands of what the Bee calls classes.

It is unfashionable to say very much about these things publicly, but it is just as well to tell the truth occasionally and not assume that all undue monopoly and tyranny of wealth control will appear in the game laws.

The game is supposed to be the property of the whole people. The land and water and forests of the public domains are also supposed to be owned by the whole people. Suppose that a man should go upon Government land in his capacity as owner to the extent of his individual interests, and should fence in a tract twenty miles square with barbed wire to monopolize it. Nearly every one would consider that he was getting more than his share of the public property. Suppose that a man established an immense sawmill in public forests and thus reaped a harvest of profit by devastating the property of the people. There would be complaint made against him. Suppose another man appropriates the waters of a stream, converting it to his own private property and selling it at exorbitant rates to the other presumed owners. There would ultimately be a row over it.

The same ideas apply to game that apply to other public possessions. As long as people have fair opportunities to receive the benefit of their surroundings, they do not complain nor quarrel about technicalities, but let their real interests be encroached upon and there will be trouble. What they want is practical justice and they don't care about forms. Land, water and timber have been appropriated wastefully and piggyishly, but there was no trouble while there remained an abundance for everybody. In the future there will be a thousandfold more trouble about these essentials to existence than the regulation of game privileges will cause.

As for the game, the right and wrong comes into the question in the amount of it which any man or any set of men try to appropriate. The man who goes out every day in the week to seize what belongs to other people as well as himself is a hogish partner, and deserves to be treated as a hog. It makes no difference whether he hunts for market or hunts for pleasure. The wrong is not in what he is, but what he does. If sportsmen hunted every day they would be wronging their associates as much as the market hunters do.

In this country, however, the sportsmen are merely ordinary citizens, young men habitually at labor, who hunt perhaps once a week to the individual and who try to protect the game. They are not wealthy—most of them are poor. The market-hunters, on the other hand, following it as a business, hunt every day, and a dozen of them will destroy more game in a season than all the sportsmen of the county. At one time the deer of this county were slaughtered by hundreds for their hides by this class of men.

So far as this county is concerned, the game laws are not an attempt to benefit a class, but an attempt to prevent the extermination of the game by those who care for nothing but their own immediate profit, regardless of any other person's subsequent pleasure or benefit.

The arguments of the Bee would apply with the same force to the killing of fish with giant powder, catching them with seines, or other means of rapid extermination. The general sentiment here objects to market hunting not because the game is sold, but because these hunters destroy it so rapidly.

The people generally would object to any gun club or organization if its members hunted persistently and destructively in the same way. If a man could kill only a few fish by giant powder, nobody would object to its use. Similarly if a man could hunt for market without exterminating the game in his section, nobody would try to prevent his doing so.

THE HORSE SHOW.

warrants the prophesy, but still better the performances of Ethel Downes, 2:13, and Thompson, 2:15.

Silver Bow, 2:16, is a horse of high form, grand action and a heap of speed. Of the blood that has proved itself to be very best when speed and endurance are the test, and then his sons and daughters are sure to show the family characteristics, and with a strong probability of doing still better. Silver Bee, Rainbow and others are almost sure to corroborate the prophesy when the time comes to show their full capacity.

It does not follow that the stallions which are not so "highly represented" by their progeny are not well worthy of high consideration.

Diablo, 2:09½, the handsome and speedy and bred in the purple, can scarcely fail to make his mark in the stud.

James Madison, massive, strong and fleet has already shown his "potency," and with better opportunities now than he has ever had before.

Reluctantly I give up this part of the Tuesday afternoon exhibition, and when it is recorded that Zombro, Fred Kohl, L. A. and others, there would be plenty of room for amplification.

THE HORSE SHOW IN THE EVENING.

Not at all surprising that the highest crowds are present when the electric lights are leading brilliancy to the scene. During these cloudy days there is a sameness in forenoons and afternoons, giving a semi-gloominess which is alike dispiriting to biped and quadruped. The white rays dispel this in a great measure, and even the hour which marks the recess, and before the first event, visitors make their appearance there an air of cheerfulness. The picket guard of the army, as the early arrivals may be termed, are not fairly settled in their seats before there is a crush at the entrance, and from that time on can be heard the frou frou of silk, the softer sounds of velvets and satins, as the wearers find their way to the boxes and seats.

By the time the scenes of the arena are fairly under way every seat in the boxes are occupied and few vacant places in other parts of the auditorium. The boxes, being in immediate proximity to the promenade which surrounds the tan hark covered oval, and all visitors permitted to stand or march on this part of the building allotted to spectators, the fair occupants of the first row are in plain view.

Too close to be altogether satisfactory, for if one be attracted by a more than usually handsome face, a glance is all that can be indulged in by a person who is restrained by the feeling that a prolonged look would be regarded as extreme rudeness. Plenty of faces which tempted to a breach of decorum, and anxiety for a "last, long, lingering look," but I found a way to gratify the desire to gaze without incurring the charge of impertinence. That was to keep marching, a glance at what was going on inside when the temptation was not so great, a look when the inspiration came that the face was opposite. If it is rude to stare at one near, but by a little longer range would not be so offensive, if not so gratifying.

Exceedingly beautiful quite a number of those who graced the Horse Show, stately matrons, younger wives and maidens all lovely, and yet neither boxes nor seats in that brilliantly lighted circle as favorable for the display as the grand stand at Ingleside. A much finer picture when the sunshine lends warmth and cheeriness to the spectacle, and then the excitement, which sets eyes flashing, gives cheeks a more fascinating glow, is of a different sort than that presented by the tamer sights of the tan colored hippodrome. Dress of these hours unquestionably well worthy the plaudits of those much better fitted to judge than one who would rather look at faultless face and form than all the robes that Worth and Redfern ever designed, but I do know that costumes harmonized with handsome and pretty faces, and that there was a profusion of colors, from bright reds, blues, greens and yellows to the more sedate shades of the garments of the elder, though still beautiful matrons of the gorgeous assemblage.

In striking contrast to habiliments of the much homelier sex, Some of them quite good looking, notwithstanding the disfiguring effects of swallow tails and straight collars, the hideousness inseparable from "plug" hats, and the other et ceteras which compose proper attire. All alike in the display of black and white and yet with a notable difference aside from bulk and stature.

A few had a dignified carriage and graceful walk, the majority apparently little at ease, dubious where to place hands and feet when at rest, and not a few who appeared like hotel waiters on a holiday, slipping along with gliding action, and arms bent in the proper position to rest a napkin upon.

A few looked fairly well. A plank platform was laid in the center of the arena, and frequently there was a grouping of "faultlessly dressed" men on the boards. Deportment in keeping with dress. And yet in all this array the first premium would not be difficult to award. One of them—though the smallest of the party—was never in an ungraceful position. Arms, hands, legs and feet in proper place, the only mar the straight, high collar which gave a stiff set to his head, reminding us of the fashionable neck gear, when I was a boy, the unyielding stock or, slightly better, huge neckerchief fortified with paper or pasteboard.

Professor H—stood near, and I called his attention to the people on the platform asking him to give his preference. He agreed in the decision. I told him that our favorite had spent several years in Paris, but as some of his companions had also the benefit of a sojourn in that gay Capital and with long residence in the Paris of this country, New York, the gift was a natural inheritance heightened by education and practice, the same as Saal went from 2:18 as a two-year-old to 2:08½, which gave her the championship of the world and still holds, "the same way rigged."

The professor also agreed with me that as these exhibitions were meant to be the grandest kind of spectacles, in fact, on the point of grandiosity, in the lead of all others, it was imperative that the male portion of the pageant should discard the conventional dress, and come upon the stage in costumes appropriate to the occasion. The fashions at the time of the "Merry Monarch" would be a good study, and in still later years there were the glories of laces and ruffles, knee breeches, hose of bright hues, low shoes with jeweled buckles, powdered wigs, cocked hats, rapiers and snuff boxes. Gorgeous as the bird of June the beaux then, in all the colors of the rainbow, fitting companions of the belles, and the logical sequence, an augmentation of revenues beyond the most sanguine expectations when that improvement is inaugurated.

The show proper on Wednesday night was quite interesting. An exhibition drill of troop A., N. G. C. was pleasing as to the evolutions, though the horses were of a miscellaneous sort, better fitted to carry Flagstaff's noted recruits than the fine-looking men who occupied the saddle. "Well done," I said to an ex-army officer as rather an intricate movement seemed to be very well executed. "Fair for militia," was the response, and this was a good deal to admit from one who was graduated with high honors at West Point and these supplemented by still higher marks in wartime.

The park police came in for its full share of plaudits, though a few caroms seemed to imply that there was either a lack of training or that artificial light affected the vision of men and horses.

There was a rustle heard in the boxes when six high steppers entered the arena. Subdued in tone, a movement which told of heightened interest, a demonstration of expectancy, a shaking of silks and satins to arrange the drapery to the best advantage. This was the first display of the evening which gave the bob tails a chance, and accounted for the awakening Promenaders came to a halt and heads were hanging over the high topmost rail of the fence which forms the outside boundary of the arena, and to folks who are below five feet eight in stature gives something of an idea of what the pillory was in the days when that was such a potent instrument of punishment.

High steppers! If some one who is away-up in the kind of horse knowledge, which warrants premiums for that class, will explain why they should be encouraged, and give reasonable grounds therefore he will confer a favor. The requirements are:

"High steppers, not under fourteen hands two inches, and under fifteen hands two inches. Soundness, style, conformation and hock action also to be considered. To be shown to an appropriate vehicle."

I suppose that all six of the horses came up to the requirements in regard to action, and one of them had it in such perfection that stamping the ground with little attempt to progress was about the only feature exhibited. There was a trotter of the olden time called Spileddriver. He acquired the name from being "stringhalted" in both hind legs, hind feet brought up as high as his body would permit, and they struck the ground with emphasis. Fore feet had sympathetic action, and if one had a horse after the pattern of Spileddriver he would take all the high-stepper premiums offered. The only evidence of disease is the superabundance of hock action, and as that is one of the main characteristics of the class, in place of unsoundness it would have to be regarded as a desirable quality which the breeder should strive to perpetuate.

"Appropriate vehicle" gives a wide range for selection and as two of the same construction did not appear the inference is warranted that however great the number of exhibitors the same conditions would prevail. There was one which seemed anything but appropriate, and as that was attached to the winner of the second prize, it obtained the seal of commendation.

A car, excessively high wheels, and with seat elevated so that the driver was nearly in a standing position. A primitive sort of vehicle as there was an absence of the many contrivances to overcome "shaft motion," and the high stepping gray sent it up and down with such vigorous jerks as to threaten dislocation of the driver's knees, and without much doubt affected his back in a way that demanded embrocations and porous plasters to remedy the effects of the shaking up.

As Arabs procure butter by throwing a goat skin bag partly filled with milk or cream across the back of a horse which is forced to trot until the separation of milk and butter is completed, these high steppers would be valuable in countries which are minus better systems of butter making. I have no means of learning how long a time, or the length of the distance traveled, before the "butter comes" under Arabian formulas, but I am ready to wager my title pile that with a properly made vessel to hold the cream, that strapped to the foot-board of the red cart with high wheels and lengthened shafts, and the grey horse to haul it, even on a tan bark course, the job would be done in one quarter the time made by the "children of the desert."

I have not the least desire to lessen the admiration of those who are partial to that kind of action, and therefore the propriety of offering premiums, questioned in preceding pages, can be justified on the ground that all classes must be provided for. Neither useful nor graceful, inconsistent with speed and much more tiresome than genuine trotting action, if high steppers are prized for attracting attention on Rotten Row, Central Park, Bois de Bologne, and other places where society holds sway Golden Gate Park should be provided for.

There were hearty, joyous cheers when the fire engines came dashing into the arena. No mistaking the sounds of welcome, too vigorous and resonant to proceed from the box circle, though there were some signs of approval among the select, the hurrahs came from throats and lungs not trained to propriety, and when the unmistakable notes of juvenility, in reiterated peels, rang above all others, it was evident that the glamour of earlier days, when to "run wid the machine" was the height of the ambition of the boys of half a century ago, was still exerting a potent influence. An exciting spectacle to the youngsters, and not without charms to their elders, as the burnished engines were taken around the ring at what seemed a hazardous pace.

The horses were up in their duties and with stamina and activity enough to haul the heavy weights at a racing clip. Some of the engines were decked with flowers, surely out of place with so much polished steel, brass and copper in the construction, and as that which secured the premium was not subjected to floral ornamentation the awarding committee may have thought that simplicity was a strong point in its favor.

That the second annual exhibition of the Horse Show Association of the Pacific Coast has been a decided success is beyond all reasonable contradiction. That it will continue in its triumphant career is also assured, and while there are phases to be amended, taken as a whole, it is fully "up to date," not very far behind its prototype the high festival at Madison Square Garden.

"THE HOBART SHOW."—The daily press has dubbed the exhibition at the Mechanic's Pavilion The Hobart Show, owing to the large number of premiums awarded to the horses of W. S. Hobart. While it is true that a large proportion of prizes, for even the large number of entries made, have been secured, it does not follow that there has been undue favoritism displayed.

That the horses have been selected with rare judgment is the opinion of those who are well qualified to make a true estimate, and it is certain that prizes have been paid which should secure very good animals.

Then Mr. Hobart, judging from the little I have seen, is a natural horseman, and when that is an inherited bent, it simplifies the education in a wonderful degree. While years of study and practice might fail in turning out even a fair degree of competency, expertness is acquired so readily by a person who has an aptitude for the pursuit that few lessons are required. Genius is the word to denote the quality and it is applicable in the "horse world" as well as in that of a wider range.

Class 77, stallions four years old or over—First prize, $60 to John L., exhibited by Hill & Rodebaver of Petaluma; second prize, Capitaine, exhibited by the Hopland Stock Farm.

A Diversified Gathering.

Nothing could better illustrate the capabilities of Kern county's adaptability in the item of live stock production than the versatility of the exhibit made by the Kern County Land Company at this our second annual Horse Show. Prize winners in two classes of large draft horses, and prize winners for small Shetland ponies (each of the extremes decked with blue ribbons). Horses for all purposes; speed, pleasure, work and show; graceful and gentle horses for ladies' light driving; elegant coupe and carriage teams; massive and perfectly formed draft, cart and drag teams; horses that give promise of winning fame and money as track performers by such noted sires as Algon, sire of Flying Jib; Bismark, sire of Lady Markham; Kentucky, Exile and Westmont, all of this grand aggregation of giants and pigmies bred in the purple. Truly a creditable showing and one that speaks wondrously well of the illimitable resources of Kern Co. One little beauty by Exile, out of a thoroughbred mare, was highly praised and greatly admired, perfect in conformation, the very embodiment of speed, grace and endurance. A span of "palomini" or cream-colored mules with roached and quaintly turned silver manes and tails was one of the noticeable features of the exhibit. As all this collection of horses are to be on view for a week longer, we will have an opportunity of speaking of them more in detail. Immediately after "The Show Is Over" they are to be taken to the stables on Buchanan street, corner of Birch Avenue, and Mr. Thomas, the genial representative of the Kern County Land Company, under whose immediate charge they are, will be pleased to show them to intending purchasers, as it is the intention of the company to sell them; and surely one must be captious indeed that cannot be suited, with such a rare and diversified lot to choose from. Mr. Thomas wishes us to assure all those that pay a visit to them that moderate prices will prevail and we, individually, will assure them of gentlemanly and courteous treatment.

Compensation.

Down amid the clover, where
The old horse spends his days,
The busy bees fly homeward
By many winding ways,
And butterflies in bright array
Flit here and there the live-long day;
And west winds whispering as they go,
Sway each pink blossom to and fro,
While passing birds amid the trees,
Fling sweetened echoes to the breeze.

Down amid the clover, now,
He dreams the hours away.
That once were filled with life and stir;
When each succeeding day
Brought thronging crowds whose eager eyes
Beheld him win the prize;
When high upon the roll of fame,
His was the first, the highest name,
And now his limbs have scarce the strength
To cross the meadow's dewy length.

Down amid the clover
He takes his well-earned ease,
Content to nip the velvet turf,
Or rest beneath the tree;
And tho' for him no laurels shine,
The roses still his path entwine,
His was the crown in youth's bright hours,
And now in age, with birds and flowers,
And sunshine round him soft he goes,
Towards the evening's sweet repose.

A Noted Son of Vulcan.

The above list of horses whose feet have been prepared for action by Mr. Martin O'Dea, the scientific and conscientious proprietor of the St Julien Farriery at 126 Geary street, has justly earned for him the title of "An Artist in Iron." A visit paid to the St. Julien, or as it is more favorably known as Martin O'Dea's shop, served to impress the necessity of education, skill and observation in the proper shoeing of trotters. Mr. O'Dea has shod all our famous flyers.

One naturally supposes there must be some particular reason for the universal selection of any one man to whom such fleet and valuable horses are entrusted. A look at the skillful way in which the proprietor (for he is known that he does the work on all particular jobs himself) deftly hammers and draws the iron with quick, nervous strokes, shaping and fashioning the metal to the desired shape, convinces one that he is well entitled to the name given him at the head of this article. Mr. O'Dea is no stranger in our midst, having been continually in the same line of business since 1869, during which time he has shod not only our fleetest-footed horses (in a turf sense), but all classes are alike sure of the same conscientious treatment at his hands. He has seven men constantly employed, and not one that does not excel in his particular line. So great is the fame as a thorough and skillful workman of Mr. O'Dea that he is frequently called to go into the interior of the State to attend to difficult and complicated cases of shoeing. His shop is beyond all doubt the most popular one of its kind in the city, but Mr. O'Dea has given it a reputation throughout the State as the shop par excellence of fine and scientific shoeing.

Mr. O'Dea, aside from his professional services to the horse-men, is one of our most pronounced and outspoken citizens, progressive in his ideas and ever laboring for the welfare of San Francisco. He is ably assisted in his shop by his son, a sterling young man and to the "manor born," for whom we bespeak a brilliant future.

The attention of nearly everyone who attended the Horse Show has been attracted by the splendid display of harnesses, blankets, etc., on most of the fine horses exhibited, and when it is known that John A. McKerron, of 203 Mason Street, the well-known harness maker, manufactured these exhibitors as well as the public can take pride in the fact that they are of home manufacture. In this line of goods there is no need to send to France, England or Germany or the Eastern States hereafter, for he can fill every order.

The attention of everyone who visits San Francisco and those who are here is called to the many advantages the Palace Hotel has for the entertainment of guests. Everyone who wants to see anyone of note goes to "The Palace" and they are sure to meet those they are seeking. The prices are most reasonable and we take pleasure in recommending this hotel and do not hesitate to state that it is the "finest in the world."

ON Tuesday, December 17th, the Rancho del Paso Stock Farm will sell in this city a choice collection of finely-bred yearlings and two-year olds by such sires as Salvator, Sir Modred, Darebin, Midlothian, Maxim, Martenhurst, Tyrant, Torso, Calvados, St. Andrew, Fitzjames, etc., out of the best-bred mares on this great farm. Many a bargain will be secured at this sale.

PEYTONIA BARRY has sued James Neil to gain possession of the race horse Perhaps, which has been running at the Bay District track, under the defendant's colors. In case the horse cannot be delivered she demands $1,000, its alleged value, and also $1,000, damages for its unlawful detention.

R. N. FITZGERALD, Hartford, Conn., writes: I have had occasion several times to use Absorbine and it works like a charm in removing soreness and pulls on horses. I cheerfully recommend it.

C. A. MAGOON, Chicago, Ill., writes: I consider the Absorbine rightly named, as it completely absorbs all bunches where applied.

THE stallion Boodle, 2:12½, described in another column, is at the Horse Show with his daughter Ethel Downes, 2:13.

AMANDA W. REED yesterday filed at Los Angeles her petition for the probate of the will of her late husband, Simeon G. Reed, who died at Pasadena, November 8th. Mr. Reed's California property is valued at $130,000. The bulk of his estate is located in Portland, Or., and is variously estimated to be worth from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000.

Shooting Pictures.

Of Interest to the Sporting Fraternity.

Messrs. Chas. Scribner & Sons beg to announce the publication of Mr. A. B. Frost's renowned shooting pictures.

Mr. Frost has long been known to all enthusiasts as the one artist able to portray hunting scenes with the spirit and feeling of the true sportsman; his own great love for shooting, and his familiarity with nature as the hunter knows and sees her, shows itself most strongly in every line of his work.

For many years the artist has been making sketches and studies with the idea of preparing a series of representative SHOOTING PICTURES, which will be recognized as accurate and real in every detail. These eight water colors have been reproduced in fac-simile with the utmost care, and the publishers believe are the most perfect specimens of color reproduction of their kind ever executed. Among the subjects treated are the following:

Rail Shooting, Bay Snipe, Ruffed Grouse, Summer Woodcock, English Snipe, Ducks from a Blind, Quail Shooting, Quail—A Headstand.

Each plate is mounted on heavy card-board, 19x26 inches, so that it may be framed at once if desired. Mr. Charles D. Lanier, who writes the accompanying text, gives an increased interest to the series of pictures, and writes as only the real student of bird life and the woods can. His pages are illustrated by pen-and-ink drawings by Mr. Frost.

"Gold Dust" Smokeless Shot Gun Powder.

THE BEST SHOT GUN POWDER MADE.

Its claims for superiority are as follows:—

- FIRST It is not affected by heat, cold, moisture or age, and will not detonate.
- SECOND It will not cause headache.
- THIRD It is under all conditions the safest powder in use, as it contains no nitro-glycerine or gun cotton. It will not explode unless confined and ignited by fire, as in the loaded shell in the gun.
- FOURTH It has a light recoil and great velocity.
- FIFTH It is the quickest and has the greatest killing power at any distance.
- SIXTH It gives the best pattern at any and all distances.
- SEVENTH Its action is the most uniform in all respects.
- EIGHTH It can be used in cheap paper, or brass shells with any primer.
- NINTH It is the cleanest powder in use, and if the gun is not cleaned for weeks after using, a dry cloth is all that is required for that purpose, when it will be noticed that there is no corrosive action, but, on the contrary, the residue has preserved the metal. The residue does not accumulate with long continued shooting, there being no more after fifty shots than after the first. (After shooting other powders, the gun barrels should be wiped out and cleaned before using "GOLD DUST.")
- TENTH It is the cheapest powder to use, as every package sold contains full weight (16 oz. to the lb.); and each pound contains more than double the number of loads to the same bulk of any other powder (with the exception of one brand, which sportsmen generally hesitate to use, considering it dangerous).

THIS POWDER IS MANUFACTURED BY THE

UNITED STATES SMOKELESS POWDER CO.

No. 13 Pine Street, San Francisco, Cal.

DUPONT SMOKELESS
SPORTING POWDER
Now Ready.

AN AMERICAN NITRO POWDER OF HIGH MERIT.

The Claims made for Dupont Smokeless are briefly as follows:

- First—It may be loaded the same as black powder, using the usual Dixon measure.
- Second—It gives best pattern and best penetration of any nitro powder at this time before the public.
- Third—It is cleaner in the gun than any nitro powder in use.
- Fourth—It is what its name would indicate, smokeless.
- Fifth—Recoil, while noticeable, is far less than that incident to the use of any other powder.
- Sixth—Its shooting qualities of the best; hard, quick, well-suited to trap and wing shooting.
- Seventh—This powder is not affected by extremes of heat, cold or moisture, which is not the case with many other nitro powders.

Prices and instructions to be used in loading, free on application.

FOR SALE.

A FINE DOUBLE TEAM OF FAST TROTTERS.

A splendid pair of roadsters, one of the finest buggy teams in the city, is offered for sale. They are well-bred, fast, stylish, and perfectly gentle—safe for a lady to drive. In breeding they cannot be excelled, being of the most fashionable strains. Any gentleman wanting a fast team will find a bargain in this pair of trotting mares. They are only four years old, and, being untrained, will continue to develop speed by careful handling. They are slightly below medium size, but of strong conformation and perfectly sound. This team may be seen at the Dexter Prince Stable, 1509 Grove Street, near Baker. They will be sold at a low price.

Revolution in Plowing

The Secretary of Agriculture Says:

I am inspired to allure the inventive genius of all interested to study the possibility of a plow which shall loosen and tear up the bottom of the furrow to a depth of say two or three inches below the cut of the plow. I do not mean to have the ground turned up, but simply to have it loosened, so that the rains may percolate below the depth of the furrow instead of being forced to run off, as though the furrow were an eave trough. The object that I seek is to stir and separate the earth at a greater depth with the same plow than it is possible to stir or separate it with the contrivance or implements for plowing now in use.

A Revolution in Plowing. A new invention. Everywhere pronounced the improvement of the Century in agricultural implements. A departure from the wedging principle as embodied in the plow. Better pulverization and stirring of the soil. Better penetration. A breaking-up of the present system of impact and glazed furrow bottoms, retaining the moisture where it falls and preventing washing of the plowed ground. Has only to be seen in operation to commend itself. Made as a single sulky or a double gang.

The Rise and Fall of the Range Horse.

Nine miles below Portland, on the banks of the beautiful Willamette river, a new three-story building, painted a red-dish brown, marks the last step in the history of the range horse of Oregon. Adjoining it are several large pens or corrals, much the same in appearance as are seen in many western towns along the railroads, built and used for confining stock before transferring to cars preparatory to shipment to market. The building and corrals here described are used exclusively for Oregon's new industry—the slaughtering and preparation for market of man's best friend—the horse.

Originally, the native Oregon range horse came from the so-called Spanish breed, transferred from Mexico to California and thence to Oregon. These were probably the best all-round horses in the world for their size; for they were small, round, stocky, wiry and hardy animals, and never known to tire. I have galloped one of them at an eight mile an hour gait, steadily, without a step of walk, up hill and down, for three hours at a time, and wet but few hairs on him. As time went on and Oregon settled up and developed, horses were brought from the East and the breed of range horses "improved"—at least that was the argument. At any rate his size was increased, as was also his propensity for viciousness and "bucking." As the bunch grass ranges of Eastern Oregon at that time were practically unlimited, and the cost of raising or producing these horses was quite small, the herds (or "bands," as called here) rapidly increased, until horse raising became one of the principle industries of the Eastern portion of this State.

The usual method of production was to gather the mares from the ranges in the spring, keep them corralled or in a "caviang" (the Spanish for horses herded) during the breeding season, and turn them loose after having been bred, to live on the succulent bunch grass until fall, at which time all the horses were gathered from the ranges, the colts branded which had escaped that ordeal in the spring round up, and the marketable geldings taken to the San Francisco or Portland market; wild and unbroken, and sold to some dealer generally at a lump price, which price would average to the producer about $40 per head. In the hands of the dealer the horses were usually broke to ride and drive, and this was often no small task, for in nearly every case the horse had not had a rope or halter nor a man's hand upon him since he had been branded as a colt. The price realized by the producer left a good profit for him, for in most instances he had expended not a dollar for feed, the horse finding the mountain range a liberal provider in summer and the "desert" nearly as good a feeding ground in winter. The "desert" is most simply described by calling it a strip of broken territory about 100 miles wide, extending from the eastern slope of the Cascade Mountains southeasterly to the Idaho line. The "desert" is so called from the fact of its sandy soil and it containing no streams or springs. But this lack of moisture in summer does not prevent a luxuriant growth of bunch grass each year—the greatest of all natural foods for the horse—which subjects could best be discussed at another time. The lack of water in summer prevents stock from going there to feed during that season. The first fall of snow in the mountains in the fall seems to be the signal for the horses, by their own will and accord, to turn their heads toward the "desert," their accustomed winter home. Here they not only survive the wintry blasts but grow in strength and stature and flourish until spring, when they again take to the mountain ranges. By some unexplainable cause the fall of snow upon the "desert" is usually much less than in the mountains or other surrounding country. The small amount of snow which does fall furnishes the necessary moisture for the comfort and well being of the horse, and he bites and chews the snow in winter as readily and with apparently as much relish as he drinks from the streams in summer. But there are exceptions to this rule of mild winters and light snows on the "desert." During one of these "exceptional" winters the snow falls to such a depth as to cover the grass, and then the range horses die by the thousands from starvation. Over 4,000 head perished in Lake County alone during the winter of 1888. That was called a "hard winter," as 60,000 sheep and 9,000 cattle went the same way.

But the cable car, electricity and the bicycle, suddenly and without warning, destroyed the market for this good, little horse. So sudden was the change that the ranges were quickly overburdened and the producer found he had something on his hands that the market would offer him near nothing compared with what he had formerly received for his horses and less than one-half of the value he had placed on his stock. Yet the producer did not heed the alarm, but continued to hold on, hoping against odds, Micawber-like, that something would turn up to better the situation. Year after year the prospect grew worse, prices steadily declining. Then came a time when there was absolutely no sale for this class of horses.

And soon thereafter came the proposition to slaughter and "can" horses for the European market. The idea here was first looked upon as a huge joke. But few of us could be led to believe in the seriousness of the project. We could not realize or believe that a horse—no matter how small—would ever bring a less price than a steer. The slaughtering for meat notion was looked upon as preposterous.

Notwithstanding the prevailing sentiment, the new idea grew and assumed some proportions at the time when a company was formed in Portland with a capital stock of $100,000 "for the purpose of buying and slaughtering horses for fertilizing materials," and then many people were startled, and the humane societies began to talk.

The three Jewish gentlemen composing the company which first planned to utilize the horses from the crowded ranges had no thought of "canning" the animals for the European or other markets. They anticipated using the meat and bones for a fertilizer only. At this rate, however, the Western Packing & Fertilizing Co., of Portland, has a complete plant for utilizing every portion of the horse, for various purposes—not an ounce is lost or wasted. The animal is killed in much the same manner as a beef steer. He is driven up a chute, shut into a narrow pen, and there killed by a blow on the head with a long hammer. His mane and tail are first cut off and deposited in their proper place, eventually to be sold and used for a variety of purposes. The hoofs are then taken off to be made into glue. Then the skin is stripped back on the head, neck and legs, and a rope looped on the skin and then it is drawn off by means of a windlass. For it may not be generally known that a horse's skin fits his frame tightly and cannot be removed from his body in the same manner as it is from a beef, for fear of cutting the skin, and, therefore, ruining the hide. The head is then removed and the balance of the carcass hung up on traveling hooks. A man with the cleaver next takes a hand and splits the animal in twain and then the two parts are run to the other side of the room, where another workman cuts off the legs, then the hams. The latter go to a cooling room and are eventually "cured" and made ready for market. The remainder of the meat is stripped from the bones and then goes to a huge cauldron, steam tight, and shortly is reduced to a dry, granulated fertilizer. The bones go to another boiler and are reduced in nearly the same manner and for the same purpose, although having a different market value. The hides go to a salting room and are sold in their green state at a price which nearly or quite covers the original cost of the entire horse.

The horses cost the company $3 per head delivered from the range to the nearest railroad point. Transportation costs $1 for each animal delivered in Portland. The horses are driven from this point to the abattoirs, slaughtering forty horses per day. The company has already bought and contracted for 7,000 head.

If a person can overcome his sentimental prejudice, he will find that a horse steak cut from a sound and fat "cayuse," fresh from the range, is not bad eating. The meat is somewhat coarser grained than beef, but is juicy and toothsome, and sweeter than beef, and withal cleaner than the average beef steer.

The same climate and range (Southeastern Oregon) which have produced the horses above described, have brought forth individual animals of fame beyond Oregon's borders. Notably, Al Farrow, the first horse to win a race in as good time as 2:40, which performance was placed to his credit at San Jose, Cal., April 6, 1889. The dam of Al Farrow was not a thoroughbred. Among the trotters produced in that section is Klamath, the great campaigner, bred and raised in the county of that name. His sire was the great Altamont, and while something is claimed for his dam by interested parties, not so in her native county, for there she is described as a "measly cayuse."—J. C. Beach in Horse Review.

Good Horses in Missoula, Mont.

Missoula horsemen have settled themselves in winter quarters and are already beginning to figure on next year's winnings. The splendid fall weather has been a great help for the youngsters that are now taking their first lessons in the intricacies of the turf, and from present indications the Missoula horses next season will be in the front rank as many times as ever. The young Bay Birds disposed of here at the sale of Mr. S. E. Larabee of Deer Lodge are all receiving the very best care and attention, their different owners are already figuring on a Dr. Puff, a Hal Corbett or a George Ayers, says Missoula Times.

Missoula is recognized as the place in the northwest to winter horses and prepare them early for campaigning purposes. The records and racing qualities of the Missoula horses last season demonstrated the fact that there must be something in the climate, the wheat and the grain.

Trainer McGowan is wintering Delbert, Eva Brown and four youngsters here and intends to begin early in the spring for the coming race meetings. Delbert will receive special attention this winter for his throat trouble. If Delbert's wind ceases to bother him there will be trouble in camp whenever the Oregon and California flyers measure strides with him. Trainer McGowan has established a reputation in Missoula as a thoroughly reliable gentleman, a good driver and a painstaking attendant. He is now looked upon as one of us, and everybody in Missoula rejoices when "Mc" wins.

The pioneer campaigners of race horses in Missoula are the Higgins Bros., who both are good judges of horses as well as being thoroughly informed on records, races, time, pedigrees and everything pertaining to scientific breeding. Their selections last year were particularly fortunate, the stables establishing several records and giving Charley Jeffries a chance to make a reputation for himself as a clever reinsman and a good conditioner even greater than he had before.

Though numerous offers have been made for Brino Tricks, 2:13½, his owners knowing his speed, gameness and breeding have decided to put him on the turf next season. Brino Tricks will also make the season at Missoula. This is a source of gratification to breeders here who will take the opportunity of mating their best mares with this grand specimen of equine excellence, the fastest harness stallion in the extreme northwest. Brino Tricks, 2:13½, is a bay stallion 15½ hands high, star in forehead, hind feet white to ankles, weight eleven hundred pounds, foaled in 1888, bred by Henry Pierce, San Francisco, California. "Tricks" is a horse of commanding style and finish, possessing a beautiful head with large, keen eyes that impart a gameness to his appearance, so characteristic of the descendant of the mighty George Wilkes. He has a splendid neck, shoulders sloping and well laid, lengthy and well rounded barrel, a broad and powerful coupled back, standing on clean cut legs of the best bone and substance, he exhibits quality at every point.

Brino Tricks is a game and consistent performer. His remarkable career in Portland last spring stamped him as a wonder. Starting in three races in eight days he won in straight heats from such well-known campaigners as Ottinger, 2:11½, Laura M., 2:13, Plunkett, 2:13½, Prince Almont, 2:13½, Del Norte, 2:14½, Our Boy, 2:15, Touchet, 2:15. Bred as he is and possessing such speed and stamina, Brino Tricks will impart a wonderful improvement to the harness horses in Western Montana.

Van R. Farrell, Missoula's rustling horse shoer, is bound to keep up with the fast brigade. Last week Mr. Farrell showed his abiding faith in good horses by purchasing the three-year-old gelding Donaldson, a full brother to Bud L., sired by Don L., 2:25, dam Johanna, by Maxim. Donaldson will be prepared for racing next spring, and his owner will accompany him on the circuit and at the same time attend to the proper shoeing of the balance of the Missoula horses.

Strather, a three-year-old gelding by Wilton, is now in the stable of C. H. McLeod, who purchased him from C. L. T. C. Marshall. Strather already shows his appreciation of his new surroundings and makes a much better appearance with Andy Foley holding the reins than he used to with the colored teamster "Mc," who was bound to "make him trot or bust him wide open."

Tyler Thompson is tickled all over. This morning his gelding, Dr. Puff (3), 2:16½, and Hal Corbett (3), 2:19½, were brought home via the Northern Pacific from California where they have been on a winning campaign during the last season. The horses were in charge of James Carrigan, who is still in California, but it is not expected that he will return soon.

INGLESIDE TRACK, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 5.

STRONG hopes of a much improved track were the expectations for yesterday, but old Pluvius saw fit to dispense his favors during the forenoon with the result that the track presented the same muddy appearance that it has since its opening. The time made yesterday, however, indicates that it is not deep and with drying weather it will be in perfect condition in a few days. The afternoon was pleasant and the attendance good, considering the threatening condition of the weather.

The first race of the day was for two-year olds to go seven-eighths of a mile. There were six entries and the distance was covered in good time considering the condition of the track. Can't Dance was the favorite at 4 to 5, La Flecha second choice at 2 to 1, Doubtful 7 to 2, Instigator 15 to 1, La Vienta 20 and Hazard 75 to 1. Instigator got off in the lead, Can't Dance second and Hazard third. At the quarter Instigator still held his lead by a head from Hazard, with Can't Dance third. At the half Can't Dance had forged to the front but was soon supplanted by La Vienta, who led by a head at the three-quarters, with Instigator second and Doubtful third. Turning into the stretch La Vienta still led by one-half length from Can't Dance, who had now commenced to make his run in earnest, Doubtful being third. In this order they came down the stretch Can't Dance proving the winner by three lengths, while Doubtful nipped out La Vienta for the place by a head. Time, 1:33½.

The second race at three quarters had nine starters. Billy S. was favorite at 2 to 1; Navy Blue and Jack Richelieu at 4 to 1; John Payne 40 and Carmel 8 to 1. The field got away well with the exception of Empress of Norfolk, who was left at the post. Johnny Payne, Carmel, Billy S., Sir Richard was the order of the start. At the quarter Payne led by two lengths, Carmel second by a head, Billy S. third, Payne still led by two lengths at the second quarter, Billy S. second by two lengths, Carmel third. Carmel now improved his position and coming into the stretch, Payne led by one length, Carmel second by one length, with Billy S. third. Carmel passed Payne when nearing the wire and finished winner by one length, Johnny Payne second by two lengths, Billy S. third. Time, 1:18½.

The third race was at five-eighths with six starters. Service ruled favorite throughout the betting at 7 to 5, Philomena second choice at 2 to 1, Red Will at 15 to 1, while Kathleen was the outsider at 30 to 1. Service, who had Felix Carr up, took the lead, Robin Hood second and Philomena third. Robin Hood soon forged to the front and at the first quarter led by a head, Philomena second by one length, Red Bird third. Philomena by one length led at the second quarter, Service second by a head, Robin Hood third. Into the stretch it was Philomena by one length, Red Will third. In this order they finished, Philomena easily winning by two lengths and service beating Red Will one-half length for the place. Time, 1:04½.

The fourth race at six and one-half furlongs had but five starters and furnished the surprising feature of the old California favorite Braw Scot, going to the post with odds of 100 to 1 offered against him. Vincter was the favorite at 4 to 5, Potentate next at 8 to 5 and Pescador at 13 to 2. Monterey was 70 to 1. Potentate got a running start and went away like a scared deer, followed by Monterey, Braw Scot, Pescador and Vincter. At the first quarter Potentate led by three lengths, Vincter second by two lengths, Monterey third. Potentate increased his lead to four lengths at the second quarter, Vincter second by two lengths, Pescador third. These positions were retained until entering the stretch when Vincter made his run and easily finished a winner by three lengths, Potentate second by five lengths, Pescador third. Time, 1:24½.

The fifth and last race of the day was a welter weight at five eighths. It had six starters with Redington 2 to 1 at post time, Sligo 4, Mainstay 3, George Miller 6, Princess Rose 5 and Addalad 500 to 1. Service showed in front at the start, followed by Geo. Miller, Princess Rose, Redington, Addalad and Mainstay. Geo. Miller led by a length at the quarter, Princess Rose second by one half length, Redington third. Geo. Miller still led Princess Rose by a head at the next quarter, she only a head in front of Redington coming into the stretch heads only still separated the leaders, while Redington was third, two lengths away. In this order they finished, Geo. Miller winning by one length, Princess Rose second by three lengths, Redington third. Mainstay finished last. Time, 1:04½.

INGLESIDE TRACK, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1895.

The sport to-day was marred by a fog, which, setting in early, became so thick by the time the last race was run, that only its finish could be seen by the spectators. The start for this race was announced by an electric gong, when eyes were soon strained looking down the stretch to see which of the contending horses would first emerge from the bank of fog in which they were enveloped.

Continued rains had made the track softer than on the preceding day, but it was a safe course, and fairly good time was made.

The first race was at seven eighths with eight starters. Red Glenn opened at 6 to 1, but in the twinkling of an eye was cut to 3 to 1 and he went to the post favorite at 11 to 5. Road Runner was 7 to 2, Schnitz 7, E. H. Sherley 10, and Patriot 10 to 1. Road Runner got away in the lead, Sir George second, Outright third, Patriot fourth and E. H. Sherley eighth. Road Runner soon fell back to last position, which he retained during the balance of the race, while Patriot rushed to the front and at the first quarter led by two lengths, with Sir George second, a head in front of Outright. At the half Patriot still led by a length, Outright second, a head separating him from Sir George. E. H. Sherley now moved up to second position, and entering the stretch was but one-half length behind Patriot, who still led, Schnitz was third by one-half length, Red Glenn fourth. Red Glenn now came on, passing in succession those in front of him and finished a handy winner by three lengths. E. H. Sherley was second a head in front of Patriot. Time, 1:33½.

The second race was one mile, selling. Basso was favorite, opening at 6 to 5 but receding to 3 to 2 at post time, owing to the play on Our Maggie, who had been erroneously carded the night before to carry 90 pounds, whereas she actually carried 99 pounds. Our Maggie was at 9 to 5, Hidalgo 6, Charmion 6 and Raindrop 75 to 1. Roma to an uneven start rushed to the front followed by Basso, Our Maggie and Hidalgo, with Charmion last, where she finished. Roma held the lead at the first quarter by one-half length, Basso second, three lengths in front of Our Maggie. At the half Roma was still permitted to hold the lead by a head, Basso second, two lengths ahead of Our Maggie. When turning into the stretch Basso went into the lead by one length, with Remus second, a head only from Our Maggie. Remus was now passed by both Our Maggie and Hidalgo, while Basso came home easily, the winner by five lengths, Our Maggie second by three lengths, Hidalgo third. Time, 1:46.

The third race was an owners' handicap for two-year-olds, at five-eighths of a mile and had six high class colts for contenders. Sir Play, making his first appearance here, was at all times favorite, opening at 6 to 5 but going back to 9 to 5 at the close. Mohalaska, also making her first appearance since her return from the East, was second choice at 2 to 1, Perhaps 4 and Joan 9 to 1. The start was a head one—Joan being given two lengths the advantage of his field, Sir Play was second and Mohalaska third, Perhaps last. At the first quarter Joan still led by two lengths, Sir Play second by one length, Perhaps third. Entering the stretch Joan's lead was reduced to one length, Sir Play second, one length in front of Mohalaska. Down the stretch they came, looking as though Joan would hold out long enough to win, but in a drive Sir Play beat her out a length—Joan was second by four lengths, Mohalaska third. Time, 1:04½.

The fourth race was at one and an eighth miles with four entries, each of which were well backed. Peter II had not essayed a longer race than a mile and seventy yards before, but the well known liking of Brutus' colts for distance caused many to put faith in his winning. Pepper, however, was favorite, opening at 6 to 5 and going to the post 8 to 5, Peter was 2 to 1, Arapahoe 3½ to 1 and Moderocio 5 to 1. Moderocio went out in the lead followed by Peter II, Arapahoe and Pepper. Arapahoe led by two lengths at the first quarter, Peter second by one length, Moderocio third by a head. The horses were now lost to view in the fog, but could be seen at the half, where Peter was leading by a head, Arapahoe second by a head, Pepper third. At the three quarters Peter still led by a head, Arapahoe second by a head, Pepper third. Here again the horses were lost to view, but when seen in the stretch, near the turn, Peter was still in the lead by a half length, Pepper second by a head, Moderocio third. The enthusiasm of the spectators waxed high at the struggle that ensued down the stretch, and the air was full of cries urging the jockeys to their best endeavor. Pepper in the end proved the victor, winning by one length, Peter II second by two lengths, Moderocio third. Time, 2:01.

The fifth race was at seven eighths with eight entries. All Over was the favorite at 4 to 5, Shield Bearer 5 to 1, Charreux 7 to 1, while Scimitar and Polaski were each 50 to 1. When this race was called, the fog had almost entirely covered the track so that the start could not be seen from the grand stand. Scimitar, however, got away in the lead, with Charreux second, Shield Bearer third and All Over fourth. When seen in the stretch Charreux was leading by three lengths, All Over second by two lengths, Shield Bearer third. In this order they came to the wire—Charreux winning by four lengths, All Over second by six lengths, Shield Bearer third. Time, 1:31½.

INGLESIDE TRACK, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1895.

The unpleasant features of rain and fog with which race-goers had been afflicted for a few preceding days, had disappeared by noon of to-day, when the sun shone bright and cheerful for the balance of the afternoon. The air was delightfully warm and clear, while the verdure covering the surrounding hills, cleaned and given new life, by the rains that had fallen, formed a charming prospect for the eye to rest upon.

It being Saturday afternoon, with the additional attraction of the run for the Horse Show Association Stakes, brought a large attendance.

The first race of the day was a selling purse for two-year-olds, distance five-eighths of a mile, in which there were eleven starters. Princess Noretta was a strong favorite, opening at 8 to 5 and closing at even money. Princess Rose II was next fancied at 4 to 1, Doubtful was 5, Pembroke 100, the balance running from 10 to 50 to 1. To a good start Laura F. took the lead, Princess Noretta second, Thereasa third, Princess Rose II fourth and Kowalsky sixth. At the quarter Princess Noretta was in the lead by two lengths, Laura F. second by a head, Thereasa third, Kowalsky sixth. Turning into the stretch Princess Noretta had increased her lead to three lengths, Thereasa second by a head, Princess Rose third and Kowalsky still sixth. The latter now came fast, passing in succession all ahead of him with the exception of Princess Noretta, who won easily by four lengths, Kowalsky second by four lengths, Princess Rose third. Time, 1:05.

The second race was one mile with seven entries. Installer was a 1 to 2 favorite throughout the betting. Montana was second choice at 3 to 1, Montalvo 7, Charmer 80, Eckert 100, Fi Fi and Cicero 200 to 1 each. Montana got away in the lead, Installer second, Montalvo third, Fi Fi fifth. At the quarter Montana led by a length, Installer second by one length, Montalvo third and Fi Fi fourth. At the half Montana still led by a length, Installer second by five lengths, Montalvo third and Fi Fi fifth. In the stretch Installer led by one half length, Montana second by eight lengths, Montalvo third by one length, Fi Fi being still fifth. These relative positions were unchanged coming down the stretch, excepting in the case of Fi Fi, who passed both Charmer and Montalvo, the finish being Installer easy by two lengths, Montana second by twelve lengths, Fi Fi third by a head from Montalvo. Time, 1:47.

The third race was the Horse Show Association Stakes for two-year-olds at seven-eighths, originally there were forty-three entries with Crescendo given the top weight of 130 pounds. Thirty-five of these, including Crescendo, declined, leaving but eight contestants. Of these Can't Dance was the first favorite at 11 to 5, but Sallie Cluett supplanted him and went to the post at 8 to 5. Ravelston was 3½, Ramiro 10, Belle Boyd 15, while the rest was 40 and 50 to 1. Can't Dance took the lead at the start followed by Ramiro, Ravelston, Sallie Cliquot, Pearson, La Flecha, Belle Boyd and Charley Boots. Ravelston at once rushed into the lead and at the quarter was half a length in front of Sallie Cliquot, Pearson third by one-half length, Can't Dance fourth. At the half Ravelston still led by a head, Sallie Cliquot second by three lengths, Can't Dance third. At the three-quarters positions were unchanged, Ravelston leading by a head, Sallie Cliquot second by two lengths, Can't Dance third. Into the stretch Ravelston increased his lead to one length, Sallie Cliquot second by one length, Can't Dance third. It now looked as though these positions would remain unchanged to the end, but Bergen, on Can't Dance, made a mighty effort and succeeded in the last jump in beating Ravelston by a head, Sallie Cliquot was third, three lengths behind Ravelston. Time, 1:32½.

The fourth race was also at seven-eighths with eight entries. Fannie Louise, with J. Lamly up, was played heavily by all the sure-thing bettors at 3 to 5. Collins opened at 3½ and went to the post at 7 to 1. May McCarty was 15, Allahabad 12, Braw Scot 30 and Podiga 30 to 1. Braw Scot broke in the lead, with Fannie Louise close up, Collins third, May McCarty fourth and Sligo fifth. At the quarter Fannie Louise led by a head, Braw Scot second by one length, May McCarty third by one length, Collins fourth and Sligo fifth. At the half Fannie Louise led by a length, May McCarty second by a head, Sligo third by one-half length and Collins sixth. At the three-quarters Fannie Louise led by one length, May McCarty second by a head, Sligo third, Braw Scot fourth and Collins fifth. Coming into the stretch Fannie still led by one length, May McCarty second by one-half length, Sligo third by two lengths, Collins fourth. Here Fannie Louise fell back, May McCarty, Sligo and Collins all heading her. The fight down the stretch was hotly contested. Sligo for a time looked a likely winner, but Collins, with Two Bits up, proved the winner by one length, Sligo second by two lengths, May McCarty third by two lengths and Fannie Louise fourth. Time, 1:33½.

The closing race of the day was a hurdle at one and one-half miles. J. O. C. and April were equal favorites at 2 to 1, Three Forks was 4½, Mestor 5 and Morgan G. 12 to 1. Mestor started in the lead followed by April, J. O. C., Morgan G. and Three Forks. At the stand Three Forks had raced to the front and was leading by one-half length, Mestor second by three lengths, April third by one-half length, J. O. C. fourth. At the quarter Morgan G. led by one length, Three Forks second by six lengths, J. O. C. third by one length. At the half Morgan G. led by a head, Three Forks second by six lengths, J. O. C. third by three lengths, April fourth. At the three-quarters Three Forks led by one length, Morgan G. second by three lengths, J. O. C. third by one length, April fourth. Into the stretch J. O. C. led by a head, Three Forks second by two lengths, Mestor third. J. O. C. proved the winner by one length, Three Forks second by two lengths, April third. Time, 2:59.

INGLESIDE TRACK, MONDAY, DECEMBER 9.

The weather to-day was clear and pleasant, and the track will be in good condition again in a day or so. It was slow to-day, but should be at least a second faster for the mile to-morrow. The attendance was above a Monday average, and the ring presented an animated appearance during the afternoon.

The sensation of the day came with the last race, a hurdle event at a mile and a sixteenth. J. O. C. was the favorite at 11 to 10, with Three Forks next in favor at 11 to 5. Johnson, the reputed owner of Morgan G. had the mount on the favorite. At the first jump Gold Dust struck the hurdle and fell and Cicero, with "Squeak" Allmark up, piled on top of him. Higgins, the rider of Gold Dust, escaped unhurt, although Gold Dust rolled all around him, but Allmark's shoulder was dislocated. Morgan G. had been taken out in front by Clancy and won easily by four lengths from Bedford, Rob Roy a close-up third. At the last jump J. O. C., who had been kept back, showed a disposition to come on, but Johnson rolled off in a very clumsy manner and his horse stopped. The athletic feat had such a scaly look to it that the judges declared all bets off. Three Forks also made such a poor showing under Jockey Goodman's guidance as to bring him under the displeasure of the judges, and he and Johnson were ordered off the track. The secretary was notified to refuse entries from the Arizona and Elkton stables, under whose colors J. O. C. and Three Forks ran, pending an investigation. Frank Van Ness, the owner of the jumper J. O. C. stated last evening at the Palace Hotel in a conversation with some turfmen that he had a bet down on his horse, and that he gave Johnson orders to go to the front, as it was a short race, and that he did not want to take any chances. Either the horse was not himself, or the rider did not want to carry out his orders.

The promptness with which the judges took the matter in hand elicited hearty applause from all present. It was the first occasion they have been called upon to exercise their high prerogative, there can be no question that square racing only will be tolerated at Ingleside. If there was any desire on the part of horsemen to feel the judicial pulse, the answer was prompt and emphatic.

The first race was at five furlongs, for maiden two-year-olds, with Alvero a 3 to 5 favorite at the opening, closing at 7 to 10. Hazard was at sixes about all the time, and Masero receded from sixes to 7 to 1. Macklin sent Hazard out in front at once and he held a lead of a length into the stretch. Pixotto showed a good bit of speed to the head of the stretch then backed up, and Alvero moved along into second place. Hazard looked all over a winner almost to the wire, where Jerry Chorn on Alvero lifted his mount along in a desperate drive, and headed the former by a neck. Lucille was six lengths behind Hazard. Time, 1:05½.

The second race was a selling event, at six furlongs with seven starters. Schnitz was handled very gingerly by several of the books, some offering 3 and 3½ to 1, while others had him off the boards most of the time. Repeater opened at 2 to 1, closing at 9 to 5. Patriot was at fours most of the time. Rico showed the way for an eighth, then Patriot moved up and held a half-length lead to the far turn. From there to the turn for home Schnitz shortened the distance to a head. Through the stretch Ricardo made his run and won by a neck. Schnitz was two lengths in front of Rico. Time, 1:20.

The third race was at the same distance as the preceding one, and also a selling affair. Remus and Realization ruled favorites, with Mamie Scott and Minnie Cee with liberal support. Realization got away with a good send off, and led to the far turn, then Remus moved up rapidly and was soon a head in front. Into the stretch he had a length advantage, and from there on home he drew away to three lengths' lead and won easily. E. H. Sherley second, a head in front of Realization. Time, 1:19½.

The fourth race was Babe Murphy's from start to finish. The speedy filly was favorite at 6 to 5, Chartreuse next in favor at 13 to 5. Gallant closed at 3½ to 1. The Babe is very quick at the post and got away well. She was held well in hand for awhile, with Little Mid at her throat latch. On the first turn, however, she began to draw away, and there was nothing to it thereafter. She crossed the wire five lengths in front of Gallant, who was a neck in front of Chartreuse. Time, 1:17½.

INGLESIDE TRACK TUESDAY, DECEMBER 10.

Mistaking a 13 for 12 on the saddle cloth of imp. Endymion cost the association a neat little sum to-day. It occurred in the second race Kowalsky won away off, then came Endymion three lengths in front of Walter J. Endymion's number was 13, but 12 was bung up. After the books had paid out considerable money on No. 12 tickets their sheets were called for and Endymion's number hung up for place. The books' losses will be made good by the association, and holders of tickets on Elsie (No. 12) for place are clearly ahead of the game. The prompt manner in which the association took all responsibility for the error of the judges, and stated they would stand all losses to the books was most favorably commented on, and the evidence of fair dealing was warmly applauded.

The weather was very pleasant, indeed. The sun shone in on the numerous attendants in the grandstand with a genial warmth, and the promenade below was well-filled all afternoon by frequenters of the betting ring, who found the warm, sun most enjoyable. All the races were well-contested events, and the finishes interesting to a high degree. As the track improves and horses run nearer to form than is possible over a muddy course, the contests increase in interest, and the finishes are more frequently close ones. Enough high-class jockeys are now present to give each horse in an average field a competent pilot, and horse races will be the regular order. One feature of the finishes, however, that add to the excitement, is the manner in which the fields scatter out in the wide stretch. An Argus-eyed individual would find use for all his optics if he tried to place more than one or two horses.

Kowalsky was the only favorite to win to-day, 15, 9 and 5 to 1, and 16 to 5 being the post odds against the other winners.

The first race was at seven furlongs, with ten starters. Braw Scot was a 9 to 5 favorite, May Day at 3 and Hy Dy at 5 to 1. Allahabad drifted back from 10 to 15 to 1. Ida Sauer showed the way to the half-pole, then Allahabad came along and headed her. Outright showed in front for a short time after the turn into the stretch was made, but May Day and Allahabad made for the wire and Piggott landed the latter a winner by a nose. Hy Dy was third, two lengths away. Time, 1:32½.

In the second race at five furlongs, selling, were nine two-year-olds. Kowalsky ruled favorite at 3 to 5. Endymion was second choice at 7 to 1. Pearson was the first to show, then Therese was sent out in front. At the far turn Kowalsky began to move up and had gained control by half a length when the turn for home was made. He came on and won easily by two lengths. Endymion was second by three lengths from Walter J. Endymion's number was 13, but 12 was put up. Elsie, No. 12, finished eighth. A mild murmur of protest was heard at once, which began to grow in volume as it became apparent that the numbers were to stand. Elsie sold for 100 to 1, 40 to 1 place, and holders of those tickets lost no time in getting their cashed. After a number had been redeemed the bookmakers' sheets were sent for, and then Endymion placed second. The mistake was made by the saddle cloth number becoming rolled up in such a way as to resemble 12.

Belle Boyd won the third race all the way, finishing three lengths in front of Olive, Our Maggie half a length behind her. Olive ruled favorite, Our Maggie second choice at 4½ to 1, while Belle Boyd was not very much cared for at 8 to 1.

Star Ruby won the mile race, fourth on the card, with Peter II a bang-up second. The impression was very general that if Tod Sloan had made his move on Peter just a few strides sooner the result would have been reversed, as the latter almost nipped out the winner, coming with a rush and finishing strong and with plenty left, while Star Ruby seemed to be dying fast.

Lucky Dog was favorite for the last race, at 7 to 10, but was never better than fourth, and finished next to last in a field of nine. Bernardo, at 5 to 1, was the winner, heading Service and Billy S. in the stretch and winning by a head from the former, who came very fast at the finish. Mustesa passed Billy S. and showed by half a length.

Winning jockeys to day were: Piggott, Bergen, C. Slaughter, Chorn and Cochran.

D. R. Dickey's ch m Mustasa, a, by Bachelor—Mollie Adams, 113 lbs., 40 to 1 3

Time, 1:11½.

Won by a head, three lengths between second and third.
Billy S. (Garner, 111, 10 to 1), Gussie (C. Sloan, 111, 20 to 1), imp.
Amarino (Shepard, 114, 30 to 1), Brown Duck (Shaw, 114, 100 to 1), Lucky Dog (Griffin, 114, 7 to 10) and Bell Ringer (McIntyre, 111, 100 to
1) also ran.

INGLESIDE TRACK, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 11.

Merrily the gates at Ingleside clicked yesterday, from about t e o n hour till after the running off of the attractive card had begun. Early birds came by dozens, and scattered themselves around the grandstand. Later, spectators came by hundreds, and finally in a double stream, from electric and steam line termini and swarmed into the spacious edifice till it was full from the wide promenade at the back down to the handrails in front. Every aisle was full, every available inch appeared to be occupied, and still more came.
The betting ring was also in a genial state of crush, and the seventeen books were kept reasonably busy issuing pasteboards. The attendance was estimated at over 9,000, and 4,987 were ladies.

The weather—well, the weather was just perfect. If Observer Hammon could forecast the races as well as he did the weather he would be a howling success. The shady parts of the stand were found to be most desirable, the sun, even if it is a mid December one, having on some of its summer glow. And the track was in the best condition it has been so far.

The star event of the afternoon was placed fourth on the programme, and while everyone was on the qui vive, still the preceding events held enough of interest to keep a pleasing check on their expectancy.

The first race of the afternoon was a selling affair, at six furlongs, with nine entries, for which Schnitz was scratched.
Realization ruled favorite, Morven second choice at threes.
Rico was played down from 8 to 6 to 1, and Emma D. receded towards post time from 4 to 6 to 1. There was a tedious delay at the post. When a start was effected the field ran well bunched to the far turn, and from there to the stretch there was considerable shifting around. After the turn for home was made Emma D. was seen well out in front, and she held her field safe, winning handily by two lengths. Rico and Morven were second and third as named, a length apart.
The favorite finished fifth. Time, 1:17½.

Miss Brummel was a 3-to-1 favorite in the second race, a six-furlong selling event for two-year-olds. Rummel sold at 4 to 5 at post time. The balance of the field were at from 25 to 100 to 1. Scimitar and Princess Rose II. were scratched.
They were sent away quickly, but to a ragged start. The running was in close order on the backstretch. Straightening out in the stretch, Rummel showed well in front, but Miss Brummel headed him and led to the wire an easy winner by a length. Rummel was a good second, Toneno third. Time, 1:16½.

The third race was another at three-quarters of a mile, selling. Eight went to the post, and were soon sent away to a good start. Hymn and Shield Bearer led the bunch well into the stretch. In the run for home Capt. Skedance shot out in front and made a hot run for the wire, but proved a little short, as Red Glenn headed him in the last few strides.
Lismore was third, two and a half lengths away. The winner was at 10 to 1 in the betting, Capt. Skedance 5 and Lismore, favorite, 11 to 5. Time, 1:16.

Then came the Ladies' Handicap, at seven furlongs. The field was undoubtedly the highest class one that ever faced a starter on this coast. The horses were nominated, weights allotted and jockeys assigned by the ladies, and to the nominator of the winning horse a bracelet valued at $100 was given, with another of the value of $50 to the nominator of the second horse. The original nominations, weights and jockeys were as follows:

Miss Spreckels, Piquante, 100 pounds (Piggott).
Mrs. Edward Corrigan, Handsome, 105 (Bergen).
Mrs. Green B. Morris, imp. Star Ruby, 105 (Martin).
Mrs. D. A. Honig, Magnet, 108 (Garner).
Mrs. Joseph A. Murphy, Sister Mary, 113 (H. Griffin).
Miss Hobart, Bright Phoebus, 113 (G. Miller).
Miss Boots, Vincter, 118 (T. Sloan).
Mrs. J. G. Brown, Libertine, 118 (Macklin).

Of these Piquante and Star Ruby declined the issue, leaving six starters. In the betting Vincter and Sister Mary ruled about even for first choice at 2 and 2½ to 1. Libertine and Magnet were at 5, the former receding to 6 at the close.
Handsome was at 8 to 1, and Bright Phoebus, the extreme outsider, at 10 to 1, 3 to 1 a place, even money to show.

There was a little jockeying for a suitable start for a few minutes, then Mr. Caldwell caught them all on their stride and sent them away to a perfect start. Vincter was first to show, then Garner sent the big chestnut son of St. Blaise out in front and made a hot pace. From the half-pole not a thing in the race got nearer than three lengths of him, and he held his command to the finish. Bright Phoebus, away the last one, made his run in the stretch and passed the others one by one, getting the place. Handsome came into the stretch behind Libertine and Vincter, who had alternated as second and third all the way, but they finished behind him as named. Sister Mary, second to show at the start, immediately fell back and finished last, showing no speed at any part of the journey. The time was 1:29½—the best made on the track, but still not to be considered fast time.

Previous to the race the two handsome bracelets, the ladies' trophies, were hung up on the wire, and were cut down by the jockeys riding first and second horses.

Magnet, the winner, is by imp. St. Blaise—Magnetic, 3 years old, and is owned by Dan Honig. Californians have a very wholesome regard for his speed since he defeated the great Diggs in the West this season. He is a sprinter of high class, but has never been asked to go the route.

Of the starters Bright Phoebus probably outranks the others as a notable, he being the winner of the rich Realization Stakes in 1895. He is by Falsetto, out of Buff and Blue, by War Dance—Balloon, and owned by young Mr. W. S.
Hobart, who purchased him before the running off of the above-named stakes. He is a stake horse, and it was believed seven furlongs would prove too short for him.

Handsome, E. Corrigan's "$10,000 beauty," was a very high class two-year-old, but in his later form proved a gay deceiver. He is by Hanover, out of imp. Cinderella.

Libertine, by Leonatus—Falsie, is four years old, and holds the race record for a mile of 1:38½ on a regulation course, made at Chicago in October, 1894, and did hold the seven and one-half furlong record till it was broken at Bay District in October last by Mamie Scott. He is a sprinter of exceptionally high class and is owned by J. G. Brown.

Vincter is also a record breaker, holding the coast record of 1:40, made in the Del Mar Stakes at Sacramento last September, in which he beat Del Mar's time and gave him name to the stakes. In that race he defeated Libertine, the latter carrying 112 and the former 122 pounds. He is one of the famous Brutus colts, owned by Charles Boots, and can go a distance in fast time.

Sister Mary has a very fast turn of speed, and seven furlongs is to her liking. Probably the weight did not suit her to day. She was purchased for $6,000 last year by W. B.
Stick, and won several races for him. In her first start at Bay District this season she defeated Vincter at six and one-half furlongs, but two days later he came back and gave her a beating at seven furlongs.

Potentate either runs like a racehorse or shows a streak of yaller. He is a faint-hearted brute. To-day he was out in front all the way, and so he won easily by three lengths. He was an odds-on favorite, and Griffin had the mount, which, by the way, was his first winning one here this winter. Moderocio, a warm second choice, finished second, two lengths in front of Roma. Time, 1:30.

In the last race, at a mile and seventy yards, Wheel of Fortune was installed favorite, with Oakland and Foremost on even terms as second choice. Thornhill, who was butter fat on his last start, was backed down from 8 to 6 to 1. He made a runaway race of it and won from the speedy Wheel by five lengths. Foremost was third three lengths away.
Time, 1:44½.

Potentate was the only favorite to win to day, long shots prevailing even over second choices.

Tod Sloan won three winners, and Coady, Garner and Griffin the others.

SUMMARIES.

Time, 1:46½.

Won by five lengths, three lengths between second and third.
Oakland (Garner, 105, 7 to 2), Salonica (McIntyre, 99, 30 to 1) and Whitstone (McIntyre, 112, 30 to 1) also ran.

W. A. SKINNER, Spotswood, N. J., writes: I have used
Absorbine and am pleased with the results.

AMASA PRATT, Ord., Neb., writes: The trial bottle of Absorbine you sent me works like magic.

Mrs. A. A. MARKS, Sound Beach, Conn., writes: Am very much pleased with Absorbine.

THE NEW REPORT race track was completed weeks ago, and Secretary Russell told me the other day the fine new grand stand is nearing completion. The paddock is finished, the betting enclosure nearly so. It is said the new track will open the ball for spring racing near Cincinnati.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

EDITED AND CONDUCTED SOLELY BY

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

"EXTREME SPEED."—The paragraph, copied in this department last week, in which the editor of The Rider and Driver, Samuel Walter Taylor Jr., gave his opinion of the present system of breeding trotting horses. I again present the paragraph in order that people may not have the trouble of looking at another paper for the information.

"We all know that trotting horses bred simply for speed—to try to get down to two minutes—bring low prices. If a breeder fail to get speed he has on his hands a lot of horses not fit for anything—long ewe-necked, slab sided eyesores.
They should stop breeding for extreme speed, and then try to get horses with beauty of conformation, bone and substance."

As was stated before, Mr. Taylor has a limited knowledge of the business, or is so intensely prejudiced against the type, that he cannot avail himself of the information so readily obtained by visiting the breeding farms on which this class of horses is produced. Extreme speed, and endurance to make that speed effective, can only be secured by an approximation to the very highest form, to that of the accepted model, where these qualities are sought, the best specimens of thoroughbreds. I have yet to see a very fast horse, one that was capable of sustaining a great rate of speed for even a mile, which was not "after the pattern" of good racehorses. Some of them might be plain in appearance, not apt, perhaps, to take the eye of a novice, but on close inspection the good "points" predominating. Or it may be that faulty shape in some respects were overcome by great excellence in others. Thus English Eclipse it is stated had a straight "loaded" shoulder, but with such immense power in loin, quarters and thighs as to make amends for that deficiency, enabling him to gallop at his ease when the best of his competitors were struggling far in the rear.

But the high withers which are fancied by the English, or it may be better to state, were insisted upon in a perfectlyshaped racehorse, is not a necessity for speed; in fact, it can safely be said that a "loaded shoulder" in place of being a hindrance may be beneficial as loaded implies a surplus of muscle, and as instantaneous photography has proved that the last great impulse to throw the body forward in its air-flight is given by the foreleg, that even a surplus of muscular force is advantageous. It is quite true that the action is not apt to be so perfect as when shoulders are "thinner," but the consideration of this point would necessitate a long article or even a number of essays. When "form" is the topic it will be sufficient to state that to take the fastest harness horses, from the days of Lady Suffolk to the champion of 1895, Azote, a large proportion of them have been of high form. And should the two minute trotter be an actuality very safe to infer that the shape will be a very close approximation to that of a high class racehorse.

These breeding establishments which have been the most successful in producing fast trotters, have gained that success by making speed the primary object. "Simply for speed" is a phrase which has little meaning. When the highest rate of speed is dependent upon form being good that is one, if not the main, element sought after. For instance, Governor Stanford had three essentials which he demanded should be present to secure acceptance of the animal offered. The first, the head had to be satisfactory in order that there should be a degree of intelligence which could only be determined by close scrutiny of that portion of the body. Were that in accordance with his views, the second, form, and then the pedigree. All three of these had to come fairly within his requirements to be accepted, and as Governor Stanford was a capital judge of horses, those he selected were of a high order of excellence.

It is well known that C. J. Hamlin selected Mambrino
King on account of his breeding and a figure which had given him the title of the "handsomest horse in the world." When the French Commissioners, sent here to make a critical examination of American horses, dubbed him with that mark of superiority, the European endorsement gave him the "place" on that side of the Atlantic as he already had it here. His sire, Mambrino Patchen, could "outstyle" the most stylish hackney ever seen in the home of the "Cob."
"Good at both ends and both ends up," as his owner was accustomed to say, and the tail end up notwithstanding the weight of a superabundance of hair.

Stamboul is another illustration of the good which follows breeding for speed, and I have no hesitation in writing that if all the prize hackneys in the world were shown against him he would secure the premium, the award to be made on beauty, style and all the most desirable qualities which are sought in light harness horses.

"Long, ewe-necked, slab-sided horses," might be far superior to the short, short-ribbed, round-chested type which is oftentimes the result of breeding hackneys. The ewe neck takes away from beauty I am ready to admit, even that is preferable to one which is as big, or nearly so, at the junction of the head and neck as at the body. A deep chest, after the elliptical form, is far superior to a circular thorax, or even an approach to a circular, and slab-sided, when accompanied with long back ribs, is not so bad as a body like the section of a tree. But a person who forms his ideal after a hackney pattern can not be expected to recognize good form when it is presented, and the attempt to teach him, labor lost.

There is another point in the paragraph which is worthy of consideration, and which is oftentimes brought forward by horsemen outside of hackney circles. Mr. Walters says "bone and substance." It can hardly be taken that he implies that trotting-bred horses are without that essential part of the structure of a horse, his meaning being that when simply bred for speed they are deficient in amount of bone.
"Good, flat bones" is considered eulogistic when applied to the legs of a horse. Good must be meant to apply to size, as the quality in a living horse cannot be determined. "Plenty of bone" is another phrase in vogue. I have never yet seen a leg which had not bone enough provided tendons were of sufficient size. (I mean, of course, the leg below the knee.)
I have seen very bad legs when bone and tendons were light, the very worst, in fact, intensely bad, when the bones were large.

I can put my creed in very few words. I believe that for beauty, adaptability to cover a "distance of ground" at a high rate of speed and form of the highest type for nearly all purposes, thoroughbreds are unrivalled.

The "American trotter," which carries a greater proportion, by far, of that blood than any other is unquestionably the superior of all other races for harness purposes, excepting very heavy draft. That for saddle uses (including pacers in the family) they are eminently fitted, and as "general utility" horses they are unrivalled.

Furthermore that while "fresh infusions" of racing blood will be advantageous, the mixing of other strains will be detrimental, especially hackney crosses. Coach horses, which are mainly of thoroughbred blood, may come in to good place, as has been shown by the combination of blood in Cogent, he being by Mambrino King, from a French coaching mare.

Rancho del Paso imported a French coaching stallion, Admirable, a good looking horse, and his pedigree showed a preponderance of thoroughbred blood, and from what I have learned the mixture of thoroughbred with Percheron and others has been the plan followed in France to obtain coach and carriage horses.

DE LACYISM.—It appears to me that there is a tendency among some of the San Francisco people to emulate the example of the notorious De Lacy, of New York. When the city betting rooms were closed in that city he started on a crusade against racing, and incidentally trotting, and having plenty of money, which he had secured from his victims, and which he was satisfied to use to gratify the malignancy of his disposition, gave a great deal of trouble; and eventually through a confederation of bigots, and well meaning though ignorant people, that is those who were informed in regard to the questions at issue, and the tribe of blacklegs who train under, De Lacy, carried his point, secured the introduction of a clause in the new constitution prohibiting betting and pool selling. That was partially overcome by the Percy-Gray bill and then De Lacy by giving what he called a race meeting, in the name of the Flushing Jockey Club but under the management of his subordinate, and then had a suit brought against them which resulted in such a verdict as suited his purpose. It has been clearly shown that De Lacy was on both sides, plaintiff and defendant and so that effort failed.

There is something analogous in the situation here to that in New York. The effort to close the down town betting rooms has been met with a similar movement viz., to have an ordinance passed that would prohibit book betting and pool selling within the inclosure in which races are decided.

There is no question that the Ellert ordinance prohibits book-betting, outside of the race courses in San Francisco county, and confines betting on races to those which are actually in progress upon the tracks. That under its provisions the down-town betting rooms can be closed is also conceded were proper methods taken to suppress them. It is well known that the suit brought was not prosecuted properly, and it is also claimed that it was of the same kind as the suit against the Flushing Jockey Club when De Lacy was on both sides, plaintiff and defendant. No attempt made to show that the "commission business" could not be true under the circumstances, and when the prosecuting lawyer failed to make that showing the judge was forced to render the decision that he did. The proposed licensing of the betting rooms, making the tax so heavy that only a few of the prominent firms could afford to pay it would be a great improvement, and were it also incorporated in the ordinance that commission rooms must be closed at 1 p. m. and not opened until after 6 p. m., it would be still better. Even that plan is fraught with the greatest danger. It can safely be accepted that betting rooms in the cities will eventually destroy racing. So sure to have that effect that to argue otherwise shows a manifest incapacity to understand the situation, or accept the lessons of the past as guides for the future. Those who favor them can only be actuated by profit to themselves. Those who are engaged in the business feel confident of "making their piles" before the crash comes. Lawyers who advocate the passage of ordinances to that effect are not looking to anything else than securing a fee. In all probability keeping open the down-town betting rooms for a few months longer will compel the passage of an ordinance which will close the race courses in this county, if delayed, an act of the legislature will close them throughout the State.

Should the De Lacy move, which has been made on the chess board in the supervisors' room be successful, it is the longest kind of odds that Alameda county will present the same obstacle, and very nearly as certain that Sacramento, Santa Clara and Los Angeles counties will also follow. That means an end to the sports of turf and track in California. It has a wider significance, the loss of millions of dollars to California and Californians. Hundreds of visitors drawn hither by three powerful magnets, climatic, scenic and racing will stay away. The popularity of this State as a winter resort will be greatly impaired. As it now stands Eastern folks who come here, owners, trainers and the far larger proportion, people who make a business or pleasure of "following the races," are loud in their praises when they return home. Everyone who has passed a winter in California is an ardent apostle presenting the claims of California with an enthusiasm that carries conviction, and every succeeding year adding to the attendance from abroad. This is not conjecture. Last winter such a number of Eastern visitors on the Bay District course as to surprise many of our home people, more than double the number this year already and more coming.

While there is quite a large number of the residents of San Francisco directly interested in horses, it can safely be claimed that there are at least one hundred indirectly concerned for one whose interests are immediate. Not a hotel, nor restaurant, hay and grain dealers, in fact, in addition to those who are in close communication from a business point of view, not a resident of San Francisco who is not benefited. The large amounts of money which are put in general circulation aid all kinds of business, has a potent effect in overcoming the depressing influences of "hard times," adds to the material wealth of the country in many ways, an aggregation of dollars far beyond what a casual observer would believe possible.

There is only one way to foster the industries dependent, to secure the advantages which follow, viz., restricting wagers in accordance with the Ellert ordinance.

This is no time for apathy. The crisis is at hand. De Lacyism must be crushed out so effectually that were there a hundred De Lacys in San Francisco they would be powerless to accomplish their ends, however fierce in their determination to wreck racing institutions their malignity impotent, their animosity of as little effect as that of the viper which broke its teeth on the file.

LESSON THE DANGER.—Recently I have presented a paragraph about the use of hoppers in races, and it strikes me that no other argument is necessary than that of danger to ensure the action of both governing bodies, and a peremptory mandate compelling every member to banish them from the track during the contests. A deadly hazard to every driver in the race, and certainly not an element of pleasure to the spectators unless those of such an inhuman nature as to take delight in tragic scenes; not the similitude as witnessed on the stage, but real tragedies where death is imminent. It is true that Eugene Sue presented a mimic case, in which a man followed a circus in all of its wanderings, took a front seat in the auditorium, hoping to see the black panther tear in pieces the man who exhibited the naturally furious beast but let us hope that visitors to the track are not imbued with parallel sentiments.

There can only be two classes of advocates for the retention of hoppers, viz., associations which look for increased entries and owners of horses which are unable to win without their aid.

It may be that there are some drivers who are willing to risk their lives to secure an easier way of winning races, but this self jeopardizing should not be allowed to hazard other lives, and in place of being an evidence of possessing that much quality, courage, is more fittingly termed fool hardiness.

Then if fields were restricted, not more than eight allowed to start in a jay one race, another element of danger would be decreased, and with fairer chances to the participants. This, however, is a more troublesome question and may present difficulties that are hard to overcome. The most feasible plan is to embody in the conditions a clause which will authorize a division of the purse or stake when the entries or subscriptions reach a certain number, the contestants being designated by lot.

Very many casualties have resulted from collisions and these could be guarded against, in a great measure, by constructing sulkies with guards similar to the raves of a sleigh. Years ago I had a cart made with such protection and it not only was a guard against injury from collisions but in case of a broken axle the vehicle was held very nearly in its proper position, the periphery of the wheel catching the frame of the rave. A patent was obtained for a similar contrivance and a person who was endeavoring to sell the device came to my place with one of the guards. He told me he was informed in San Francisco that I had a patent for it also but this was a mistake. It differed from mine as it was attached to the shaft and the point of the spindle leaving the back part of the wheel unprotected. The object was to keep the hubs of the opposing wheels from getting among the spokes, and also if the vehicle struck the fence the guard would throw it off without damage, whereas if the hub caught a post injury would be done.

The sulky fitted with the ram would not sustain injury, or inflict it, in a collision, while the weight would only be slightly increased. To guard against the danger of being injured by a wheel in the rear striking inside of the other, the cross-bar of the rave could be made slightly higher than the diameter of the wheel, reaching, of course, from outside to outside. Were both sulkies provided with guards, the one in the rear could not get inside of the leading wheel. The guard attached to the shaft, to the spindle, or rather the point of the axle, extending to the rim of the wheel and then to the crossbar with an upper curvature of the posterior portion of the guard, therefore the guards would force the vehicles apart. An objection has been made that, owing to the guards, there would be greater width and more space on the track occupied. Using metal tubes for guards and three inches are ample allowance, but to offset that drivers would keep closer to each other, being secure from injury, if even the rave came together, and then, too, the inside driver would not have so much dread of striking the fence.

In addition to lessening the danger from collisions, there would be other advantages. "Carrying out," i. e., compelling a horse which is in pursuit to "drive wide" or "getting the worst" of the clash, would not be so effective. When no harm could come from the impact of the sulkies there would be no fear of the consequences.

Among the very old-time racing laws was one that a jockey who endeavored to pass on the inside did so at his peril. While the code does not grant the right to "post" the horse which is endeavoring to pass on the inside, "nipping" is frequently practiced to the detriment of the horse which is behind, but a successful "pinching" would be far more difficult to accomplish, in fact, with such vehicles as I have so slightly sketched, there would be fairer fields for all engaged, and "helpers" not so much in demand as they are at present.

In the old days of trotting, especially on the country tracks, there were few races from which the sulkies came out uninjured. "The hardest fend-off" was the governing maxim, and this incited a driver to invent a sulky which gave him the victory, until complaints were entered against its use. Simple, indeed, the expedient. Hubs lengthened and spokes set wide apart where they entered the hub. When this vehicle, after the pattern of chariots with projecting scythes, "laid alongside" of another spokes were shivered in the other without the varnish being abraded in the protected gig. That with guards defend both, incapable of doing damage, and yet with immunity from receiving injury it is difficult to see grounds for valid objections to its introduction.

THE OLDEST TURF REPORTER.—In the Call of recent date, in which there was a two page and by-the-way a very interesting description of the Ingleside race course and the people connected with it, it was stated: "Captain T. B. Merry was born in New York in 1834 and came to California in 1853. He has reported races longer than any man living at the present time, having begun in 1856. Not even Joseph Cairn Simpson is longer in the field than the Captain, who, however, is a younger man."

The earliest reports I can recall writing were published in the same year, 1856, of the Davenport races on the course which was constructed by R. K. Allen, the first track of that length west of the Mississippi river, north of Missouri and east of California. I date my race-reporting life, however, from 1859, when I did the big St. Louis Fair and the races on the Abbey track for The Democrat, since that time I have been in harness with few let ups.

I am quite ready to concede that Captain Merry is entitled to "the age" as we used to say in an old-fashioned game, brag, and while the hands are similar he holds the best. Although I feel confident that I am the oldest, in years, of any active turf scribe of the day. I am under the impression that there are men still living who antedate either of us as turf reporters.

There is another coincidence between Captain Merry and myself, both of us having come to the U. S. the same year, August, 1834, though if not born before August of that year. I have lived in America longer than he has. Captain Merry has written a "heap" of good things and I sincerely hope that a great many years will elapse ere his turf writings come to a close.

COMPARE trotting-bred and Hackney-bred premiums, won at the late New York Horse Show, and the advocates of the first named need not feel any qualms of regret, however enthusiastic their advocacy. In the sales-ring, too, it was proved that trotting blood was no bar to high prices even when animals were wanted for the uses to which hackneys can be put. Were the field extended there would be no chance for comparison.

"BARON 3435, the imported Hackney stallion whose portrait is presented herewith," is the opening of a reading notice in The Horseman, and in that high encomiums of the the horse. The portrait justifies the eulogy in a measure, though it carries the marks of a counterfeit, and these so evident that when another portrait is placed in juxtaposition there can be little doubt of its spuriousness. The picture of Recovery, a steel engraving, in the frontispiece in the "Pictorial Gallery of English Racehorses," was evidently before the artist when he drew the figure. Accompanying the engraving there is a description of the horse and the reasons for giving him a place among the cracks.

"An equestrian statue having been finally determined to be the fittest subject for the 'Wellington Testimonial,' and the execution of the group entrusted to the taste and skill of Mr. Wyatt, he, after looking in vain for any horse of such proportionate beauties as should be pleasing to the common eye, without offending the severe taste of the classic; declared at last that such rare qualities were only to be found united in the shape of symmetry of limb displayed by the subject of this memoir."

With the exception of the body being made some what heavier in the picture of Baron, it is almost identical, even to a diamond shaped star in the forehead and the pose of the tail, though the saddle marks are omitted. The legs are distorted to show what the artist supposed is the action of the hackney, though it is clearly the pacing gait.

If the owner of Baron will send me a photograph of his horse and it corresponds fairly with the picture in The Horseman I will cheerfully admit that there is one of the tribe of high form, and do my utmost to increase the "popularity" of that individual. JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

Radical Changes Made.

At the last meeting of the Board of Directors of the California Jockey Club a number of changes were made in the official management of the Bay District track. Following the example set by the Pacific Coast Jockey Club they selected a well-known and highly-esteemed gentleman from Sacramento. Edwin F. Smith, secretary of the State Agriculture Society, and member of the firm of Killip & Co., the well-known auctioneers of this city, has been appointed general manager of the Bay District track, and will assume his duties on the day of opening, December 26. He will also act as one of the five board of stewards. A better selection or one which will meet with more universal approbation could not be made, as Mr. Smith is thoroughly qualified in every way and is withal one of the most genial of men. The public will take a greater interest in the old Bay District than ever.

Norman Brough, who for the past four years has been handicapper at this track, has been discharged, not for incompetency, but his manner had antagonized a number of prominent horsemen, and the association could not afford to overlook their complaints. His successor has not been appointed yet.

Yearlings From Bitter Root Stock Farm At Auction.

The preliminary announcement is made by Matt Byrnes, superintendent for Marcus Daly, the Copper King, of the sale at auction here on Wednesday evening next, the 18th inst., at the big tent, of fourteen yearlings and two two-year-olds, that arrived here direct from Bitter Root Stock Farm Tuesday morning. Mr. Daly has never held a yearling sale before, always having put his colts in training on the home place. Those offered for sale are all untried, and will be disposed of for want of room to handle them on the farm. Catalogues will be issued at once, and no doubt many desirable youngsters will be found among the lot. Send to Killip & Co. and they will mail you a catalogue as soon as issued.

A VERY neat and comprehensive little work has been received. The title is "The Passing of the Plow." It presents in a series of articles the benefits of subsoiling and the best manner of preparing the soil for the production of crops. A novice in agricultural pursuits as well as a practical farmer will learn much from this little work which will not be forgotten, and after closing it the conclusion must be that the day for the old-fashioned, heavy-pulling, earth-disturbing plow has passed, and the new subsoil plow must be the only one to use hereafter. The Deere Disk and Subsoil Plow will revolutionize plowing, and as it is the best one ever patented we recommend our readers to write to this company for circulars, and then if the facts are satisfactory send for one of these plows. This is an age of progress and the one to succeed is the one who is quick to adopt the newest, cheapest and best labor-saving appliances, such as the agricultural implements made by this company and the agency is at 305 and 307 Market street.

TURF AND TRACK

THE SULKY.

MAMBRINO PATCHEN'S daughters produced 124 trotters and pacers.

MINNIE, by Junio, 2:22, is the dam of the good three-year-old Potrero, 2:21.

ALL the leading stock farms report their stock to be in excellent condition this winter.

JOHN H. SHULTS will breed Laurel, 2:00½, by Brown Hal, to his pacing stallion Thistle, 2:13½.

THE horses that Monroe Salisbury intends to sell at auction will be sent to the auctioneer in February.

MYRON MCHENRY will soon bring a carload of trotters to Pleasanton. He will winter at this famous track.

SEND us any items you may have regarding your colts or fillies. News like this may be of great benefit to you.

THE question now agitating the leading light harness men is: "Shall harness races be made mile heats two in three?"

THE Boulevard Association is achieving great success in getting good roads constructed in and around San Francisco.

COL. W. L. CRABB, of Eminence, Ky., is still breeding good ones from his stallion Mortimer, 2:27, by Electioneer.

DECORUM, the sister to Direct, 2:05½, recently purchased by E. H. Harriman, of New York, will be bred to Stamboul, 2:07½.

ONLY one of Piedmont's daughters appeared as the dam of a 2:30 performer in 1895, and that one is Rosemont, dam of Mazatlan, 2:27½.

THE late Col. Harry I. Thornton owned a few head of trotters. They will be disposed of at public auction after the first of the year.

AMONG broodmare sires Electioneer stands very high. In the year 1895 thirteen 2:30 performers appear in the list as having his daughters for dams.

DUTCH DAVE, one of the old-time California trotting horse drivers, is handling a big string at Honolulu. He will be the Ed. Geers there next year.

THE James Madison colt Addison, at the Oakland Race Track, is one of the most promising trotters there. He will be seen on the circuit next year.

WOODBINE is the dam of Wedgewood, 2:19, the grandam of Proctor, 2:16, the great-grandam of Leonatus, 2:17½, and the great-great-grandam of Quiz, 2:19½.

THERE is a filly by Monbacs, 2:11½, out of the dam of Arthur L., 2:20½, at Jas. Sutherland's place at Pleasanton that is more promising than this, her half brother, by Direct.

REGAL WILKES, 2:11½, made a very small season at John H. Shults' Parkville Farm in 1893 and 1894 and his colts are very promising, handsome and natural trotters. Several will be raced next year.

THERE were more horses and vehicles seen in Golden Gate Park last Sunday than were ever noticed before. We shall soon see articles written in the daily papers upon the decadence of the bicycle.

NINE of Gen. Benton's daughters appear as dams of new 2:30 performers for 1895. The late Senator Stanford's claim that he would make one of the world's greatest broodmare sires seems to be verified.

THE Year Book states that Smuggler, 2:15½, was foaled in 1866, but J. M. Morgan, of Olathe, Kan., who bred and grew him, says that he was foaled the night Abraham Lincoln was killed, which was the 14th of April, 1865.

HART BOSWELL, the only son of the great Onward on this Coast, is at Laurelwood Farm, San Mateo. He is out of the Dictator mare Nancy Lee (dam of Nancy Hanks, 2:04), and all his progeny show that they are not only pure-gaited but speedy.

HAMBLETONIAN MAMBRINO is now twenty-one years old, but he is as spry as a colt, and with the exception of having enlarged glands, is as sound as a dollar. He will serve all the mares on the Witch Hazel Farm next year except those of his kin.

W. S. HOBART is only satisfied when he gets the very best. Last Tuesday he secured the services of that "artist in iron," F. J. Cochran. This celebrated horseshoer is one of the best in the United States, and in the shoeing of horses that interfere he has no equal.

DURING the last week in the city of New York not less than 500 trotting-bred horses were disposed of, and when it is considered that the average price of the entire lot was $300, it would seem that there was plenty of food in the fact for the comfort of horse breeders.

JAY BEACH is jogging a two-year-old on the Irvington track that is a full brother to Chehalis, Del Norte and Touchet. This fellow is a bay, and a counterpart of the old horse, while his three full brothers are very fast sidewheelers. Mr. Beach thinks this fellow will be equally as fast at the trot.

SINCE the publication of President Spreckels' kind offer to let the trotting horse men have Ingleside free of charge any time this summer, a large number of horsemen visited the track Sunday, and El Lafferty said: "From its shape and the class of soil on it, I think it will be the best trotting track in California."

FRANK S. GORTON, of Chicago, has a colt by Direct, dam Lulu F., which was given to him by Monroe Salisbury. The little fellow is quite promising and well bred. "Just feed him plenty of oats," said the Californian. "Make him grow. I'll pay the expenses." "No, you will not," said Mr. Gorton, "for I rather like the idea of taking good care of a colt given me. I think it is lucky. Robert J. was a gift horse, you know." "So was Stamboul," added Mr. Salisbury. Perhaps the little fellow will make a great horse. He is well bred.

W. G. LERMOND has moved to Vancouver, Wash., with his stable of trotters, where he will winter and train for next season's campaign. He has Kitty Caution, 3, 2:25, by Caution—hy Bellfounder; Baby Ruth, by Caution—Osgood Maid, and a two-year-old full brother to Kitty Caution, and he is a fine, racy looking colt.

A NUMBER of horse breeders who sent their horses to the Horse Show declare they will never do so again, and have all kinds of complaints to make of the judging and their treatment. Of one thing there can be no doubt—every horse cannot win a first prize, even though this knowledge was not gained until after the show ended.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON has a colt by Chas. Derby, 2:20, out of a mare by Antevolo, 2:19½, that is the making of another great campaigner. He has size, substance, speed and a disposition to trot and stick to it. Everyone hopes this well known writer will have a return of the good fortune he had when he bred Anteo, Antevolo and Anteros.

THE San Mateo Stock Farm was well represented at the Horse Show and won a number of splendid prizes. Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, Fred Kohl, 2:12½, Fred S. Moody, 2:18, Prince Airlie and Refero—a family of horses anyone might well be proud of, and when shown in the ring the youngsters seemed to understand just what was required of them.

THE bay mare Antonette, by Anteros, owned by A. A. Scott of Lima, Ohio, which was started in a few races this fall, showed miles in 2:25. She was bred for three years to Alfonso, and was not taken up until late in the season, and all things considered she made a very creditable showing. She is now being jogged and next year is expected to trot close to 2:15.

THE road to Ingleside from the Golden Gate Park via the Almshouse is one of the poorest in San Francisco county, and unless something is done to make it fit to drive on it will be abandoned by all who wish to go the race track, and the road via the Park, Ocean Beach and Ingleside will be used. "It's the longest way round, but the best way to go."

SPEAKING of the docked tails on the horses at the New York Horse Show an old man was heard to remark: "It may suit these Anglomaniacs, but show me the true born American who would allow anyone to chop off the tail of his favorite horse to suit such people, and I will show you a man who is trying to make himself believe he is right, but it's a difficult proposition."

MR. E. D. SLATER, who bought Rio Alto, 2:16½, last week is an old-time road rider and member of the New York Driving Club. In company with Frank G. Phelps, of Boston, Mass., he has just started a breeding farm at Saugerties, N. Y., and the farm is to be named after the new horse. It is likely that Rio Alto will be kept in the stud until he becomes thoroughly acclimated.

SENATOR W. M. STEWART, of Nevada, has purchased a farm of several hundred acres near Leesburg, Va., to which point he will remove all of his choice mares and young things at an early date. A half-mile track will be constructed on the farm, and a skilled trainer placed in charge of the plant. Senator Stewart intends to spend all of his leisure hours on his stock farm, and devote himself to breeding trotters.

THE trotting mare Orange Girl, 2:20, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian—Dolly Mills, by Seely's American Star, is now the dam of three in the list, viz.: Arcturus, 2:21½, by Artillery, 2:21½; Orangelander, 2:16½, by Greenlander, 2:12; and Ozo, ma, 2:29½, by Earl, 2:23½. Artillery, 2:21½, sire of Arcturus, 2:21½, is brother in blood to Orange Girl, 2:20, being by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, out of a daughter of Seely's American Star.

THE stallion owner that is looking into the future should announce the services of his stallion in the columns of the reputable turf papers. Prospects for breeding, the coming season, are brighter than they have been for some time, and owners of mares that have not been bred the past three years are figuring on where to breed in 1896. An advertisement in the turf papers is a good investment for those that are looking ahead.

THERE was always a string of admirers around the stalls where the celebrities: W. Wood, 2:07, Diablo, 2:0½, McKinney, 2:11½, Zombro, 2:13, Fred Kohl, 2:12½, Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, Silver Bow, 2:16, Boodle, 2:12½, Ethel Downes, 2:13, James Madison, 2:17½, Fred Moody, 2:18, and Iran Alto, 2:19½ were: The American trotting horse, although not shown in the ring as often as the hackneys, seemed to have the most friends.

THE youngsters being prepared by Cope Stinson at the San Mateo Stock Farm for the great sale to take place from this farm in New York City in February, will, if no sickness occurs among them, be the best ever shipped across the continent. Mr. Corbitt will send his very best, and as the produce of Guy Wilkes have won more money in the past four years on the turf than any other stallion living or dead, there will be an active demand for the most of these.

F. WICKERSHAM, of Fresno, who has been on a visit to this city for some time, says the youngsters by Junio, 2:22, are all fine lookers. He has two grand looking four-year-old mares by this horse out of mares by Dawn, and their second dams were by Whippleton. He also has a large three-year-old colt called Bolinas, out of Maud Whippleton, by Whippleton, that has more style than a Hackney, and according to those who have seen him, he is much handsomer.

THOSE who entered their horses to be sold at the close of the Horse Show were very angry when they saw that the track on which the horses were to be shown in the Mechanics' Pavilion was torn up. Intending purchasers saw its condition, and not being able to judge of the gait of the horses, were as much disappointed as those who were anxious to sell. Messrs. Killip & Co., the auctioneers, did not deserve such treatment from the Horse Show Association.

JEWETT, 2:14, the famous pacing horse, the property of Phil Groben, who recently bought him from J. M. E. Morrill, of Boston, died yesterday morning. A few days ago Groben gave orders that the horse be shipped from Boston to his new home in Buffalo. Monday Jewett arrived in the Central yard at East Buffalo. Later in the day a switch engine bumped up against the car containing the pacer and he was thrown in a heap, suffering an injury to his spine which caused his death.

THERE will be an effort made in the next year to get some horses that will give W. S. Hobart's horses a contest for first prize at the next horse show. These people will find no one more anxious to have worthy competitors than this modest young gentleman, and as he says, "competition's the life of trade, and the more we see of it in the horse industry the greater and more lasting will be the results." We should all strive to get the very best. Nothing else is demanded of us at present.

THE Burch mare was the dam of Rosalind, the best daughter of Abdallah (15), and has two in the list, her daughter Blandina is the dam of Barcina. Blandina has seven sons that are sires; Barcina is the dam of Bayard Wilkes, 2:16½, and his sister Bertha the dam of Diablo, 2:09½, at four years. Rosalind, 2:21½, is the dam of Charles Caffrey, sire of fourteen trotters and three pacers, and Intrigue, sire of five trotters. Another daughter of the Burch mare is Burchwood, dam of Kingwood, 2:17½. Here are three of her daughters represented in the standard list.

WM. CORBITT, of the San Mateo Stock Farm, only selected eight horses for the Horse Show and every one of them won a prize. They carried ten firsts and two seconds back to the farm, besides a splendid cup which was added to the cash prize won by Guy Wilkes. This horse also won first for himself and family over McKinney, 2:11½, and Silver Bow, 2:16. No better evidence of Mr. Corbitt's good judgment is needed than this. Besides these horses there was another mare he raised and is also by Guy Wilkes, she won fifteen prizes, her name is Hazel Wilkes. Mr. Corbitt sold her to W. S. Hobart in the East two years ago.

L. C. RUBLE, of Rio Vista, has two of the handsomest fillies that were exhibited at the Horse Show. One is by Rupee, 2:11, out of Madeline, by Arthurton; second dam Henrietta, by Bell Alta; third dam by Peacock. She is only two years old and a trotter of the highest class. The other is also two years old; she is bred in the purple, being by Electricity, 2:17½, out of Woodflower (dam of the great trotter Seylax, 2:15½), by Ansel; second dam Mayflower, 2:30½ (dam of Wildflower, 2:21, and Manzanita, 2:16), by St. Clair. These are both very promising, and are for sale at a remarkably low figure.

MR. SAMUEL A. CROWELL, of Salem, arrived from California last week with a fine young stallion of Electioneer blood, Roswood 20,560, br s, foaled in 1891, sired by Eros, son of Electioneer, dam Maggie D., 2:19½, by Nutwood 600; second dam May, by George M. Patchen Jr.; third dam by Rifleman, son of imp. Glencoe; fourth dam by Williamson's Belmont; fifth dam by Red Buck, son of Bertrand. Eros is the grandsire of Visalia, 4, 2:12½, and Jasper Ayres, 3, 2:15½. Roswood's breeding is certainly very good, and as Mr. Crowell always looks after the "individual" as well as breeding, we predict he has made a choice selection. He sold Pilot Lemont, 2:21½, and he will be taken to Central America.—North Pacific Rural.

HENRY PIERCE, owner of the Santa Rosa Stock Farm, never lets an opportunity pass to secure a good young individual when he sees one. He visited Madison Square while in New York City the other day, and could not resist the temptation to secure a couple of good ones. He bought the two-year-old filly Lavera, by Allerton, 2:09½, out of Luck, by Eros, 2:29½, out of Nettie Nutwood, by Nutwood; third dam Lady Sculley (dam of Vanderlynn, 2:21), by Joseph. The other one was the handsome bay filly Aldea, by Truman, 2:12, out of Aldeana, by Electioneer; second dam Eliza Dolph by Wildidle; third dam Mamie C. (dam of Azuor, 2:20½, Electric King, 2:24, and Don Monteith, 2:29½), by imp Hercules.

THE breeder who sets out to breed size and quality will find his path beset with difficulties. As a rule horses of large size do not have a high degree of quality as a natural accompaniment. Like the breeder whose aim is to produce speed combined with beauty, the one who undertakes to get the combination of size and quality will have plenty of opportunity to put to test his faculty of selection and then to guess again after learning that his first attempt was far from being as successful as he had expected it to be. The trotting bred horse is as yet a horse of many types as far as conformation goes, but by judicious selection, and care in mating, a breeder will be enabled to produce the type he wishes if he is so constituted as to be able to draw deductions from the results of his breeding operations and profit thereby.

M. M. MORSE, for eight years secretary of the Board of Review of the National Trotting Association, has resigned, and W. H. Gocher has been appointed in his place. Mr. Gocher is a young man who has been for fifteen years or more connected with turf journalism. He is a native of Toronto, Ont., and was formerly identified with the Canadian Sportsman. About ten years ago he came to New York as a writer on trotting topics for the New York Sportsman. In 1889 he edited the Chicago Horseman for a few months, and then founded at Cleveland the American Sportsman, a weekly horse paper of which he is now the editor. He is the secretary of the American Sportsmen's League, an organization formed last year for the purpose of opposing legislation against race track betting.

THE advance guard of Village Farm campaigners for 1896 will be shipped in a few days to Selma, Ala., where E. F. Geers will be located for the winter. The complete list, sixteen in all, is as follows: Fantasy, 2:06; Nightingale, 2:08; Althano, 2:11½; Heir-at-Law, 2:12; Fuz Royal, 2:13½; Carillon, 2:18½; Princess Royal, two-year old record 2:20; Blue Bell, 2:22½; Incarnate, 3, no record, by Chimes, out of Mocking Bird, 2:16½; Valeure, 4, no record, by Mambrino King, out of Dottie, by Almont Jr.; Gerald Rex, b c, coming two, by Rex Americus, 2:11½, out of Geraldine (dam of Robert J., 2:01½); Scapegoat, coming four, by Heir-at-Law, 2:12, out of Minnequa Maid (dam of Nightingale, 2:08). Pacers: Robert J., 2:01½; Bright Regent, 2:04; Mocking Bird, coming five, by Mambrino King, out of Mabel (dam of Mocking Bird, 2:16½); Receiver, coming five, by Prince Regent, dam Content, by Mambrino King. Mr. Geers will also have a few outside horses in his stable. Several of the green horses are known to possess a high rate of speed, but it's too long ahead—the 1896 money at the wire—to make predictions. Suffice it to say, several of those mentioned are expected to bring back more fame to the already renowned Village Farm. Mr. C. J. Hamlin will probably go South later on. He celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday a short time since, enjoys the best of health, and is good for the century mark.

THE SADDLE.

NINETY weanlings are being fed at Belle Meade.

HIDAGO's last start was in the colors of Barney Schreiber.

LOVDAL is now at Ingleside and may be seen at the post soon.

CHARMION was quite a disappointment Friday in finishing last.

"DAILY RACING FORM" of Chicago has been suspended for the winter.

FURTHER action on the poolroom ordinances has been postponed for two weeks.

DIABLO has been sent to Charles Reed's farm, Fairview where he will do stud duty.

BYRON MCCLELLAND will confine his turf operations to the West mainly next year, it is said.

W. M. WALLACE will ship some of his string out here. Orinda has been sent to New Orleans.

ED. PURSER played $100 each way on Repeater with all the hooks that would give him 2 to 1.

SIXTEEN hooks, including field hooks, cut in Saturday. The Palace and San Francisco clubs dropped out.

J. J. CASE's good mare Kathleen cut herself badly in her last race, which accounted for her poor performance.

ALLAHABAD is an East Indian town, and on the "Pioneer" of that place Rudyard Kipling began his literary career.

WORK on the inside course at Ingleside progresses rapidly and is already completed for the full circle to a good width.

CHEVALIER, whose riding at Bay District made him such a favorite, leaves for New Orleans soon, to be absent but a few weeks.

DUCHESS, dam of Clifford, is with foal to the cover of imp. Loyalist. Her weanling by Luke Blackburn is considered the gem of the Meade.

QUITE a number of the English colony at Bakersfield have been in the city during the past few days, and several were visitors at Ingleside Monday.

RICO got into the heavy going in the stretch and fell back very suddenly. He would have been very close to the money had he been taken over on the dry stretch.

A GLASS wind-break has been put at the west end of the grandstand at Ingleside, and seats under its protection should be very popular during rain and foggy days.

APRIL was played heavily to win the hurdle race last Saturday. It was the first time that the heavy weights imposed upon him for his former superiority was taken off him.

THE well-known flat rider, Cash Sloan, made his appearance in a hurdle race on Saturday last. He rode Morgan G. and was the cause of quite a play being made on that horse.

HAZARD has improved very much with his last two races. With anything short of a desperate ride by Chorn on Alver Hazard would have had winning brackets to his credit Monday.

PRINCE LIEF, Byron McClelland's crack two-year-old, has developed into a fine-looking youngster, and there are many who predict he may one day prove as formidable as Henry of Navarre.

FOLLOWING the custom on Eastern tracks, the money was hung on the wire before the race for the Horse Show Stakes was run, and was taken therefrom by M. Bergen, rider of the successful horse.

THE stewards of the Pimlico track have awarded the purse won by Septour, Nov. 19, to James McLaughlin, whose colt Premier ran second. Septour's owner did not comply with the Rules of Racing.

LADAS, the celebrated English racehorse, now four years old, by Hampton—Illuminator, has been sent to the stud. He will hold court at Lord Rosebery's stud farm at Mentmore, near Cheddington, Bucks.

BOB SMITH, of Anaconda, Montana, the well-known jockey, arrived in this city Friday, and no doubt there will be a big call for his services in the saddle, as he is known as one of the best jockeys in the land.

AB STEMLER will take charge of El Primero, Caliente and other horses belonging to Joe Terry last week. One is a three-year-old maiden by Hidalgo and another is a Fitzjames two-year-old filly named Summer Time.

R. TUCKER has been engaged to train for Fleishman & Son next year. The string will be a select one. Wiley Jones will be the light weight jockey for the stable, and Doggett is mentioned as a probable leading one.

It will be some time before the bookmakers will again offer odds of 200 to 1, and corresponding figures for "show" on Fi Fi at a mile. Both of this horse's two last races have shown considerable improvement in his ability to go the distance in good company.

COLLINS was rode to victory on Saturday by a boy having the peculiar name of Two Bits. This was his second appearance here, but he has been riding successfully in the East, and our race-goers will find that, as a jockey, he is worth more than his name would imply.

THE mighty Fagin, winner of eight consecutive races, met his Waterloo last week when Forest took him into camp in the fourth race at Alexander Island. Rolla was the one played to beat Fagin, but Parson Underwood scored with Forest at the juicy odds of 5 to 1.

RAVELSTON's performance in the stake race on Saturday showed him to be a worthy son of Flambeau. This colt had run but few actual races, yet at the weights on Saturday was clearly the best horse in that race. It was only the superiority of Bergen over Piggott that lost the race to him.

DR. E. B. RICHARDSON, Everett, Mass., has bought of E. J. Crawford, Sybil, by Sultan, dam Posey (dam of Murtha, 2:18), by Flaxtail; also a yearling filly by Gen. Robinson, 2:31½, dam Sybil. Gen. Robinson is by Ellerslie Wilkes, and showed ability to trot considerably below 2:30 the past season.

JOAN, thanks to the advantage received at the start, came near capturing the colt race Friday. She made a run away race of it and was only caught at the last moment and beaten out half a length by Sir Play, undoubtedly the best colt of the lot. Had not Sir Play fortunately got away second the race would have been lost to him.

VOCALIC, by Virgil, dam Acoustic, that died suddenly November 14th, at Iroquois Stud Farm, was a good race horse in his day, and later a success in the stud, as he was the sire of Vortex, Bellevue, Blanche's Last, Sadie Thompson Oakview, Violetta and Vocalite. Vocalic was sixteen years old and was in apparent good health ten minutes before he was found dead.

WITH the exception of Griffin, A. Clayton, who has been engaged by the Brookdale Stable for the coming year at a salary of $10,000, without the privilege of outside mounts, made about as good an average as any jockey that rode continually last season, winning twenty-three out of ninety-nine mounts. He was no doubt the best available hoy that could have been secured, and will add materially to the strength of the Brookdale establishment.

BUSH SMITH at Helena, Montana, has three very promising youngsters that will be two years old next month. One is a filly by Salvator, out of Sentiment, by Sensation; very handsome, and as fast as a bullet. Another is a chestnut colt by Faverdale, out of imp. Born Fool, bred by W. T. Withers, and a colt by Montana (now at Ingleside), out of Asteroid. These are heavily engaged in stakes in the East and a better trio would be hard to find anywhere.

COL. W. P. THOMPSON has been asked by a wealthy gentleman to put a price on Requit, the champion two-year-old. It is not likely, however, that the Master of Brookdale will be tempted to sell the crack of his year at any price. Besides the brilliant outlook there is for Requit on the turf next season, it would be hard to find at any price a more desirable young stallion than the high-class son of Eothen and Retribution—N. Y. Mercury.

A LARGE number of the most prominent horsemen and officials at the Ingleside track visited the three-eighths pole Monday where the Australian starting machine has been placed. Mr. Lopez gave a number of exhibitions of its simple workings, and everyone pronounced it a success. There will be a public trial given of it some day this week. The jockeys all say it suits them, for they will all get an even start, and the fastest sprinter will not keep them at the post waiting until he or she comes back so they can break even.

"PITTSBURG PHIL" SMITH, known from one end of the country to the other as a heavy plunger and owner of very notable horses, arrived from New York Monday, accompanied by his mother, who makes her first visit to the Coast and will spend the winter here. Mr. Smith's horses have been here nearly a month in charge of his brother, W. C. Smith, who trains for the stable, and they may be seen at the post any day now. In the party that arrived were also Walter Keyes and Sam Mulford, both well-known Eastern form players.

THE judges rendered a final decision in the hurdle race Tuesday. No entries will be accepted from the Arizona Stable hereafter. Johnson and Goodman, the riders of J. O. C. and Three Forks respectively, were both ruled off. Frank Van Ness, owner of the Elkton Stable, was exonerated, as he proved that he had backed his horse. Morgan G., the winner of the race in question, was entered by Covington, but the evidence went to show that Johnson had an interest in the horse and was, therefore, really ineligible to ride under the rules.

FANNIE LOUISE made a poor showing with J. Lamle up in her race on Saturday. She appeared like sure money to the heavy bettors and played accordingly by them. Getting away promptly in the lead, it was seen that she did not draw away from her field with that ease expected of her and which she had shown in all her successful races. Before half the distance had been covered it looked as though she would be beaten out, but not so ignominiously as the outcome showed. The judges thought Lamle's ride a pathetic and suspended him indefinitely.

JUSTICE KERRIGAN Monday rendered a decision for the defendant in the suit of Joseph Harris against the California Jockey Club. Harris is a jockey and was barred from the Bay District track. He entered the grounds, being admitted on a regular admission ticket, and was forcibly ejected. He sued for $299 damages. Justice Kerrigan held that an admission ticket to a place of amusement is a revocable license, and the question in this case was to determine whether undue force was used in the ejection of the plaintiff. The Court decided that no undue force was used.

CAPTAIN JOHN KOSTER, one of the best known of the old-time racing men in America, died at his home in New York on Sunday last from an affection of the heart. Captain Koster was born in that city on November 15, 1825. He became a member of the old American Jockey Club at Jerome Park in 1863, and in 1880 was made its president and held the office for years, and afterward became clerk of the scales at Monmouth Park and handicapper. Captain Koster made a great name for himself, and was considered in his time the best judge in America of horses' weight-carrying ability.

BABE MURPHY annexed another winning race Monday, in her usual runaway style. She is very quick to break, and is always well under way by the time the flag falls. Cochran hugged the rail with her while the others turned wide into the stretch, and as he neared the wire discovered a dry strip up along the edge, which he took to with desperate haste, but the speedy filly was very safe, finishing a good five lengths in front of the others. She has an unbeaten record here, and may be said to hold two track records, as her five furlongs in 1:02½ and six in 1:17½ have not been equaled by any others.

SECRETARY MORSE is quoted as saying that "waiving distance does not allow a horse to do anything but drive for each and every heat, and he is subject to all other rules the same as though distance had not been waived." This is a common-sense view of the matter, but more than one instance may be cited where the judges have acted as if waiving distance gave horses and drivers liberty to go as they pleased.

A WELL KNOWN trainer who has been looking about for horses to campaign next year, says that horses suitable for racing are not easy to find anywhere, and he thinks that such horses will command high prices in the spring. The great falling off in the number of horses produced must necessarily tend to advance prices and those who have continued to breed and train should be in a position to profit by the increased demand caused by the decrease in the supply. The gradual but sure recovery from the effect of the financial depression will bring new buyers, both for roadster and the track horses.

W. S. LEAKE, Postmaster of Sacramento, will resign that office soon, to accept a more lucrative position in this city. He will become manager of the business of A. B. Spreckels, besides acting as secretary of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club at Ingleside. Mr. Leake is one of the most genial of men, and his reputation for making friends and keeping them, which was earned in his long residence in the Sacramento Valley, does not leave him. He is a thorough business man, and keenly alive to the requirements of every office he has ever filled. Everyone will be pleased to welcome him as an accession to the ranks of permanent officials, and we predict that his future will be a bright and creditable one.

IN an interview with Boh Smith, the well-known jockey who pulled off a big handicap race with Bathampton at Sheephead Bay on the 3d of July and was thought to be an unknown English rider, he says that the prospects for a good season of racing in Montana were never better. The leading horsemen there are very enthusiastic and are anxious to have that the racing grounds of America. Large purses will be offered on very liberal terms, and the programme of stakes will be announced shortly. Besides the splendid horses owned by Marcus Daly there are many good ones owned by Kirkendall, Bielenburg, Ryan Bros., Larrabee, Higgins Bros. and others that all are anxious to see what they will do.

P. LORILLARD has claimed and registered for his yearlings in England the following names: Berzak, for chestnut colt, by Sensation—Belphebe; Astolpho, for bay colt, by Sensation—Alcina; Quibble II., for chestnut colt by Sensation—Quandary; Equinox, for brown gelding, by Sensation—Breeze; Lamerock, for bay gelding, by Sensation—Lizzie Cox; Glaring, for bay gelding—by imp. The Sailor Prince—Flash; Draco, for chestnut gelding, by imp. The Sailor Prince—Darya; Dorado, for chestnut gelding, by Sensation or imp. The Sailor Prince—Doliuka; Sandia, for brown gelding, by imp. The Sailor Prince—Saluda; Pigeon Wing, for bay filly, by Sensation—All Hands Round; Magica, for chestnut filly, by Sensation—Witch, and Belisma, for brown filly, by Sensation—Blush.

JOCKEY LAMLE thinks he is in pretty hard luck. When he read the papers Sunday morning he learned that he had been set down for his ride on Fannie Louise the day before. Together with Trainer McCormick, of Burns & Waterhouse' stable, he called on the judges yesterday and was informed that there was no question of his honesty, but that he did not pull his whip soon enough—that he was expected to use the whip as soon as a horse got up to him when he was out in the lead. He admits that he allowed the winner to head him before he went to the bat, but he had been taught to depend more on hand-riding than on the use of accessories, and many stable owners and trainers will not allow the use of either whip or spurs. Some of the Eastern stables now here will send all their horses to the post without either, believing they always secure better results by hand-riding, as to the question of the result of Saturday's race, Lamle says that no persuasion he might have administered would have had any effect on Fannie Louise, and Trainer McCormick bore testimony to the mare's notorious faint-heartedness. Col. Burns is stated to have declared he never would place a bet on the mare again.

THE stockholders of the Oakley Jockey Club and those of the Latonia Jockey Club met at Cincinnati to consider the dates of the two Spring meetings near that city. The following plan was agreed upon. Oakley will open first in the Spring. Its opening date will depend on Louisville. It is expected that Louisville will open about the 6th of May. The Falls City date, however, is contingent on Lexington's closing. Under no circumstances will there be a conflict. Lexington will likely have eight days of racing and Louisville twelve. This will make the opening date at Oakley about May 21. There will be thirty days at Oakley and thirty days at Latonia. Last year Latonia had Decoration Day, and Oakley had the Fourth of July. Next year these dates will be reversed. Oakley will have a big stake on Decoration Day, and it will be Secretary Hopper's aim to have a big handicap for the Fourth of July. The question of starter and judge was also discussed. It has already been decided that John Carter will again officiate as presiding judge at Latonia, but the question of judges for Oakley was not decided. Neither was the question of who will do the starting. Pettingill, however, has the call for wielding the flag at both tracks.

THE crack sprinter Stonenell, that was claimed out of a selling race for $2,500 last May from Mr. Dwyer by Mr. T. Hoodles, developed such a villainous temper that his trainer declined to handle him any longer. He was then turned over to a circus country trainer, who schooled him over hurdles. Such work very frequently reforms bad-tempered sprinters, as, for instance, one of the worst brutes in training Churchill, afterward developed into the peerless steeplechaser Bourke Cockran. Stonenell, however, has not mended his ways. On the occasion of this debut over timber the day before yesterday he finished last in a field of three. It looks very much as if Stonenell would meet the fate of Mr. Lorillard's Sachem and Gerald, who, though very speedy horses—in fact, first-class performers—developed such tempers that even after a course of jumping work they became absolutely useless for racing. There must be something in the stable management of English establishments which is so intensely irritating to horses of a nervous disposition imported from America that they develop into savages in their boxes and rogues under silk. A score of cases might be cited of horses that had good dispositions here, but became mean abroad. Girofle is a notable instance.—N. Y. Mercury.

San Francisco, Saturday, December 14, 1895.

The Horse Show.

The prediction in these columns, that the Horse Show would prove a success was verified. The Eastern judges were very much interested in the result, as it was the absorbing topic among the horsemen of New York that if at the second great show given in Madison Square garden by the Horse Show Association no sum like $15,000 in cash prizes could be offered, the Horse Show in San Francisco would be a failure when it attempted to offer so much. New York has forty exhibitors where this city has one, and even with the very liberal amount of space being devoted to its exhibition in that immense city and its environments, its shows until this year have been far from being profitable.

In an interview with assistant secretary Obed Horr we learned that there was a very nice margin of profit for the stockholders of the association at the close of this most successful show, and that steps will at once be taken to give a Horse Show in January, 1897, that will be on a scale of still greater magnificence. There were many lessons learned by the Board of Directors at this show, and they will be profitable hereafter. Complaints they expected to hear, and as one director said: "We were not disappointed; for there never was an exhibition from a baby show to a horse show that did not have its share of exhibitors who believed they were wronged." The selection of judges was the most critical part of the work, and in order that there will be no cause for complaints of favoritism it is hoped that at the next fair the judges of all the leading classes will be selected in the East and brought here to give their decisions. "A prophet hath no honor in his own country," neither hath a judge's opinion any weight in a horse show in a city where he is well known.

The programmes every afternoon and evening were enacted to the letter, although many of those assembled who were interested in thoroughbreds, trotters and draft horses would have liked to have seen them in the ellipse a little oftener. If this was done, however, a majority of the people who love to see stylish hackneys, coach and carriage horses with their elegant harnesses and beautiful carriages move around would be disappointed.

The management of this show could not be excelled, and whenever exhibitors asked for anything it was granted. That it has been a great object lesson for those who love the horse cannot be denied. They had a splendid opportunity to compare the different breeds and with the excellent many advantages offered for visiting the stalls wherein the horses were kept, there is no doubt the lessons learned will be of inestimable value hereafter. The display of coach and carriage, tandems and fine roadsters at the next show will be far greater than this, as a great many who have exhibited are determined to get blue ribbons at the next show if it takes a kingdom to get them. With men and women of wealth who have this idea in view, those who are breeding and developing horses must be benefited, and what is beneficial to one branch of the horse industry benefits all.

Thoroughbred Blood in the Trotter.

In a compilation of valuable statistics on this subject, as published in the Horseman, it is a curious fact that the fastest trotter by a thoroughbred sire was a Californian, Col. Lewis, 2:18½, by Rifleman; and out of thirty-eight performers that had thoroughbred dams, twenty-two were bred in California, and Palo Alto, 2:08½, holds the fastest record. Out of 145 trotters that are from mares by thoroughbreds, there are fifty that were bred in California and the majority of these were from at Palo Alto. This proves that this class of breeding has been followed closer by breeders in this State than in any other State in the Union. The mares that have records and are out of mares by thoroughbred stallions will be invaluable as broodmares, this, in fact, is admitted by all students of breeding, and as very few, if any, of these mares trace to Geo. Wilkes, what splendid families these mares matched to any of the leading trotting bred Wilkes sires of the day will create.

It is only a few years since the theory about thoroughbred in the trotter was advanced and the columns of the leading turf journals were filled with articles denouncing the hot infusion, but men of the late Senator Stanford's caliber believed they would, in time, destroy the theories of these dyed-in-the-wool trotting enthusiasts and by using good judgment in the selection of their thoroughbreds they demonstrated that thoroughbred in the trotter did more good than harm, so year by year the accession to the ranks of record holders is increasing, and the complaints about hot infusions are growing fainter and fainter. Californians have reason to feel proud of the work done in this respect, and have cause for rejoicing that the blood of the following horses will not be allowed to fade into the dust as long as their descendants are known: Williamson's Belmont and his sons, Owen Dale, Langford, Don Victor, Bella Alta, Venture and Capt. Webster; Wildidle, imp. Hercules, Ben Wade, Jack Hawkins, Crichton, Joe Daniels, Hubbard, Woodburn, Norfolk, Joseph, Lodi, imp. Hurrah, Express, Rifleman and Enquirer.

The Convention Must Be Held.

The idea of holding a convention of trotting horse owners, drivers, and all interested in light harness events, is meeting with the approval of all who have given the subject any thought. The time has arrived for concerted action, for the future of the business on this Coast depends upon the plans devised for the year 1896. There is, among prominent horse breeders a decided awakening to the fact that unless some heroic measures are taken at once to promote unanimity among all connected with the race meetings, their investments in horses will prove a decided failure, and among owners and drivers the same feeling exists. It is of the greatest importance to all that a convention be held soon and every horseman who has any interest in the welfare of the industry on this Coast should agitate this subject whenever and wherever he can.

THE Detroit Jockey Club advertises in this issue a full list of the stakes to be run at its Summer meeting of 1896 at its magnificent race course. As there will be no racing on this Coast during the Summer, and a large number of the best stables will be taken East, it is of great importance to owners to have their horses well engaged, and this wide-awake club is among the first to offer inducements to horsemen to race at their meeting. The advertisement in another column should be read by every one interested, and as the stakes are large, conditions liberal, time opportune, track first-class and management unexcelled, there should be no hesitancy on the part of horse owners in sending in entries on time. They will close January 10, 1896, so there is little time to be lost.

ON another page of this issue will be found an advertisement notifying horsemen that entries to the Nursery Stakes, to be run at the State Fair of 1897, and the California Futurity Stakes, to be run at the State Fair of 1898, will close on January 1st. The first-named will be for two-year-olds, foals of 1895, and the latter for produce of mares covered in 1895. The conditions are very liberal, and as time is short, horsemen should post themselves on these matters at once and send in their entries. All such entries enhance the value of a colt.

Close the Pool Rooms.

For weeks, this journal has advocated the closing of the downtown pool rooms, and thus the attention of the authorities has been called to the business transacted in these iniquitous spots on our public thoroughfares. The daily press has at least taken up the fight and are now exerting all their power to close them.

The Board of Supervisors are to meet next Monday night and the question of keeping these pool rooms open comes before them. Some of the owners are willing to pay $1,000 a quarter for the privilege of keeping them open, and a resolution to that effect will be offered. It is hoped that it will not be adopted, as it will only be an opening wedge by which the smaller fry of clever manipulators of cardboards will find some way to transact business which will have as disastrous an effect upon the morals of young and old, and especially the young, as the present dens which are scattered throughout the city.

The presence of these places in this city are a disgrace, and every day they are molding public opinion against racing. Why the public moralists have not taken up this subject and delivered fiery discourses upon racing and these barnacles is past understanding. Perhaps they are waiting to see what the Board of Supervisors will do. If these pool rooms are allowed to remain open we can expect a relentless shower of eloquent missiles which will find a resting place in the minds of thousands of voters who, on election day, will go forth determined to vote for men who are pledged to stamp out racing in California. This was the case in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Illinois, and the moralists with their tens of thousands of supporters gained the day.

The Board of Supervisors of this city and county have a plain and simple duty to perform, and they should do it manfully, knowing that they are pledged to further the best interests of this community. A public office is a public trust, and if they fully realize this, they will do their duty and close all these pitfalls which are wide open for the youth of this city to plunge into.

Betting should be confined to the tracks whereon the races are being held and the Dimond ordinance should be passed. It is plain and comprehensive, and the temptation to gamble is placed so far beyond the reach of those who are inclined to squander their earning no one but those having the money to invest will go that far to do so. The clause in it in regard to foreign books is also an excellent one, and no one can find fault with it. The downtown poolroom men may fight against this ordinance, but if they are willing to wager money surely they can find no fault with the betting privileges at the track, and as many of them are already interested in bookmaking there, it would be better for them to confine their operations to the place where little boys, girls and women are not allowed in the betting ring.

THE Christmas Horseman has arrived and is magnificent number. The letter press cannot be excelled; the articles instructive and interesting, and as they are written by the leading turf writers of America are fully up to the standard of excellence we should expect from such knights of the pen. The pictures of great stallions and mares are better, more finished and lifelike than any that have ever appeared before in print. They are not photographs, but are drawn by the leading artist of horse portraiture in America, a young gentleman named Geo. F. Morris, who visited California last fall for his health. A mistake has been made, we think, in not allowing his name to be affixed to these pictures, as he is entitled to it as much as an author is to affix his to an article. The tables of statistics so valuable to turf writers, are full and correct, and will be consulted by everyone interested in horses the coming year. The cover of this splendid holiday number is a decided improvement on the one of 1894, and reflects credit on the artist and lithographer. We welcome this Christmas guest, knowing that a closer acquaintance will afford us great and lasting enjoyment.

THE Christmas number of the Horse Review has been received. It is fully up to all the preceding holiday numbers of this splendid journal. Typographically, it excels them, while the old-fashioned wood engravings are replaced by half tones which are accurate and pleasing. The articles cover a wide range and furnish most interesting reading for all interested in facts and romances about the horse, while the tabular matter is not excelled by any similar publication issued. We welcome it to our desk, and do not think the holidays would be enjoyable without it.

Auctions Next Week.

Next Tuesday evening Messrs. Killip & Co. will sell at auction in their big tent on Van Ness avenue and Market street a number of choicely-bred yearlings and two-year-old thoroughbreds by such famous sires as Salvator, Sir Modred, Darebin, Midlothian, Maxim, Martenhurst, Tyrant, Torso, Calvados, St. Andrews and Fitzjames, out of the best mares on the Rancho del Paso. Many a great winner came from this far-famed home of the thoroughbred, and many that will be disposed of at this sale will be seen on our tracks, winning races in the best of company; and the majority of them are bred well enough to be winners of the leading classic events of America, England and France.

On the following evening (Wednesday) these auctioneers will have another excellent collection of grand-looking, royally-bred yearlings and two-year-olds to dispose of. Some are from Marcus Daly's famous farm in Montana, the birthplace of some of the greatest horses in America. Besides these grandly-formed youngsters, James B. Chase, of the Sonoma Stock Farm, sends in a number of yearlings by imp. Midlothian, imp. Merriwa and Peel, besides two fine colts by Martenhurst belonging to S. E. Larabie, Deer Lodge, Montana.

On Thursday all of the thoroughbreds belonging to the Todhunter estate will be sold. Among them are great race mares, famous matrons and a number of grand-looking yearlings. There will be two yearlings by Silver Bow, 2:16, the handsome trotting-bred stallion, sold.

ON another page the Cincinnati Jockey Club advertises stake events to be run at Oakley during their Spring and Fall meetings in 1896. Entries will close January 15th. There are four stakes for two-year-olds for the earlier meeting with $2,500 to $3,500 added, one at seven furlongs and one at a mile for three-year-olds and five others for older horses. Three two-year-old events are named for the Fall meeting, with $1,000 added, two at six furlongs and the other at a mile. In addition are advertised the fixed events for 1897, entries to which also close on January 15th, 1896. These are the Oakley Derby, one mile and a quarter, with $3500 added; the Buckeye Stakes, one mile and an eighth, $2,000 added, and the Cincinnati Oaks, one mile and a sixteenth, with $1500 added. The Derby for 1896 has a guaranteed value of $12,500, the Buckeye Stakes $7,000, and the Oaks $5,000, all of which will be run during the Spring meeting to begin in May next.

THE attention of trotting horse breeders is called to the advertisement of the Occident Stake of 1898 for foals of 1895, to be trotted at the State Fair. The earning capacity of a colt or filly must be increased, and we know of no better way than by making entries in these "futures." In 1895 the Occident Stake was worth $2,400, and for 1896 it will be in excess of that amount. The date of closing is January 1, 1896. See advertisement and send entry to Secretary Edwin F. Smith, Sacramento, in time.

SAM DOGGETT won on his first mount in California.

OVER $75,000 will be expended at the Oakland track in improvements during the next three months.

SIMS, the jockey who rode in England for Croker and Dwyer, and returned a confirmed Anglomaniac, is expected here next week.

JOCKEY STANFORD is able to be out and Dr. Cohn states the fractures have knitted so thoroughly that the popular jockey will not suffer any inconvenience whatever as a result of his accident.

F. W. COVEY, superintendent of the Palo Alto Stock Farm arrived from New York city on Wednesday last. He was satisfied with the prices received for the consignment he sold in New York.

WILL WALLACE, the owner of some very good horses, among them Orinda and The Commoner, arrived from the East Wednesday. He will race half a dozen horses here, principally maidens.

SAM DOGGETT, the noted jockey, accompanied by his wife, arrived from the East Tuesday and registered at the Palace Hotel. He is under engagement to ride the horses of George E. Smith (Pittsburg Phil).

MATT BYRNES, of Montana, reports that the three following named crackjacks have been sold to a syndicate of horsemen in Butte City, and will be placed in a trainer's hands at once: The Pepper, Salvation and Ostler Joe.

THE stewards of the Jockey Club at their meeting on Friday, November 20th, passed a resolution to extend the time for registering horses unregistered, whether as two-year-olds or foals, until the last day of this month and year, on payment of $50 in each case.

HENRY STULL, the famous artist, has just finished two magnificent oil paintings for W. S. Hobart. One subject is Bright Phoebus and the other is Ferrier. Mr. Stull is doing excellent work for the Daily Examiner, and his pen and ink sketches of the famous horses at the track are not excelled in any other daily paper in America.

Convention to be Held.

(Written for BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.)

It is now an assured fact that in the very near future, there will be held a convention of representatives of the agricultural associations, owners, trainers and drivers of trotting horses, and all others interested, for the purpose of devising some means whereby an improvement over present methods may be made and to outline the program for the season of 1896. In no other State are the agricultural associations organized as in our own. Controlled as they are, it is but reasonable to assume that they will be an active factor in the proposed convention, for by no other agency can local pride and interest be awakened so well as by the district fair. The district fair is the fair of the masses of the common people. One of its objects is the creation of public sentiment and consequently is the proper place for the making of public opinions for or against the development of the horse or horse racing. The district fair is a training school from which has been graduated nearly all of our most prominent trainers and drivers, and it is but reasonable to assume that the fairs of the future, properly managed, will create as much public sentiment as any of the past. The masses are bound to be educated and all interests contingent will be compelled to feel an impetus which cannot be felt so well through any other source. It is proper therefore that every agricultural association in the State should be represented at this convention, and that, too, by their brightest and best men. The managers of fair associations, in many cases, have given the subject of reform fully as much attention as the breeders, owners or drivers, and their counsel and best thought, together with those of others in attendance, should be the means of formulating a plan for 1896 that cannot help being to the benefit of all concerned.

The great majority of those who attend harness race meetings do so for the love of the sport, rather than from a desire to gamble upon results, and when this interest is allowed to die out, then do we see the fine Italian hand of the professional gambler, who will stop at nothing to gratify his insatiable love for a game of chance. It was largely because of such a state of affairs that the ever-present hookmaker has been permitted to supplant the old method of auction pools, and it must be conceded that more jobs are traceable to this source than any other. It is not the intention of this article to deal with the pool-seller or his patrons, for many enthusiastic patrons of harness racing like to have "just a little at stake" to make the result more interesting and exciting, yet an improvement can be made at this point.

Some years ago it was not an unusual thing to see team racing upon all tracks, and especially at the State and district fairs. Attention was given to the gentlemen's roadster teams, and often the contests in this class were more exciting than many of the class races. It is impossible for every one who owns a team to have racehorses good enough to compete with all comers, but all can, with a little care and good judgment, have a team of gentleman's driving horses that will do credit to themselves and their owner. This is a class of horse that has to a very great extent been overlooked, yet at all times their market value has been more nearly uniform than any other. A class should be provided for team racing at all harness meetings, and more attention given to the gentlemen's roadster class by our agricultural associations. The latter would undoubtedly go a long way towards increasing the attendance, and would add to the funds by entrance fees. Now as to the work of the convention.

The writer had had several talks with prominent horsemen of the coast, and is confident that at the convention a plan will be presented by one gentleman that will have a great deal of merit. Other plans will probably be presented, but the best must be taken. The best is not too good, and if formulated upon a business basis, keeping in mind that the good of one interest is for the good of all, there can be no question of the outcome. All that is done must be done in good faith, else it will be time wasted. Remember "the remedy of tomorrow is too late for the evil of to-day," and the close of 1896 will prove that you have builded wisely. There will be fewer causes for complaint, and all will feel that the time spent at this convention was the means of laying the foundation stone of a permanent structure. CAPTAIN ESSEX.

O. F. Tyler & Co.

This is the firm name of the best photographers of horses and cattle in California. During the Horse Show nearly all the prize winners were photographed by these gentlemen, and those which appeared in the Horse Show number of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN were also specimens of their skill. Photographing animals is a study in itself, and anyone who doubts that it is not should undertake to photograph a horse and see how difficult it is. Messrs. Tyler & Co. have sent a large number of pictures East to be published in the Horse Show edition of the Rider and Driver, and no doubt they will astonish and please the good judges there. Their office is 1720 Market street, and any orders sent them will be promptly attended to.

THE published pedigree of Klamath, 2:08½, is full of errors. Capt. Werk, of Oregon, gives the following as the correct breeding of Morookus, sire of Klamath. He was by the great Altamont, out of Minnie Tolman, by Lion Heart, a Canadian horse that was a model of beauty; second dam Minnie Rifle, by Rifleman, son of Glencoe; third dam Tolman's old thoroughbred mare; her pedigree is lost, but she was sent to California and bred to Norfolk. The issue was a colt which, for his time, was the fastest and best mile race horse in Oregon. The dam of Klamath was a mare called Bob. She was by Ophir, out of the Gridley mare by Mike, son of Vermont. Ophir was a California bred horse, and was brought to Oregon when quite young. He was by Skenadoah, out of a mare by Easton's Dave Hill. Capt. Werk is an authority on pedigrees, and is conversant with the true history of most of the Oregon horses.

A VETERINARIAN surgeon at the last horse show ordered the Australian stallion Clieleden out of the ring, saying he had "spavins." When brought down this year from the ranche the three veterinarians at this horse show were called in to examine him, and they pronounced him perfectly sound and free from anything like spavins.

The Thornton Sale of Thoroughbreds.

The closing-out sale of the stallions, broodmares and yearlings owned by the estate of Colonel Henry I. Thornton took place at Killip & Co.'s salesyard, corner Market Street and Van Ness Avenue, last evening under electric light. The bidding was not spirited and the prices realized were in most instances low.

Imp. Mariner brought the highest price of the sale, being knocked down to George Poorman for $2,300. "Daggie" Smith got Sobrante for $175. Fairfax, a brother to Don Carillo, went to John Robbins for $625. The same bidder also got El Quito, a sister to Mollie R., for $140.

The following is a list of those sold:

R. P. PEPPER's grand old stallion Onward, 2:25½, has a great roll of honor up to the close of 1895, at twenty years of age. He now has one hundred and nineteen of his produce with records from 2:06 to 2:30, twenty-three of which entered the list the past season. Forty-one of these have records of 2:20 or better, and fourteen are in the 2:15 list, while three have records better than 2:10. Eight world's records are credited to his family in the first and second generations. Two of these belong to the great filly Beuzetta, 2:06½, the world's race record for four-year-olds, and the same stands as the record for the fourth heat. Belle Acton, a granddaughter, has the record (2:20½) for pacing yearlings, while Symboler, another granddaughter, has the race record (2:11) for two-year-old pacers. Online, 2:04, by his son, Shadeland Onward, is the champion four-year-old pacer. Aileen, daughter of Gazette, another son, is also credited with two records for four-year-old pacing mares, her mark being 2:07½, while Angie D., 2:07, by his son Mikeagan, holds the championship for aged pacing mares. On November 15, the date upon which the summary of Onward's produce was compiled, he had sixty sons who had sired 213 performers with records of 2:30 or better. As there is no way of ascertaining the number of producing daughters of this great horse for 1895, the compiler only gives those up to the close of 1894, at which time he was the sire of eighteen dams of twenty-six, making a total, with the produce of daughters of 1895 omitted, of 239 in the second generation, while the sum total up to the first and second generations amounts to 358 in the 2:30 list. Onward's sons have sired six 2:10 performers, making a total of nine in the select circle from the Onward family.

CHRISTMAS is coming and it is the time for making others happy. We know of no place in this city where more suitable gifts for old and young for this time of year can be bought than A. Hirschman's, 113 Sutter Street. His stock of split second watches is unsurpassed, while for rings, bracelets, earrings, diamonds, rubies and other precious stones, no other establishment on this Coast carries a more select supply. The prices asked are very low, in fact, for the class of goods offered, cannot be equaled. We take pleasure in recommending Mr. Hirschman to all our readers knowing that everything is sold exactly as represented.

SAM'L. GAMBLE, the well-known horseman, had charge of one of the departments in the Horse Show, and merited the thanks of all visitors for the kindly way in which he answered all questions, and the general courtesy he extended to the members of the press. All who had horses in his charge at this exhibit have expressed themselves most favorably upon his efficiency and watchfulness.

Five classes of hackneys, coaching stallions and harness horses were judged. One of Hobart's teams won the contest George W. McNear's big two year-old Clyde won a like contest between prize-winning draught horses. With his Hundress, Cinderella and Sweetheart, Hobart won two more sets of jumping class prizes. The contest of fire engine teams was won by San Francisco engine 2, and Oakland engine 2 got second. Joseph Dyer, Hobart's coachman, won first prize by his performance; John Carroll, H. J. Crocker's man, received second, and James Steward was given third. John McAuliffe refused fourth.

Rules for the Preservation of Carriages.

1. Carriages should be kept in an airy, dry coach house. There should be a moderate amount of light; otherwise the colors will be affected. The windows should be curtained to avoid having direct sunlight strike upon a carriage.

2. There should be no communication between the stable and the coach-house. The manure heap or pit should also be located as far away from the carriage-house as possible. Ammonia fumes crack and destroy varnish and fade the colors both of the painting and lining. Also avoid having a carriage stand near a brick wall, as the dampness from the wall will fade the colors and destroy the varnish.

3. Whenever a carriage stands unused for several days it should be protected by a large cotton cover sufficiently strong to keep off the dust without altogether excluding the light. Dust, when allowed to settle on a carriage, eats into the varnish. Care should be taken to keep this cover dry.

4. When a carriage is new or newly varnished it is better for it to stand a few days, and to be frequently washed and well dried off before being used; frequent washings with cold water and exposure to fresh air in the shade will also help to harden and brighten its finish. Never allow mud to remain long enough upon a newly varnished carriage to dry upon it, or spots and stains will invariably result.

5. While washing a carriage keep it out of the sun. Have the lever of the "set" covered with leather. Use plenty of water, taking great care that it is not driven into the body, to the injury of the lining. Use for the body panels a large, soft sponge; when saturated, squeeze this over the panels, and, by the flowing down of the water, the dirt will soften and harmlessly run off. Care should be taken to wipe the surface quite dry with soft chamois leather after each washing.

6. The directions just given for washing apply as well to the upper parts and wheels, but use for the latter a different sponge and chamois than those used on the body. Never use a "spoke brush," which, in conjunction with the grit from the road, would act like sandpaper on the varnish, scratching it, and, of course, removing the gloss.

7. Never allow water to dry of itself on a carriage, as it would invariably leave stains. Hot water or soap should never be used in washing a varnish surface.

8. Enameled-leather tops and aprons should be washed with very weak soap and water. No oil should be put on enameled leather.

9. In cleaning brass or silver parts no acid, mercury or grit should be used; the polish should be obtained by friction only.

10. Be careful to grease sparingly the bearings of the front gearings, using only enough to allow it to turn freely.

11. Put some grease on the locking parts—not too much, to spoil the paint. The wheels should be oiled at least four times a year. The best olive oil should be used. The leather washers should be turned and fitted, and it should be done by a competent person.

12. Avoid opening a carriage door while the vehicle is in motion, as accidents frequently occur from this cause, the door being intercepted by a tree or lamp-post and wrenched from its hinges.

13. Leather-top carriages should never stand long in the carriage house with the top down. After raising the top, "hrak" the joints slightly to take off the strain on the web-stay and leather. Aprons of every kind should be frequently unfolded, or they will soon spoil.

14. As a general rule a carriage will, with gentle work, retain its freshness better than if allowed to stand for long periods in a coach house. If the latter be necessary, draw the carriage out frequently to air, in some shady place, and occasionally wash it.

15. The carriage should be repainted, or at least touched up and revarnished, as often as once a year. Avoid having such repairs made in a hurry; remember that hurried varnishing implies imperfect varnishing.

This morning, says the Moscow correspondent of a London paper, I witnessed a wonderful display of horsemanship. It took place in the Petrofky park. Here, in the presence of the Grand Duke Nicholas and most of the foreign officers and guests, the regiment of Cossack Guards went through an extraordinary series of exercises which threw the most daring feats of the circus into the shade. The entire regiment went past at full gallop in loose order, with many of the men standing upright in the saddle, others upon their heads with legs in air, many leaping on to the ground and then into the saddle again at full speed, some springing over their horses' heads and picking up stones from the ground, and yet regaining their seats. While performing these feats all were brandishing their sabres and firing pistols, throwing their carbines into the air and catching them again, and yelling like maniacs. Some men went past in pairs, standing with a leg on each other's horses. One wild fellow carried off another dressed as a woman. The effect of the scene was absolutely bewildering, and it seemed as if the whole regiment had gone mad. Upon a signal being given the regiment divided into two parts. One rode off; the others halted and made their horses lie down on the ground, and lay beside them, waiting, as in war, the approach of an enemy. The other action of the regiment then charged down, and in an instant every horse was on his feet, every rider in his saddle, and with wild yells they rode at their supposed enemy. When the manoeuvres were over, the regiment rode past singing, and uncommonly well together, a military chorus. Altogether, it was a marvelous exhibition of daring horsemanship; and one hardly knew whether to admire most the docility and mettle of the steeds, or the skill and courage of their riders. All the foreign officers and guests were no less astonished than delighted.

SIN FALTA is the name of Gaston Ashe's two-year-old bay filly by St. Carlos—Sinfre, and should not be confused with Fin Slaughter. The latter, by Gano—Mandy Fortune, has run seven races, but is still in the maiden class. Sin Falta got away tenth in a field of eleven, and finished ninth in her first start, Tiny, a winner at five furlongs in 1:02, coming back to her.

Horses at San Jose Track.

The recent rains interfered with the training of running horses at the Agricultural Park track. In the last few days the harrowing of the inside of the track has been kept up almost constantly, and yesterday the active training of the numerous racers now stabled at the track was resumed. The outside of the track is in very good condition for jogging trotters and pacers. Not much is being done, however, in the way of training horses in harness.

The improvements in the stables of Burns & Waterhouse continue, and they are now well equipped with all modern conveniences. About $1,500 has already been expended in putting the stalls in condition, all the work done being of a permanent and essential character.

A crack runner, Lovdal, arrived yesterday, and was added to the string at the Burns & Waterhouse stables. This horse is by Wildidle. He is a fast one. Last year he won a number of good races in the East, and was also winner of a number of important events in San Francisco last spring.

From the Burns & Waterhouse stables yesterday five two-year-olds were sent to San Francisco to take part in some events that are to come off soon. These flyers, it is believed, will give a good account of some very active training that they have done on the San Jose track.

Two fine horses were added to the stable of C. T. Boots last Thursday. These horses are Nervosa, three years old, and Tiberius, two years old. Both of these horses are by Brutus.

The following running horses are in the stable of L. A. Legg at the track: A two-year-old filly by Brutus; two fillies, full sisters to Charmer, and a yearling stud by Vanquish, out of May D.

The pacer, Fred Mason, 2:10, six years old, has been added to the stable of Frank H. Burke at the track. Fred Mason is by Bob Masou and a half-brother to Walter J., 2:08. Walter J. made his record at five years old.

The horses in F. H. Burke's stable are all working well and showing up fine. They are in charge of Pat Davy. There were four animals from this stable at the horse show in San Francisco. A pair of them won the second premium for road teams. They are Soubrette and Algonett, by Eros, out of the mare Algonett, by Algon. Burke's two-year-old stallion, McKenney, by Woolloomooloo, also took the second premium at the horse show.

There are eight horses in the stable of C. H. Corey, in charge of John Smith. Laura M., 2:13½, the noted pacer, is in fine form. There are also in this stable a full brother to Laura M., two years old, and another full brother, a suckling, and Laura M.'s dam.

Prince Bismarck, two-year-old, and Cinnabar, five-year-old, both by Almont Patchen, 1:15, are in this stable, as is also Lady Thornhill, 2:17½, four-year-old, by Billy Thornhill.

The stable of H. C. Cox, in charge of G. Danforth, contains the following horses: A five-year-old trotter by Boxwood, by Nutwood; Honeyboy, a pacer, 2:20, out of a Nutwood mare, by Steinway; a four-year-old mare, Susie, out of a Belmont mare, by Grovernor, by Administrator; Reatinus, a four-year-old well-bred stallion, and the mare Hessie, by a son of Electioneer, out of a Whippleton mare.

All the horses at the track are in fine condition, and the training, especially of runners, is being actively prosecuted—Mercury.

Dr. Gideon Knapp Dead.

NEW YORK, December 7—Dr. Gideon Lee Knapp, the well-known turfman, died this morning. He had been ill for four weeks with typhoid fever.

Dr. Knapp was one of the founders of the Jockey Club which succeeded the Board of Control in the management of turf affairs in the East, and was a steward of that organization. He had been identified with the turf in a small way, but did not attain prominence until 1892, when his horse, Sir Walter, first began racing as a two-year-old. Since that time purple and gold squares, his racing colors, have become familiar to every racegoer.

Dr. Knapp raced his horse under the name of "Oneck Stable." No other of his horses attained the prominence of "Good game Sir Walter." Dr. Knapp has begun racing seasons with a large stable of two-year-olds, most of which never developed into anything more than selling placers.

Dr. Knapp was also well known as a first-class wing shot. His match at $500 a side with McAlester some years ago was a famous event. He was also a billiard player of considerable ability. He was a member of the following clubs: Union, Racquet, Westminster Kennel, Larchmont Yacht and Century.

Timing in Australia.

The manner in Australia of timing races is as follows. Each starting post is connected by wire with a chronograph in the judges' box, and when the starter gives the order to move an official at the same time touches a button on the post, which sets the clock in motion, and on the winning post being reached another official, who is stationed in the judges' box, presses a button, which stops the chronograph. The face of the latter is at the back of the judges' box, so that any one in the in the enclosure can see for himself what time has been made. It may also be mentioned that the electric current not only sets the clock in motion, but strikes a large bell in the paddock, giving every one warning that the horses have been sent on their journey.

The best records in Australia at the seven main distances are given as follows: Three quarters of a mile, 1:14; seven-eighths of a mile, 1:26; one mile, 1:40; one and one-eighth mile, 1:55½; one and a quarter mile, 2:06; one and a half mile, 2:35½; two miles, 3:28½.

Those in need of a first-class double team of fast trotters should write at once to Prof. E. P. Heald, of Heald's Business College, San Francisco. No better-matched mares are to be seen in this city. Besides this most excellent team, a large number of fine roadsters, race and business horses that this splendid judge of fine stock bred at his stock farm at Napa, are also for sale at very low prices. We take pleasure in recommending this stock, for they are everything claimed for them. Everyone who has purchased horses at this farm are well satisfied. See advertisement.

THE GUN.

A Muzzle Loadin' Gun.

When I read about the Gun Clubs an' them target shootin' chaps Who are gettin' silver medals for their scorin' at the traps With their hammerless breech loaders an' their smokeless powder shells Why, I sort o' get affected with my reminiscent spells An' I know them Gun Club fellows never have the kind o' fun That I had, when I hunted with a muzzle loadin' gun.

When the frost was on the meadow an' the leaves were turnin' red An' the blackbirds by the millon were flying overhead, An' the sumach tops were scarlet an' the elderberries blue, An' the pumpkins turnin' yellow, just like pumpkins always do; When the corn was in the corncrib an' the autumn work was done, Why 'twas then I went a huntin' with my muzzle loadin' gun.

An' I took Old Rover with me, an' he barked an' wagged his tail, 'Till away he went a yelpin' when he struck a rabbit trail, An' you bet, his way of huntin' it was good enough fer me, Tho' he wasn't much fer beauty an' he had no pedigree; But when he roused a rabbit an' it started on a run Old Rover knew I'd get it with my muzzle loadin' gun.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

There are millions of wild pigeons at Auburn and they are fat as butter.

Geese and ducks are very plentiful along the Santa Ana river and adjacent sloughs.

Mountain and valley quail were never more plentiful in Southern California than they are at present.

Quail are said to be very plentiful in the American River canyon. A sportsman who has lived in that country many years reports seeing more birds this year than ever before.

Duck hunters should avail themselves of the abundant opportunities to secure good bags of ducks at the present time. The first heavy rains will send the majority of the birds south or scatter them all over the country.

The large number of purchasers seen in R. Liddle & Co.'s gun store is sufficient evidence of their increased trade under the new management. Every purchaser receives a numbered check, and on Christmas eve someone will win a valuable gun. Call and examine their stock.

J. Jones was again tried at San Pablo on Saturday last for trespassing on the Emeric preserve at San Pablo. The District Attorney moved to dismiss the case, and Jones was dismissed without argument. Attorney Wentworth, the lawyer for the Sportsmen's Protective Association appeared for the defendant.

A Chapter on Duck Shooting.

The best time to go duck shooting on any of the marshes within a few hours' journey of San Francisco, say Suisun, Sonoma, Alameda or Alviso, is either during or immediately after a heavy storm. Ducks that are much shot at feed on the marshes at night and loaf on the calm waters of the bay in large flocks during the day. When a heavy wind drives them from the bay it is then that the shooters on the inland marshes enjoy good sport.

To really enjoy duck shooting a man wants to go with the expectation of roughing it a bit and should dress with that object. Hip or thigh rubber boots, corduroys or a pair of old discarded pants, a hunting coat of dead grass color, and a hat or cap to match are absolutely necessary to success. Black or dark clothing must be left at home if one expects to get a mess of birds. A black hat or coat can be seen on the marsh at a greater distance than the wearer can see a duck. If expense be no object or the shooter expects to hunt ducks quite often, a grass suit is an excellent thing. They hide the movements of the shooter, are nearly the color of dead tulle and will shed water nearly as well as a gun coat.

The older the hunter the less "truck" he carries with him. A substantial lunch should be taken even if you expect to go but a short way from your home. One may get caught in a storm, stranded on a mud flat, lose the boat or have such good shooting that you wish to stay out longer than you had planned, and an empty stomach is not conducive to either health or good sport. Liquid refreshments to prevent one's taking cold should it rain or the hunter has the ill luck to fall into a slough are very useful, but a canteen of water is a necessity.

In regard to ammunition, the old reliable black powder is the cheapest, but the excessive smoke and recoil are unnecessary in these days of improved nitro and smokeless powders. There are many good powders on the market and the selection must be made by the shooter's own experience, for even the experts differ in their opinion of their relative qualities.

A heavier load of powder and a lighter load of shot should be used than for field shooting, as greater penetration is necessary. The load to suit the gun can only be found out by actual experience, but if the load be too light it will not break the bones and kill instantly. The duck may be hard hit and fall dead a half mile away, but that is poor consolation to the shooter. No. 5. shot should be used for canvas-back and mallard. No. 6 for sprig, widgeon and grey duck and No. 7 is plenty large enough for teal and for killing cripples. Do not fail to carry an abundance of shells; it is much better to carry home a few than to run out when birds are flying well. Put your wiping stick in your shell box. Duck hunting is proverbially wet sport and a swelled shell stuck in a gun has spoiled many a day's fun. Shell extractors are good but the wiping stick is better.

To insure a good day the hunter must start from his club house, hotel, yacht or other stopping place, early enough to allow plenty of time to row, walk or drive to the pond or slough where he intends to shoot, set out his decoys, fix up his blind and be all ready for business as soon as the first ray of daylight appears. With the light, the birds begin to move whether disturbed or not. If the wind is blowing a good, stiff breeze they will keep stirring nearly all day, but if there is no wind at all they will fly direct to the bay shore and stay there until dark or go up into the grain fields inland.

Your location for a blind should depend upon the weather and the number of hunters you expect will hunt in your vicinity.

If calm weather, locate near the bay shore especially if there are many shooters to drive out the birds from the smaller sloughs and ponds. If windy, shoot inland at a pond or small slough. If you can arrange to visit your marsh before you shoot or go once or twice to the same place early in the season you can watch the flight of the birds and locate your blind accordingly. As in quail hunting the man that knows his country and studies the habits of the birds will prove the most successful.

Always locate the blind on the windward shore as ducks invariably head up into the wind to alight and again when they leave the water they must face you to get on the wing, thus presenting the best possible shot as they swing off. Build the blind ample large enough to protect you without making it any more conspicuous than is absolutely necessary. A most convenient blind can be made of narrow strips of wood with old sacking tacked to it. This you can carry in your boat or under your arm and put down wherever convenient. If you are shooting from ground covered with grendulia pull up a lot of it and pile around your blind. If in the tulle, cut tulle and pile up that, so that a duck passing in front of you cannot see any portion of either you or your gun. A blind is an absolute necessity but the hunter should remember that it is a movement of the hunter or his dog that prevents nine ducks out of ten from decoying.

A man sitting on the bare mud, perfectly still, will not frighten a duck as quick as a movement of the hand of a man in a blind.

The decoys have much to do with ones success and the nearer they resemble a duck the better. Doubtless the best and most convenient decoy made is the pneumatic decoy, but they set a little too high on the water and should be weighted. They are light and the least wind keeps them in motion. In a strong tide they will not drag under and being light are not easily carried away by the current. The common wooden decoys are used by most of the hunters and when properly painted answer the purpose very well. Where one expects to see many varieties of ducks, the decoys should be mostly canvas-backs. Any duck except a mallard will decoy to a canvasback and sometimes they do. Mallards decoy best to mallards and sprig (pintail). Teal and widgeon will decoy to anything. Canvas back decoy best to canvas-back, but at times they will decoy to anything, down to a mudhen.

The larger the flock of decoys the better. Singles and pairs will decoy to small flocks but large flocks will decoy only to large flocks. Place two men a gun shot apart and give one twenty decoys and the other fifty, and the one with the larger flock will get nearly all the shooting, everything else being equal.

Setting the decoys has much to do with the success of a shooter and the old hunters resort to many tricks to entice the wary duck within range. All ducks except teal and single canvasback are prone to light outside of the decoys, consequently in slough shooting, if the slough be not too wide, the intelligent hunter puts his decoys on the opposite side of the slough from his blind. If you expect your birds to come from the west place your decoys east of your blind. The birds will then swing over them and alight in front of you.

If you have a flock of mixed decoys put the cans by themselves and the colored ones in another flock. Last month a well known local hunter put his cans to his right and his other decoys to his left and every flock that decoyed alighted between the two flocks, right in front of his blind. Another well known hunter places his decoys in a long string that leads to a big bunch and the ducks follow the string and alight just over the bunch, and directly opposite his blind.

Calling ducks is an art that can only be learned by years of practice. The question is to call at the proper time and to give the proper call. The "quack" of the mallard differs materially from the tenor of the teal, the squeal of the widgeon or the "g-omp" of a canvasback, and one must not give their alarm call when he wishes to represent his decoys as a flock of ducks contentedly feeding. Some of the duck calls on the market are quite serviceable when properly used but until one has made himself thoroughly acquainted with their many tones he had better keep them at home to amuse the children.

There is only one moment and no other to shoot at a flock of ducks on the wing and do execution, viz.: when they swing for the last time before alighting, they are then bunched, and if you pick out your bird and make the proper allowance for his flight and the drift of the wind you will get the bird that you pick out and possibly two or three more. The next best plan and possibly the best in pond shooting or when a high flock is decoying is to wait until they alight, then give them one barrel in the water and the other as they raise.

The inexperienced shooter should remember that he shoots behind every crossing bird that he misses and under the rising ones. It is also a very common error to shoot over a bird that has spread out his wings to alight. It is thought by some to be unsportsmanlike to shoot at the birds in the water, but certainly the man that is clever enough to call and decoy a wary flock of canvasback or mallard has earned all he can get, and one-half the shots fired at birds on the water are wasted on account of the smallness of the mark when the bird is half submerged.

An article of this nature is not complete without some allusion to the companion of all duck hunters, the dog. Black, white, or black and white dogs are not desirable duck dogs, however good they may be at retrieving. These colors are too conspicuous on the marsh. Red or liver are the only colors that resemble the color of dead grass or tulle. The Irish water spaniel, the Chesapeake Bay dog and the cocker are unquestionably the best duck retrievers. They are natural water dogs. Cold water will not cause them to quit and they love their work as well as the hunter loves to shoot. Any man that has enough patience to become a good duck hunter has patience enough to train a duck dog. Allowing the dog is a natural retriever, not hard mouthed, the only other requisite is to have him under control.

A treatise on training cannot be condensed into a few paragraphs, but the secret of a good retriever's usefulness lies in his being under sufficient control to lie still until ordered to "fetch." An uneasy brute that is forever hobbling up on his haunches and making a wild rush for the water the moment a gun is fired, whether a bird is killed or not, is an intolerable nuisance and invariably frightens away more birds than the hunter gets. Teach your dog to drop at command and stay where he is put, or kill him.

Crippled ducks should be killed promptly, for the old adage that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush is very applicable to duck shooting, but do not be in too much of a hurry to retrieve. Do not send your dog out after a single duck when you can see a fine flock of a couple of dozen canvas-back coming straight for your decoys. In short, never be in haste from the time you reach the marsh until you leave it, and your bag will equal that of your neighbor's.

The Sui un Trespass Case.

The San Francisco Call of Saturday contains the following excellent account of the now famous Cordelia vs. Mallard case:

The Cordelia Teal Club has lost the famous suit in which it sought to prevent outside hunters from invading the preserves it had leased in the Suisun marshes. After litigation extending for over a year, Judge Buckles of the Solano County Superior Court to day decided for the defendants—Wm. King and forty other sportsmen—the case brought against them by President Charles W. Kellogg of the Teal Club. Following this decision, Judge Buckles dissolved the injunction restraining sportsmen other than the Teal Club members from hunting on the land. The case has excited great interest among sportsmen all over the State, and its outcome has long been awaited with interest.

The complaint had alleged that Kellogg was in possession of 4,000 acres of swamp and overflowed land near Suisun under lease dated July 22, 1893, from Emily C. Cook, Frederick O. Chamberlain and Mary C. Von Seelhorst, who are alleged to be the owners of the land. The lease was for a period of four years, and recited that the land was leased for the sole purpose of hunting game thereon, the consideration to be the payment of an annual rent of $1200. Kellogg had inclosed about 3,000 acres of the land with a substantial post-and-wire fence, connecting with natural boundaries so as to form an entire closure of the 3,000 acres. The accused hunters had continued to trespass on the land and had shot game in large numbers and conspired together to interfere with Kellogg's possession. This, the complaint declared, threatened to work irreparable injury to the plaintiff's hunting rights and privileges on the property. It alleged inadequate relief by judicial proceedings, and that the defendants were insolvent.

The answer denied the ownership of the land in the lessors, putting the denial on the ground that the defendants had no knowledge upon the subject to enable them to answer. It denied the lease and its terms as alleged in the complaint and the allegations of trespass, injury, threatened injury and insolvency. In brief, the defense was based upon the ground that the land had been leased to Kellogg only to the extent of giving him and those for whom he had secured the privilege the sole right to hunt upon it, while the actual owner continued to farm the soil. The lease was simply a license given to a certain number of men, authorizing them to shoot game upon the land, while others were excluded. In no other way had the plaintiffs in the action any vested right in the land upon which the defendants were accused of trespassing, and therefore he could not bring any action against any one for alleged trespass. The license granted to Kellogg and his companions, the defendants claimed, could not shut out others to whom the owner of the land might give similar licenses.

Judge Buckles, in his decision, said that the tulle land in question had from time immemorial been used as the common hunting grounds of all the sportsmen from far and near who delighted in hunting.

"Here all could come," he continued. "The millionaire tramped and shot beside the man with barely wealth enough to own his gun and buy the ammunition he used. This was truly American freedom and not English lordism."

"The lands mentioned in plaintiff's lease were never fenced by the owners, and the fence the plaintiff has placed there was built without any authority given him by the lease. From the evidence it was put there for the sole purpose of making it appear as an inclosure, so that he might have some show of placing his preserves under the protection of the law, which forbids hunting upon inclosed lands without the consent of the owner."

After quoting Blackstone's opinion as regards animals wild by nature and the rights of men, Judge Buckles referred to the devices put forth by the plaintiff to lure wild game to the land in question, the baiting of ponds being the principal point discussed, and continued:

"It appears that the plaintiff, not having the exclusive right of possession of the land and not the exclusive right to hunt on the land, could not enjoin others from hunting thereon unless their hunting destroys or irreparably injures his hunting privileges. But there is no evidence that any of these defendants were in a conspiracy of any kind, but, on the contrary, those who went there to hunt went on their own account, and without design to injure the plaintiff, and with no concerted action with their co-defendants."

In closing Judge Buckles renders judgment for the defendants and dissolves the temporary injunction. In denying the injunction he gives the following reasons:

"First—The plaintiff's lease gives him a license to hunt on the premises, but no right to prevent other people from coming upon the same ground to hunt when they do not molest his right to hunt. Second—He has not acted fairly toward the defendants in baiting the ponds to entice game to come there from outside the inclosure, and because of the inclosure he has erected. Third—The evidence does not show any concerted action or conspiracy on the part of the defendants to destroy the plaintiff's hunting rights, nor to injure them. Fourth—None of the defendants are shown to have been hunting and shooting over the land continuously day by day, and none are shown to have been hunting and shooting there at night without intermittent period. Fifth—The plaintiff has not even tried a statutory remedy of arresting people who hunt and shoot on the inclosed grounds, nor a civil remedy for damages, and has not shown that the defendants are insolvent. Sixth—The evidence does not show that the plaintiff has suffered irreparable injury in his hunting privileges."

Home-Bred Ducks.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—To decide a wager, will you kindly answer the following questions:

Are there any genuine canvas-back ducks on the Pacific Coast?

Do widgeon breed on the Alviso marshes?

San Jose, Dec. 7.

"SUBSCRIBER."

[The canvas-back here are identical with the Eastern canvas-back, though thought by epicures to be inferior to the Eastern bird, owing to a difference in food.]

Widgeon are supposed to breed the farthest north of any of our ducks. There are three varieties here, but none of them breed on the Alviso marshes unless it be a few cripples that are unable to fly north in the spring.

The only ducks that breed in California to any extent are the mallard and teal.—Ed.]

THE KENNEL.

The Interstate Coursing Meeting.

The fifth annual meeting of the Interstate Coursing meeting was held on Monday and Tuesday of this week on the incomparable plains of Merced, and, like its predecessors, it must go on record as a great success.

The best of order prevailed, and barring the sickness of Flying Buck, the dogs returned in as good condition as when they left.

President Dominick Shannon, Secretary J. R. Dickson and the Flag Steward, J. Reed, deserve great credit for their management and great labor. Judge Grace rode up to his hounds as only a good rider can, and his decisions were received by all without murmur or question. Slipper Wren is peerless at his work, and we doubt if the equal of these two men exist in America for their respective positions.

The weather was very cloudy and cold, and, while somewhat disagreeable to the spectators, was ideal weather for coursing.

The meeting was held on the Crocker ranch, about ten miles from town, on sandy soil. Jacks were just plentiful enough, and the majority of them were the typical Merced flyers. They were somewhat fatter and slower than they were a month ago, before the grass had started to grow, but the majority of them were plenty fast enough.

The coursing commenced on Monday morning about 11 o'clock and the forty-four dog stake was finished at 4 p. m. Tuesday.

Just before the final course President Shannon made a very able speech to the crowd of spectators, numbering at least 300. He thanked them for their courtesy, good order and sportsmanlike conduct throughout the meeting. He thanked the people of Merced for their valuable assistance. He proposed three cheers for the new member, Mr. Peyton, of Santa Cruz, and they were given with a true ring of appreciation.

Mr. Shannon then broached the subject of a new club and stated that its desire would be to get the American Waterloo for 1896 to California. In his words: "We have the climate, the grounds, the hares, the nonpareil judge and the peerless slipper and California sportsmen will provide the sinews of war."

His speech terminated with cheers for the ladies, for their honored Secretary, J. R. Dickson, and for the Interstate Club.

As often occurs, the "dark horse" won and a "rank outsider" put in to make an even number of dogs, won third place.

Right Bower, the winner, had less than two week straining and was not looked upon as dangerous. He was much too fat. He may be looked upon as lucky. In the first round he beat Little Banshee, a very clever bitch, in a short course. Had this first course been a long one it is more than probable that he would have been shut out then and there. After that he just worked himself into condition and improved in every course. At the final he was as fresh as a lark, while the runner up, Royal Daisy, was quite stiff and tired. She had more work than any other two dogs in the stake. In the first ties after beating Tipperary she got after another hare and coursed it for another two miles or so, and every subsequent course was very long. She made eight-eighth points during the day outside of her extra courses, and in one course the score was 48 to 0. This work stamps her in the humble estimation of the writer as one of the very best dogs that California has seen.

Right Bower is a fawn dog of excellent formation, a little coarse in head from a bench show standpoint. He is exceedingly fast and like his dam very clever.

Right Bower, the winner, was nominated by J. R. Dickson. He is owned by T. Cooney of San Jose, and is by Dashway (Laurelwood—Black Bess), out of Valley Queen, a noted winner by Stranger—Lily. He is twenty-two months old.

The runner-up, W. C. Peyton's Royal Daisy, is by Royal Crest (Greentick—Royal Rape), out of Dougherty's Daisy (Midnight—Daisy). She is nearly three years old and like all of Peyton's dogs was in the finest possible fettle.

The winner of the third prize, Electric, was nominated by James F. Grace, but is owned by Eugene Geary. He is a medium-sized white dog, fast and with good staying power. He is by Dan O'Connell—Rockland Maid.

Thomas Hall's Annie Laurie and T. J. Cronin's Reliance were the first co.s in the slips. Annie led from the slips and took the first turn, placing Reliance for a turn. She then made a clean go-by, a wrench, took several turns and accomplished a clever kill, winning handsily.

W. C. Peyton's Flying Buck and C. H. Adies' Bert were the next pair. Flying Buck got away first, took the first turn and scored twelve points before Bert got in. Bert then took possession and scored six turns and a kill.

P. Reilly's Harkaway and J. Cox's Sam were next. Sam was much the faster from the slips, and beat Harkaway badly. In a long course the score stood 28 to 8 in favor of Sam.

T. J. Cronin's Rosa B. and H. Layng's Rollalong were slipped to a fat hare, and it was nip and tuck between them. At the end of a short course it was 10 to 6 in favor of Rollalong. Rollalong killed.

W. Dalton's Eileen and the West Side Kennels' West Side, a son of Skyrocket, were slipped unsighted. When slipped again both lost sight of the hare. Eileen was first to sight, but never got near the hare in a mile run. As no work was done, the judge had to call it a "no course."

After two pairs of dogs had been slipped, Eileen and West Side were again started. Eileen took the first turn, and then West Side took possession and kept it through a long course, the hare eventually running away from both of them. West Side won, with points to spare.

James F. Grace's (ns) Electric and the same man's bitch, Nellie Conroy, were slipped to the only poor hare of the day. Electric was the first from slips, took one turn and made a kill without letting Nellie in at all.

P. Kelly's Jack and T. J. McInerney's Royal Fellow were the next pair. They started unsighted, and Jack was the first to take after the hare. They worked the hare for three miles in one of the prettiest runs ever made, the dogs running close together all the time. When Royal Fellow killed, the score stood 16 to 12 in his favor.

J. H. Perigo's Wee Lassie and J. J. Napier's Esmeralda ran a one-sided course. Wee Lassie did all the work and won.

P. Brennan's White Chief and the Alameda Kennel's Wayfarer ran a straightaway course. Wayfarer got a few turns and won, but the hare ran away from both of them.

The Alameda Kennels' Kitty Scott and Galliher's Lamplighter ran another one-sided course. It was Kitty's course from start to finish.

M. Hanrahan's Brother and T. J. Cronin's Skyball were the next from the slips. Skyball walked in the slips on three legs, but when the hare was sighted he forgot all about his sore foot. He was the first to the hare, worked it for ten points, and then Brother got ahead of him. But the hare was a Merced flyer, and when it began to get warm it laid back its ears and started for the mountains, doubtless reaching there. Skyball won a very game race, and if he is not stiffened up will be a hard one to beat to-morrow.

J. McMahon's Gile and J. McBride's Flashlight ran a rather short course, Flashlight beating the winner of 1893 with a score of 10 to 2.

T. Hall's Little Corporal and P. Reilly's Jimmy Rex were next in the slips. Little Corporal ran gamely and did most all the work. The hare escaped and Little Corporal won.

W. J. O'Neill's Robert J. was badly beaten by the West Side Kennel's Ruby. Robert never scored once in a four-mile course. Ruby made fourteen points and won. The hare escaped.

T. McDonald's Lissak, one of the cracks, had his colors lowered by W. C. Peyton's Royal Daisy. Daisy took the first turn, and after getting possession let Lissak score but two points. Daisy killed. The course was a very long one, all in view of the spectators.

D. Shannon's True Blue and T. Cox's Tipperary gave a pretty exhibition of close work. They were well matched, but True Blue fell head over heels and lost ground. Tipperary won with four points to spare.

W. C. Peyton's Royal Buck and Alameda Kennel's Ventura ran another exciting race. Buck was the favorite. He proved the quickest from the slips, but lost ground when driving. Ventura got the hare from him often, and then spoiled her chances by killing too quickly. The score was 10 to 8 in Buck's favor.

W. C. Peyton's Daisy Crest gave W. H. Wood's Fleetwood a bad beating. Daisy did all of the work in a two-mile run.

The Alameda Kennel's Emin Pasha and W. C. Peyton's Master Glenkirk brought more money from the betting fraternity than any other six dogs. Both were in the first fight, but the talent could not divide them. Even money was offered and taken. Emin Pasha led to the hare and got first turn. Then the son of that grand dog, Glenkirk, warmed up and never let Pasha in again, winning with a score of 9 to 3.

W. C. Peyton's Charming May was the first one of that gentleman's entries that was beaten. T. J. Cronin's Dottie Dimple never let her score.

P. H. Devlin's Shamrock beat D. J. Healey's Sly Boy, another son of Skyrocket, with a score of 11 to 9. Shamrock was first from the slips, but Sly Boy took the first turn and made five points. Shamrock then held Bunnie for six, and Sly Boy took two; then Shamrock got in for five and the kill.

J. R. Dickson's Right Bower beat T. J. McInerney's Little Banshee. Little Banshee was the favorite. Right Bower got the first turn, but Little Banshee was unsighted. To the surprise of all, when they got on even terms Right Bower kept possession and won with a score of 6 to 2. The course was a short one.

FIRST TIES.

The first dogs slipped in the first ties were Annie Laurie and Flying Buck. The latter had been taken with cramps during the night and were very sick. He led from the slips, but dropped to the ground after running a few yards, Annie, of course, winning.

Sam and Rollalong ran a long, straggling race. Sam took possession of the hare after the first turn and won, the hare escaping.

West Side and Electric ran a long course, West Side getting five points at the start. Electric then piled up fourteen points and shut him out.

Wee Lassie beat Royal Fellow in a short but fast course. Royal Fellow was first from the slips, and worked the hare or a couple of turns; then Wee Lassie took possession and worked her hare beautifully to a kill, winning with a score of 4 to 7.

Skyball beat Wayfarer in a short, straightaway course to the tune of 3 to 0. Skyball started on three legs again and led from the slips, but Wayfarer was unsighted. The hare haled.

Kitty Scott beat Flashlight by 11 to 7 points, Flashlight doing the first of the work and Kitty Scott all the balance.

In the course between Little Corporal and Ruby, the latter led from the slips and scored three points. Little Corporal then made a clean go-by and worked his hare well, but the hare got into high cover and escaped. Ruby won.

When Royal Daisy met Tipperary she was very fit, but after defeating him she got after another hare before her handlers could catch her and got a gruelling course of several miles that made quite a difference in her running in the final. She led to the hare, but Tipperary was soon in possession. He worked the hare for five points, and then Royal Daisy dashed past him and scored nine times before the hare escaped to cover.

Royal Buck, last year's winner, and Shamrock were slipped to a streak of furred lightning that no living dog could get within a rod of. Buck was game, however, and kept after him, leaving him a quarter of a mile behind, beating him pointless.

Daisy Crest and Right Bower ran a rather short but fast course. It was Right Bower from the slips, the bitch exchanging with him at the finish. She killed too quickly for her own good. The score stood 9 to 5 in favor of Right Bower.

In the course between Master Glenkirk and Dottie Dimple the latter led from the slips, but Master scored a go-by in the run up and took first turn. Then there was some exchange work, mostly in favor of the bitch. Dottie made a pretty go-by in the final drive and killed. The score stood 10 to 6.

SECOND TIES.

In the second ties Annie Laurie and Sam ran a very even race. Sam had the first of it, but Annie got in later and won by killing, making the score 8 to 6.

Electric, though on the short end of the betting, beat Wee Lassie in a short course. Skyball and Kitty Scott when first slipped were both unsighted. When slipped again Skyball proved his gameness and splendid training by making 14 points before Kitty scored. She then made 9 and the hare distanced the pair in a first-mile run, Skyball winning.

Ruby and Royal Daisy were next. Daisy beat Ruby with the magnificent score of 48 to 0, killed her hare and won. Her work was remarkably true and clever. This course and her second run in the previous series doubtless spoiled her chances for first money.

In Royal Buck's course with Dottie Dimple he was unsighted, but when he caught sight of the hare he did not score at all in a short course of only a few turns.

Right Bower next ran a bye with Enin Pasha. Though having no effect on the winning, the crowd bet freely on the result, which was 6 to 6. Right Bower made the run up the first turn and the kill.

THIRD TIES.

In the third ties the first pair were Annie Laurie and Electric, Royal Daisy getting the bye. Electric led to the hare and did all of the work at first, then Annie Laurie got in and killed, the score standing 14 to 7 in favor of Electric.

Doubtless more money changed hands on the race between Skyball and Royal Daisy than any other. Skyball was lame and Daisy very tired. Both were known to be game and both had their champions. Skyball went off with his usual dash and scored 7 points, then Daisy took possession and ran her score up to 20 and a kill. Skyball stayed with her to the finish of a long course.

The race between Dottie Dimple and Right Bower was another surprise to the talent. Dottie led from the slips, but Right Bower put on a wonderful burst of speed and passed her and took possession, Dottie only scoring a kill, Bower winning with a score of 6 to 2.

FOURTH TIES.

In the fourth ties Electric was first from the slips, but Right Bower won handsily with increasing speed, with 14 to 5 in his favor.

Royal Daisy ran a bye with Nellie Conroy.

THE FINAL.

In the final course Right Bower still retained his wonderful speed and passed Royal Daisy easily in the run up. After scoring 14 Daisy got the stiffness out of her and took possession for 7 points. Had the hare lived longer she might possibly have made it more interesting for Right Bower, but he was in too fine fettle to be easily downed.

Right Bower won the course and the All-Age stake, and the great Inter-State meeting was over.

The Field Trials.

The entries to the All-Age Stake of the Pacific Coast Field Trials closed on Monday of last week, but owing to the illness of Secretary Kilgarif were not given out for publication until after these columns had gone to press. Our contemporary made a guess at them but, as usual, got it wrong.

The entries number eleven, the largest number ever entered in an All-Age Stake on this Coast and the quality of the dogs could scarcely be excelled.

Glenbeigh Jr. ran in the Derby last year and made a very good showing. Orian also ran in last year's Derby, but, like Glenbeigh Jr., was not placed. Nimrod won second prize in the Derby last year. Rodschaff is the dog that was matched against Glenbeigh and is reported to be very fast. He divided third in the New England Field Trial Derby of 1892. Silverplate won third in the Derby last year. Betsy Mark won the Derby in 1894 and was second in the All Age last year. Clay T. won third in the All Age of 1894.

There are three pointers, one Irish setter and seven English setters entered as follows: B. J. Baum's liver and white pointer Glenbeigh Jr., by Glenbeigh—Lady Max; E. F.

Northam's black pointer Josephine, by Old Black Joe II.—Black Bess; A. B. Truman's lemon and white pointer Clay T., by Bergez's Tom—Queen Croxteth; T. E. Terry's English setter Orian, by Harold—Sunlit; H. G. Edward's English setter Nimrod, by Sportsman—Stenhanie; George Crocker's English setter Rodschaff, by Roderigo—Gladston's Girl; S. F. Hughes' English setter Silverplate, by Fred W.—Countess Noble; W. G. Kerckhoff's English setter Betsy Mark, by Gath's Mark—Ightfield Sophie; C. N. Post's English setter Merrie Morarch, by Mercury—Johanna; A. B. Truman's Irish setter Nemo T., by Emmett—Lightning. The trials will be run on William Tevis' ranch, a few miles from Bakersfield, on the second week in January, and considering the quality of the dogs in both the Derby and All-Age stakes, they should be very successful.

SALES.

Glenmore Kennels, West Berkeley, have sold an Irish setter dog pup whelped October 23d, by Glenmore Sultan (Finlas—Lady Josie), out of Belle Baya (Sagax Tearaway—Elcho's Maid) to Max Brandt S. F.

There will be an open coursing match at Modesto on New Year's day. A live club has been organized in that city and legitimate coursing is booming in that section.

Geo. Raper, the well-known English judge, will judge at the Westminster Kennel Club show on February 19-22 next.

C. W. Travis, San Francisco, has sold a dog pup by California Bernardo—Nellie Bland, to Mrs. Hunter of Alameda.

The Sale will be held at Night, by Electric Light,
Under the Big Tent, Market St. and Van Ness Ave

Matt Byrnes arrived in the city on Tuesday morning with a carload of horses from the Copper King's stock farm in Montana, to be sold at auction in this city. The lot is comprised of fourteen yearlings and two two-year-olds. They are all untried colts, and are to be sold for want of room to handle all of them on the Bitter Root Farm. Catalogues will be issued immediately. The horses are at Ingleside, and may be seen at any time.

This is the first batch of yearlings ever offered for sale anywhere from Mr. Daly's farm, all having been put into training on the home place.

The Occident Stake

OF 1898

A Trotting Stake for Foals of 1895

CALIFORNIA STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY

To be trotted at the California State Fair of 1898. Entries to close January 1, 1896, with Edwin F. Smith, Secretary, at the office in Sacramento. One hundred dollars entrance, of which $10 must accompany nomination; $15 to be paid January 1, 1897; $25 to be paid January 1, 1898; and $50 thirty days before the race. The Occident Cup, of the value of $400, to be ended by the society. Mile heats, three in five, to harness. First colt to receive cup and six-tenths; second colt, three-tenths, and third colt, one tenth of the stakes. Five to enter, three to start, otherwise N. T. A. rules to govern.

Remember you are not held for full amount of entrance in case colt goes wrong; only forfeit payments made, which relieves you from further responsibility and declares entries out.

This stake is growing in value each year. In 1895 it was worth $2,400, and for 1896 will be in excess of that amount.

Remember the date of closing is January 1, 1896.

C. M. CHASE, President.
EDWIN F. SMITH, Secretary.

Training
The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed and superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, galloping, driving, keeping racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sliny, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm. Mailed postpaid for $5.50. Address

Six furlongs.

The California Futurity Stake

To be run at the State Fair of 1898.

For the produce of mares covered in 1895.

A sweepstakes for two-year olds, foals of 1896, by subscription of $10 each, for mares covered in 1895, and of $100 each for the produce of such mares, to be paid as follows: $10 for mares to accompany entry; $10 on produce, payable January 1, 1897 (when color, sex and marks of foal must be given); $15 November 1, 1897; $25 January 1, 1898, and $50 on September 1, 1898; the State Agricultural Society to add $1,000, of which the winner is to receive $600 and stakes paid on produce; second colt $250; third colt, $150; the owner of mares at time winners of first, second and third money were foaled to receive 60 per cent., 30 per cent and 10 per cent, respectively of money subscribed for mares on January 1, 1896. Colts to carry 118, fillies 115 pounds. Winners when carrying standard weight for age at the course where race is run, of one stake race of the value of $1,500, or two races of any value, to carry 3 pounds; of three races, 5 pounds; of four or more races, 7 pounds extra. Allowances: Non-winners when carrying standard weight, etc., if beaten twice, allowed 3 pounds; if three times, 5 pounds; if four or more times, 7 pounds. The produce of mares not having foaled a winner prior to January 1, 1896, to be allowed 5 pounds additional, if claimed at time of entry of mare. In case of sale of mare before foaling, or produce thereafter, notice thereof should be filed with the Secretary, as payments not made as they become due declares entry out and releases subscriber from all liability. If mare entered proves barren or has dead foal, entry is void, and money paid will be returned; otherwise entry follows colt. Three-quarters of a mile.

Entries to close with Secretary Jan. 1, 1896.

EDWIN F. SMITH, Secretary.

The Horse Man's Best Friend.

M. T. Grattan, speaks in an exchange of the so-called horseless age, that is not here and never will be in forcible terms. We quote two paragraphs:

"The horseless age is not here. It never will be here until man regains his sovereignty over the earth. A horseless age means an emasculated race of dudes, who, lacking virility, will not even be able to perpetuate their own weakness, and the race will die. The love of the horse and his companionship is inimical to vice. A man may walk and plot devilry; he may ride a wheel and fee the physician. The horse occupies his hands, his mind and stimulates torpid faculties. The great masters of men have been masters of the horse. He scatters care to the winds; he brings the bloom of health to the cheek; he makes a race of men who use and master him virile, combative, strong. The nations that have excelled in horsemanship have ruled the world; they will always rule the world and in the great final catastrophe the grand brute whose neck 'is clothed with thunder,' 'who smelleth the battle afar off,' will go into oblivion with man, and not before."

"What fleeing, panic-stricken soldier would have vouchsafed a second glance or thought to a monkey-like form on a wheel? His big, black steed, furious with energy and power, inspired courage as well as the dare-devil rider. A horseless age, indeed! Wait until war comes again to the nations of the earth, as it surely must as long as earth lasts, and man's best friend will quickly find his place again."

DECORUM, the sister to Direct, 2:05½, will be bred to Stamboul, 2:07½, the coming season.

FOR SALE.

A FINE DOUBLE TEAM OF FAST TROTTERS.

A splendid pair of roadsters, one of the finest buggy teams in the city, is offered for sale. They are well-bred, fast, stylish, and perfectly gentle—safe for a lady to drive. In breeding they cannot be excelled, being of the most fashionable strains. Any gentleman wanting a fast team will find a bargain in this pair of trotting mares. They are only four years old, and, being untrained, will continue to develop speed by careful handling. They are slightly below medium size, but of strong conformation and perfectly sound. This team may be seen at the Dexter Prince Stable, 1509 Grove street, near Baker. They will be sold at a low price.

"Gold Dust" Smokeless Shot Gun Powder.

THE BEST SHOT GUN POWDER MADE.

Its claims for superiority are as follows:—

- FIRST It is not affected by heat, cold, moisture or age, and will not detonate.
SECOND It will not cause headache.
THIRD It is under all conditions the safest powder in use, as it contains no nitro-glycerine or gun cotton. It will not explode unless confined and ignited by fire, as in the loaded shell in the gun.
FOURTH It has a light recoil and great velocity.
FIFTH It is the quickest and has the greatest killing power at any distance.
SIXTH It gives the best pattern at any and all distances.
SEVENTH Its action is the most uniform in all respects.
EIGHTH It can be used in cheap paper, or brass shells with any primer.
NINTH It is the cleanest powder in use, and if the gun is not cleaned for weeks after using, a dry cloth is all that is required for that purpose, when it will be noticed that there is no corrosive action, but, on the contrary, the residue has preserved the metal. The residue does not accumulate with long continued shooting, there being no more after fifty shots than after the first. (After shooting other powders, the gun barrels should be wiped out and cleaned before using "GOLD DUST.")

TENTH It is the cheapest powder to use, as every package sold contains full weight (16 oz. to the lb.); and each pound contains more than double the number of loads to the same bulk of any other powder (with the exception of one brand, which sportsmen generally hesitate to use, considering it dangerous).

THIS POWDER IS MANUFACTURED BY THE
UNITED STATES SMOKELESS POWDER CO.
No. 13 Pine Street, San Francisco, Cal.

DUPONT SMOKELESS
SPORTING POWDER
Now Ready.

AN AMERICAN NITRO POWDER OF HIGH MERIT.

The Claims made for Dupont Smokeless are briefly as follows:

- First—It may be loaded the same as black powder, using the usual Dixon measure.
Second—It gives best pattern and best penetration of any nitro powder at this time before the public.
Third—It is cleaner in the gun than any nitro powder in use.
Fourth—It is what its name would indicate, smokeless.
Fifth—Recall, while noticeable, is far less than that incident to the use of any other powder.
Sixth—Its shooting qualities of the best; hard, quick, well-suited to trap and wing shooting.
Seventh—This powder is not affected by extremes of heat, cold or moisture, which is not the case with many other nitro powders.

Prices and instructions to be used in loading, free on application.

DEATH OF JOHN A. GOLDSMITH.

The Prince of Reinsmen—A Brief Sketch of His Life With the Trotters—A Career That Was Always Honorable—His Death an Irreparable Loss to the Profession.

NEW YORK, December 13.—The well-known trotting horse driver John A. Goldsmith, died this afternoon in the Presbyterian Hospital where he has been since November 10th under treatment for tumor of the kidneys.

His condition became so serious last Wednesday that his relatives were summoned from Walnut Grove Farm, Orange county, where the Goldsmith family have lived for nearly 200 years.

Mrs. Goldsmith, a daughter of Owen Moore of New York, has been with her husband constantly since the beginning of his illness.

Only two weeks ago we published a picture of this prince of reinsmen, and underneath an article in which the cheerful news was presented that we would soon have the pleasure of seeing him on this Coast. But, alas! The Great Judge has called him home, and his thousands of admirers and friends will feel a keen pang of sorrow when they see this announcement.

John A. Goldsmith was a natural horseman. His father Alden Goldsmith, was one of the most prominent and successful horse breeders in America, and his two sons, James and John, seemed to have inherited that love for a horse and for the perfection in developing his highest rate of speed in races they practically sacrificed their lives. Both were industrious and of a highly organized temperament. Their ambition to excel seemed without limit, but their physical strength could not stand the strain; some portion had to succumb, and their countless miles in the sulkeys and the consequent shaking which they had to stand for so many years proved too much. James passed away a few years ago, and now his brother has joined him.

John was of a speculative turn of mind and even when a child he could outstride any boy in Orange County and was always ready for a match. He rode so well that many believed no Indian on the plains was his superior. After school he would always be seen in the saddle. His favorite animal was a good looking mare called Lottie, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, out of Molly, by Black Hawk. To keep him out of a sulky was almost impossible, and one day, after he had been raking hay, he matched an old horse called John A. which he was driving against a gelding called Edson; the match was for $100 a side. The race came off at a place called Warwick, and Jim, who was a little afraid John had been too rash in making the match, drove and won. A prouder youth never rode into Washingtonville than John, and his determination to become a driver increased from that eventful day.

He studied the methods of the drivers he saw and being very observant he thought with a few trials, he could get as much speed out of a horse as any of the then famous knights of the sulky.

In a place called Montgomery a little meeting was held and the youthful Johnny was on hand with a horse called Alec. He was cool as a cucumber, and as he had the horse entered in a race there, he surprised his friends by scoring away with the rest of the drivers like a veteran, and greatly to the discomfiture of the latter he won the race; best time 2:41. The enthusiasm with which his first victory was received was one of his most pleasing memories.

Chris. Lang, the present caretaker of Guy Wilkes, 2:15½ loves to speak of John, and in an interview with him yesterday regarding the latter's career as a driver many incidents were related of his skill and judgment that would fill more space than we can devote at this time.

The first race of any note in which he was considered a professional was at Fleetwood Park, 1878, when in a race against Modesty he drove the Volunteer horse Driver and won. He then took the saddle mare Lottie, which he had driven quite often and went to Bradford, Pennsylvania. He defeated a trotter called the Blue Mare, by Wood's Hambletonian and then moved his string of horses (he had only three) to Rochester, New York. His brother had the balance of the horses from the farm at Buffalo, so John brought his horses there and together the two brothers went to Elmira.

Jim drove Driver here in a race against Jersey Boy, Geo. B. Daniels, Irene, Carrie and Hambletonian Mambrino and won. John then left for home and stayed home that year. When James got in trouble at Beacon Park, Boston, September 2, 1879, in a race there with Driver, John took the horse and drove him the balance of the season. He brought Driver to St. Louis and Chicago. In the latter place he drove this horse so well against the great campaigners Charley Ford, Scott's Thomas, Mazy-Manie, Post Boy, Rose of Washington, Belle Brasfield, Kate Middleton and John H. that every one predicted his future career would be bright and prosperous. He visited St. Louis, Cincinnati, Kansas City and then returned home.

This year he also drove a roan gelding called Dispatch and gave him a record of 2:24½. He afterwards discovered the horse was a ringer and a more disgusted young man could not be found anywhere. He handled the ribbons over a number of horses in 1880, and every horse he drove lowered a record and proved that a master was in the sulky.

In 1882, Monroe Salishury, that excellent judge of drivers, saw in John the material for a great driver and engaged him to drive Director. He came to California and started the black horse in four races, and at Oakland, Sacramento, Stockton and San Jose he piloted this horse to victory over such trotters as Honesty, Ashley, Del Sur, Cairo, Capt. Smith, Reliance, Crown Point and Echora (afterwards known as the dam of Direct.) His neat appearance in and out of the sulky, and his quiet, unobtrusive and gentlemanly ways endeared him to all. His skill in driving was highly commented upon, and the remarkable ease with which he seemed to rally a tiring horse was something the Californians marveled at. He leaped at once into popular favor, and the following year Monroe Salishury, who saw that he had a hard pair to beat in any country, entered Director throughout the Eastern circuit, California being considered by him entirely too small to parade such money winners before the public. Director was then six years old. In the month of May, 1883, he started for Pittsburg. The following is a brief description of what Mr. Goldsmith accomplished with Director, and his fame as a driver spread like wildfire throughout the United States. Here, in California, when the news of one of Director's victories was received, little gatherings of horsemen at the Bay District, Dickey's or the Palace Hotel delighted to speak of the "team" Salishury had, and the expressions "I told you so." "They can't beat 'em," were heard on all sides.

At Pittsburg, on the first day of June, he won the 2:22 class in 2:26, 2:28, 2:26, after the first two heats had been taken by Hambletonian Bashaw in 2:25, 2:25½. He then went to Hartford, where he met a strong field. Dan Smith won the first and third heats in 2:22½, 2:22½, Walnut the second in 2:21½, and when the others were ready to quit, Director began and won the fourth, fifth and sixth heats in 2:22½, 2:22, 2:22½.

At Albany, Director won in straight heats in 2:22½, 2:23½, 2:22, and the following week at Washington he beat four competitors a split heat race in 2:25½, 2:28½, 2:18½. He then went to Chicago, where he started down the Grand Circuit Summer Meetings. His first race at that place was the 2:23 class.

Gladiator won the first heat in 2:23½, and Director then went on and won the race in 2:24½, 2:20, 2:22½. Four days later at the same place he entered the great free-for-all stallion race, having for opponents such well-known campaigners as Black Cloud, 2:17½, Monroe Chief, 2:18½, Santa Claus, 2:17½, and Alexander, 2:19.

Monroe Chief was a hot favorite, the track being ankle deep with mud, and he was known to be a good performer under such circumstances. Director won the first heat in 2:19½, Monroe Chief the second in 2:20, and Director the third and fourth in 2:22½, 2:26½.

Then came the great race of Director's life the week following, over the Cleveland track, one which in point of merit and wonderful driving by Goldsmith has never been equalled by any pair. There were four starters, Director, Wilson, Gladiator and Kate McCall, then the fastest in the country. Before a heat had been trotted, it was known that the drivers of the other three horses had pooled issues and made a combination to beat Director. Director won the first heat in 2:19½. Wilson became settled by this heat and the fight then began, three against one. The Blue Bull horse, Gladiator, was a horse of immense speed for a short distance, while Director was a little slow to get off. Gladiator could thus take the pole and carry Director out to the fence and allow the other two horses to get on the inside of them, so it will be seen that Director had to trot around both turns on the outside of three horses. What disadvantage this means, when trotting against a horse that makes a record of 2:16½ in this very race, can be readily appreciated, even by a non-professional.

But in spite of all, Director won. The second heat he could not get clear of the pocket until the homestretch was reached and a desperate struggle ensued down the finish, the outcome being a dead heat in 2:17.

The third heat was another battle between the black stallion and the three combination, and with his helpers, Wilson was able to heat Director to the wire in 2:16½, but he had nothing to spare, as Director was at the saddle girth at the finish.

The fourth heat they went at Goldsmith with the black horse again, and kept him in a pocket until Wilson got a good lead, but it did not avail him, for Director cut down his lead by inches in the homestretch, beating Wilson out a length in 2:17½.

The fifth heat fell to Wilson in 2:18 after an exciting struggle. Each horse had now two heats, and as neither Gladiator nor Kate McCall had one they were obliged to go to the stable. This left only Director and Wilson, and as the latter had lost his helpers and was thoroughly played out, Director just played with him, winning in a walk in 2:28½, and only the generosity of Goldsmith, Director's driver, allowed Wilson to save his distance.

This race at once caused Director to be crowned king of all game trotting stallions, and his driver, Goldsmith, a wonder, but there were other even greater triumphs in store for them. At Buffalo, the next week, he started in an exhibition race with Jay-Eye See and Clemmie G., taking second place in the race. At Utica he easily defeated the fast stallion Duquesne, 2:17½, in straight heats, and at Springfield was beaten in a race with Wilson, Witherspoon and Edwin Thorne. Then came the great turf event of the year. At Hartford, the first Charter Oak $10,000 purse and the field that opposed him was without question the best and fastest (all combined) that ever faced a starter even to this day. As it consisted of Wilson, 2:19½; Fanny Witherspoon, 2:17; Clemmie G., 2:17; Director, 2:17; Phallas, 2:13½; J. B. Thomas, 2:18½; Adele Gould, 2:19, and Overman, 2:20½ (a field of eight starters whose average records were 2:17½), with such drivers of Mace, Splan, Turner and Hickok, to oppose him, John Goldsmith, who drove Director, had a hard race on his hands. Again was the combination made. Again was Wilson the favorite, and again did Director down them, combination, horses and all. The Turf, Field and Farm of that date thus describes the race:

The first heat fell to Wilson in 2:17½, Witherspoon second, and Director third. Witherspoon won the second in 2:17, and Director fourth; but in the third heat the Black Tornado pointed to the daylight which was breaking in the East for him. He got off well and was never headed, winning in 2:20. Fanny Witherspoon made a bad break on the first turn and Splan laid her up, Wilson indulging in several hobbles, but finished up very fast, Phallas being second, Thomas third and Wilson fourth. The situation was now full of interest and perplexity. More cotton was stuffed into the ears of Fanny Witherspoon as she was wild in such company. Her owner and her driver said that it was not the purse but the glory of winning in such company.

Director was very industrious. Directly the word was given and Witherspoon, making a jim town, barely saved the disgrace of being distanced, the game black coming down the homestretch wonderfully fresh and won handily in 2:18, Clemmie G. second and Wilson third. The story ends with the fifth heat. Director showed the way from the start to the finish, winning in 2:19½, Witherspoon coming at him very game, but not being able to outlast the son of Dictator and Dolly and his great driver."

He returned to California, and by the solicitation of a number of prominent horse breeders who offered him their best colts and fillies, resigned his position as trainer for Mr. Salishury's horses and opened a stable. He had the following campaigners in Oakland and appeared on the Californian circuit during the years 1884 and 1885, and won nearly all the races they started in: Guy Wilkes, 2:15½; Director, 2:17; Sister, 2:19½; Macon, 2:21; Dawn, 2:18½; Joe Arthurton, 2:20½ and Maude, 2:20. Some of these horses did not get their flow records during these years, but eventually they made their records under his guidance.

His string in 1886 was a large one, and he repeated the successes of the season previous with the game little pacing mare Maude, 2:20; Guy Wilkes, 2:15½; Valensin, 2:23;

Manon, 2:21; Hidalgo, 2:27 and Shamrock, 2:25, the record breaking two-year-old, Sister, 2:19½, and several others that he drove in races whose names I cannot recall at present.

He proved himself unbeatable in a sulky, I remember, at Santa Rosa, that year, there was a race between Stamboul, Lucille and Voucher. Houser was driving the latter, and Stamboul was a strong favorite. Mr. Goldsmith had his pockets full of field tickets, which averaged about $6 against $35, and asked Houser if he could drive. To the surprise of every one Houser included, John never left the issue of any heat in doubt after he got within striking distance of Stamboul at the head of the homestretch, and won the three heats and race amidst the wildest enthusiasm. He lit his cigar after each heat as coolly as if he had handled the big lunk-headed son of Nephew all his life and then followed the horse down to the stall and gave instructions how to cool him out. The "talent" that thought Stamboul invincible were speechless when they saw how greatly improved the rival of Stamboul became under the magic touch of this mild-mannered wizard of the sulky.

It was at this meeting that Mr. Goldsmith gave Guy Wilkes, who weighed 1250 pounds, his record in the fourth heat of a race against Adair. The latter won the first heat in 2:20, then Guy Wilkes won the next in 2:22½; the next heat he walked under the wire in 2:19½, and the last heat he trotted the mile in 2:15½—the fastest mile made by a stallion at that time. Guy Wilkes had never been given a mile faster than 4:00 previous to that day that season, and Goldsmith had not pulled a line over him previous to this race. The horse was very high in flesh, and as his driver remarked, after alighting: "If I knew that I was going to give him a fast mile I would have prepared him for it, and would have given him a faster record. I know he can trot close to 2:10."

The next season he determined to get another lot of good ones ready, and with his old stand-bys, Sister, 2:19½, and Joe Artburton, 2:20½, he had the following: Lilly Stanley, 2:17½, Pocahontas (p), 2:22½, Perihelion, 2:25, Mamie Comet, 2:23½, Sable Wilkes, 2:18, Grandee, the champion two-year old, and Little Direct, another two-year-old trotter. His victories increased and his bright reputation as a driver did not tarnish during this eventful year, but that winter he was offered a splendid salary by Wm. Corbitt, of the San Mateo Stock Farm, and after due consideration he accepted it, and moved to the farm whereon the great Guy Wilkes and his small family were.

His first filly to handle was the handsome mare Hazel Wilkes, that won so many blue ribbons at the recent Horse Show. She was then three years old, and the next season he gave this mare a record of 2:20. His work from the day he took charge of the horses on the farm has become an important part of the history of the development of light-harness horses in California. He gave low records and world's records to so many that it would take too much space to segregate them all. He gave Sable Wilkes the world's record as a three-year-old; Freedom, the champion yearling, his record of 2:23½, thus placing the first trotting baby in the charmed circle. Regal Wilkes, as a two-year-old, 2:20½, the fastest stallion record for that age, to that date, and then down the line the youngsters he gave records to in hard-fought races here in California and on the Eastern circuit added wealth to the breeder of these horses and undying fame to the great sires and dams that are now at the San Mateo Stock Farm.

He met with an accident at the farm four years ago and broke his leg. He chafed considerably over his enforced idleness, and shortly after, his health began to fail. He was possessed of an indomitable will, and notwithstanding the kindly advice of Dr. MacMongle, one of the most eminent physicians and surgeons on this Coast, as well as Mr. Corbitt and all his friends, he persisted in getting in the sulky and could not be made to believe that it would result seriously for him.

Three years ago his beloved brother, James, died and his death seemed to affect him more than anything else, he determined to go East, taking with him a few of Mr. Corbitt's horses. He had as an assistant John Rogers, and together they went through the circuit. He remained East for some time and then came to California to arrange his affairs and then started for the home of his boyhood, Washingtonville, Orange County, New York. He stocked the farm with his California-bred horses, and, shortly after, his sufferings from a tumorous kidney became so intense that he determined to undergo an operation, which was successfully performed, and after he was convalescent he married a most inestimable young lady, a daughter of Owen Moore, Esq., and throughout all his sufferings he found that comfort and tender care which only a loving wife can administer. The telegram at the beginning of this article concludes the last chapter in this memorable young man's career.

I cannot conclude this without referring to the many attributes this quiet and unobtrusive young man possessed. He was always genial; though not much of a talker, yet when in a reminiscent mood he was one of the most entertaining of men. He was generous to a fault; many a kindly act he performed for some unfortunate which the world will never know. He was a thorough business man, and knew the value of money, although exact and methodical in all his dealings with his fellowmen, and honest, he expected the same trait in all others. When once his confidence in an individual was betrayed he would never allow that person to speak to him again. Among his fellow drivers, "Johnny," as he was familiarly called, was always a favorite, besides recognizing in him the greatest driver of his years ever seen in a sulky, they knew that he would never be guilty of driving them into a fence or resort to any of the practices indulged in by incompetent and unscrupulous knights of the sulky.

As a judge of horses he was one of the best, and whenever he selected a colt or filly and concluded it was worthy of being entered in a stake or purse race, he never gave it up until he proved his prediction correct. A visitor at the San Mateo Stock Farm says "the rapidity with which he would select yearlings, two-year-olds and three-year-olds, and insist upon them being entered for stake events, was most remarkable, and after the races ended I always noted that he made no mistakes in his selections."

As a worker he was never idle. The first one awake in the morning and around the stalls, and the last one to leave at night, and his two life-long assistants, Chris Lang and Daniel Sheehan, who had been with him on the old homestead in New York, say that when he was enjoying good health he never seemed to tire.

As a judge of pace he was one out of a thousand. He could time quarters and eighths without a watch, and tell just how fast he was going. He was a peculiar driver, carrying his hands high, and as he never used a whip or any artificial appliances to make his colts and fillies trot or pace fast, he had much the advantage over other drivers that relied on whips, hobbles and toe weights to keep their youngsters going smooth.

He was invaluable on a stock farm, for he never believed in a useless expenditure of money to get a new rigging for horses in his charge. He never shod a descendant of Guy Wilkes forward with a shoe heavier than ten ounces in front or lighter than five ounces behind. And when he got behind a horse the animal seemed to be imbued with the magnetic force so prominent in him. He could keep a horse tiptoeing without breaking longer than any one who ever sat in a sulky, and for rallying a tiring horse and keeping him doing his utmost to the wire, we all remember a number of exhibitions of this kind which he gave us. A strong endorsement of his method of driving was shown by the fact that Guy Wilkes never had the mark of a whip on his ribs after he campaigned him, and he seldom, if ever broke a campaigner down. In these and many other ways his innate knowledge of the horses in his charge and a thorough understanding of what the term "conditioning" meant made him the peer of any trotting horseman in America.

He has gone! His pleasant smile and merry twinkling eyes have been dimmed; his kindly voice been hushed; the blue jacket and cap which he wore so neatly have forever been laid away, and only the remembrance of that strong manly figure among the greatest turf generals of the last decade remains. In the ranks which he graced so well; in the center of the little groups of social friends that hovered around him; by the fireside where his love and kindness were at all times manifest, his place will never be filled. He has gone the path we all must go and even though we live for many years we shall never forget the impressions his individuality left upon the tablets of our memory, for there, and only there, shall we gaze upon his kindly face again.

ARNAREE.

Advocates a Change.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.—I see by your valuable paper there is a movement on foot in this State to get up a meeting at an early day of the breeders, owners and drivers of trotting horses with the view of perfecting an organization that will have for its object the betterment of the trotting horse interests. Now, if an organization of that kind is preferable and put in working order, I want to suggest a few changes in the present methods in vogue for their consideration. If this idea has been proposed by anyone before, I have failed to notice it, even if it has, and as there is merit in it, it will do no harm to repeat it, which is, to allow horses to trot for small purses, say from $300 down, without getting a bar record to prevent them from trotting for larger purses, but, of course, they would be barred from this class of purses, according to their records. I think the advantage of this can be seen in many ways; it will give owners and trainers a chance to educate their horses in races, something all trainers will admit is of the greatest importance. In fact, it is the only way to find out positively that you have a race horse, and it will give racing associations, that are located at small towns all over the country a chance to give meetings, because they could secure entries to purses they can afford to give, something they cannot do under present conditions.

I also want to go on record as saying, that if the practice of giving races of heats three in five are not discontinued, or nearly so, the trotting horsemen might as well shut up shop. You can fool "some of the people" for quite awhile, but the time is now up. I have been training and driving trotters, continually for over thirty five years, and even long before that, and I cannot call to mind but very few races of heats three in five, that you could say was strictly on the square. If there was not actual pulling, there was laying up of heats, and helping (the latter I think is the worst of all).

The two and three and dash races that I have seen have almost universally been square races, and I think most all old drivers will endorse these statements, and also in this, that a driver, who does not practice the laying up of heats in three and five races, will not win many races, although it is now contrary to rule.

Over three years ago I wrote an article that was published in the Chicago Horseman, strongly advocating dash races. I was in Chicago at the time and talked with Doble, McHenry, C. W. Williams and several breeders of national fame, notably, Mr. Emery, of Cleveland, and they all agreed with my views at the time, and I think they do still. But we have been overruled by the percentage men. What I mean by the percentage men is a class of people that are around all speculative propositions, from politics down, for the "sure money" there is in it, in anyway they can manipulate it, and a 3 in 5 trotting or pacing race is quite to their liking; they do not look ahead with the view to build up anything on a solid basis, they are only after what is in sight the present moment, and if they kill off a proposition by their nefarious practices, they switch off to something else, and leave solid, earnest men to "hold the sack."

As this is already longer than you will probably care to give your valuable space to, I will close. There is many other things, I feel like proposing to the organization that has called this out, if it shall assume tangible shape.

Yours truly, LUTE LINDSEY.

Wm. Corbitt's Next Sale.

In February next, there will be shipped from the San Mateo Stock Farm the most useful and valuable lot of horses ever bred in California. Mr. Corbitt, the proprietor, has determined to send the very choicest, fastest and best-bred horses on his farm to P. W. Kellogg & Co. to be sold at auction. Drivers who are seeking campaigners, and buyers for the European market should wait and secure some of these game horses: Ora Wilkes, 2:11, the beautiful black trotter, Lesa Wilkes, 2:09, Ravenscroft, 2:19, Burlingame, 2:18½, Muta Wilkes, 2:11, Lynwood, 2:20½, Double Cross, 2:18½, Lucinda Wilkes, 2:24½, Leonora, 2:25, Kent, 2:25½, and every other colt or filly that has a record, besides a most promising lot of brothers and sisters to the famous horses that made the name of the mighty Guy Wilkes a household word. Every animal offered will be sound and free from blemishes, and as only the pick of the farm will be shipped, Mr. Corbitt believing nothing else to be salable nowadays, buyers can with confidence anticipate this sale and expect to get the worth of their money.

What Will Local Organizations Do?

(Written for BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.)

The statement has been repeatedly made that in all the rules of the National or American Trotting Associations none can be found that is of practical protection to the owners or drivers as against the local organizations. It has been said that one reason for the protecting arm being thrown around the local member is that each year they are of pecuniary benefit to the parent association by reason of the annual dues, etc. It is true that by reason of the membership dues the parent organizations have been enabled to do business, pay large salaries and declare fair dividends, but that is no good reason why they should offer greater protection to a local member than to the horseman who makes it possible for both organizations to exist. Year after year the campaigner of harness horses has been compelled to face violated contracts on the part of the local members. No year has been more prolific of such as has the year just closed. Horses have been prepared for apparently rich stakes or purses at great expense. The cost of shipment has been great and because of the entrance moneys not paying the purse, bad weather or it may be without giving a good reason, the stake or purse is declared off. It is true the entrance moneys are paid back to the nominator, but how far will that go toward re-imbursing him for his outlay preparatory to shipping to the meeting, his shipping and other expenses. There is nothing for that man to do but "grin and bear" it, he cannot go the parent association and get relief. The other side of the picture has recently been shown and the contrast cannot but be noticeable to every one. The owners of Joe Patchen and John R. Gentry made an agreement to bring their horses from one of the southern cities to a northern one, for the purpose of giving an exhibition race. The agreement was a verbal one, re-enforced, however, by letters and telegrams from the respective owners. The secretary probably went to some expense advertising these two champions as a drawing card, the cost of which could not have been very much, however, as the meeting had to be advertised and the extra printing of this one item would be about the extent. The probability is that these two horses would have attracted a number of extra gate admissions, and the meeting would have been more attractive than it was, had they been there. But Messrs. Taylor and Scott found that owing to the lateness of the season, the shipment from a southern clime to that of winter might be disastrous to their horses, or for some other reason not given, it would be unwise to ship to the point where the meeting was to be held and sent their horses into winter quarters. The secretary of this meeting made charges against these gentlemen to the American Trotting Association for violation of contract, and asked that they and their horses be expelled because of it. Here, then, we have a case. A prominent secretary bringing charges against two such prominent horsemen as the gentlemen named is much better than though the parties in interest were more obscure and of less prominence. After considering the evidence, the Board of Review decides to fine both gentlemen for the violation of the verbal contract and they are ordered suspended until the fine is paid. Nothing is said about races having been declared off, after the horses had been housed upon the ground. Nothing is said about violation of written contract when such action is taken, for every member of the Board of Review realizes the value of a nomination blank and it must be admitted that it is a breach of contract when any race is declared off for any cause, so long as there are starters under the rule. Nothing is said about the enormous expenditure of money to get these horses to the ground. The facts as presented only called for a breach of contract on the part of horsemen and they must be punished. It is a sad state of affairs. Unless some action is taken very soon by the parent associations, looking to the protection of horsemen from the unfair action of some local associations, they will find the "worm turning;" that they have "killed the goose" and when it is too late will find themselves asking "where are we at."

CAPTAIN ESSEX.

Big Sale of Thoroughbreds.

A big sale of thoroughbreds recently was held in Lexington. The sale embraced horses in training, yearlings, stallions, broodmares and weanlings, aggregating about 600 head. The auction was begun Monday morning, and continued through each day without intermission until Wednesday evening, when, after an adjournment for supper, the sale was resumed and completed that night. There was a large attendance of horsemen from all parts of the country, and although the sums realized for many of the inferior animals were very small, consignors, generally, seemed satisfied, and in many instances, agreeably surprised.

The two-year old brother to Kingston—King William—brought the highest price of the entire sale—$6,500. Nimrod realized $4,700, Free Advice $3,100, Anna Garth $700, Onaretto $1,000, Leo Lake $1,400, Zanone $2,500, Garland Bar $1,525. It was understood after the sale that Mr. Penn bought in Free Advice for his owners. The highest priced yearling was a colt by Aretino, out of a Bramble mare, who brought $4,700. He is a typical Bramble, as massive as Ben Brush, though taller. His price was based largely on phenomenal work in the fall trials. Byron McClelland was the contending bidder with S. Levy, the purchaser. A colt by Forester, who brought the next best price, $2,500, was a magnificent-looking fellow, and sold principally on his shape. Duchess daughter, half-sister to Clifford, was sold for $1,900. The half-sister to Handspring is a rather light, weedy individual, and brought only $225.

The stallion offered did not seem to be in demand, Terra Cotta going for $180, and Carlsbad for $130, while Little Minch and Forenunner were led out without a bid.

Tulla Blackburn brought $2,000, the top price for a broodmare, Lady Wayward going at $1,125 and Hypocrite $1,525. Old Lucy Lisle, dam of Castaway II. and a host of other winners, and looking sound and sprightly, was sold for $100, being apparently not in foal. Laura Agnes, a full sister to Jacobin and Robespierre also went for $100, she, too, seeming not in foal.—Live Stock Record.

INGLESIDE TRACK—THURSDAY, DECEMBER 12.

BOWLING over favorites and incidentally upsetting the talent was the general order of events to-day. Four first choices went the way of good things gone wrong. The attendance was much above the average and the betting ring was well filled. The event of the card of six races was the G. H. Mumm & Co.'s stakes for two-year-old fillies at five and a half furlongs. Of fourteen carded to start, Belle Boyd, Princess Noretta, Miss Maxim, La Viente and Easel declined the issue. The field was made up of the very best fillies at the track, and there were not any conceded "lead-pipes" among the lot. Santa Anita stable's Argentina, that finished two lengths behind the best two-year-old filly of the year, One I Love, in the Belle Stakes over the Futurity course at Coney Island, and was a good third to One I Love and Merry Prince in the Golden Rod Stakes, seven furlongs, at the same track, was installed favorite, but drifted back from 6 to 5 early in the betting to 13 to 5 by post time. Santa Bella and Sallie Clicquot opened with twos about them, and shifted back and forth, under the magic influence of coin, finally settling down to 11 to 5. The Corrigan pair, Camelia and Mobalaska, were coupled, opening at 6 to 1, and going back to 9, Joan was at 12, Pique 60, Lucrezia Borgia 150 and Tennessee Maid 200 to 1. There were several breaks before the flag fell for a start, Pique showed first and raced along slightly in the lead to the half-pole, with Joan, Santa Bella, Argentina the order behind her. On the turn Santa Bella passed Pique, opening up a gap of two lengths, and Joan backed up rapidly, Argentina, Mobalaska and Camelia all passing her. In the run home Santa Bella's lead was cut down by Sallie Clicquot, who caught her at the drawgate, but the imported filly had more than enough left to carry her to the wire a winner by a half length. The balance of the field were in open order. Five lengths away came Joan, first, then Pique. Argentina was slightly interfered with turning into the stretch. Time, 1:09½.

The winner is a bay filly by St. Serf, out of Maiden Belle owned by the millionaire turfman, W. O. B. Macdonough. She was imported from England in utero and foaled on the Macdonough Stock Farm in 1893. Her dam recently died at the farm, and as she was heavy in foal to the great Ormonde, her loss was very keenly felt by Mr. Macdonough. She was among the broodmares selected in England to mate with "the horse of the century," and was purchased for $12,500. Santa Bella has won during her racing career $3,910. She has started seventeen times, winning six, second seven, third twice and unplaced but three times. Her first race at Bay District, at a half-mile, was won in fast time, and shortly afterwards she captured the Racing Stakes, was prominent in the Del Paso Stakes, but ran unplaced, and finished second to Crescendo in the Spring Stakes, though that performance was robbed of any high degree of merit, as Crescendo won in a gallop and the only horse behind her fell. In her last eleven starts she has been inside the money in every one, with but two thirds among them.

Sallie Clicquot is the property of Green B. Morris, and ran well in the best company in the West this summer. She is by the mighty Salvador out of Widow Clicquot, and comes honestly by her speed and gameness. She was the first if the get of Salvador to win a race in California.

Joan, by St. Carlo—Bagatelle, is the property of J. Cochran, and was purchased by him of a public sale for $90. She won the Lissak Selling Stakes at five and a half furlongs, at Bay District recently, in 1:07½, and was at the good odds of 30 to 1. She also won her first start at Ingleside, at six furlongs, from a good field, and ran second to Sir Play the last time out.

Sir Richard, at 6 to 1, captured the first race, at six and a half furlongs, and Hidalgo, at 8 to 1, the place from Gallant, a 3-to-5 favorite. Sam Doggett had his first mount in California on the gray, and was anxious to get away. Mr. Caldwell admonished him not to beat the flag, and then when he spoiled a couple of good breaks, gave him a $25 fine as a reminder that he must not be too slow. Doggett was in front at the start and he kept the gray horse hustling and won all the way. Time, 1:23½. Winner S. C. Hildreth's gr h, 5, by Stratford or imp. Uhlan—Victress.

Kowalsky was the only thing the talent saw in the second race. Ferris Hartman, Mt. McGregor and Wm. Pinkerton were on equal terms at 7 to 1 for second choice. Bergen, on Kowalsky, delayed the start several minutes, then got his mount off last. Pinkerton made the running in the early part of the game, but Ferris Hartman came like a demon down the stretch and mowed down everything, winning by three lengths, the favorite coming from sixth into the stretch into place, getting it by a neck from Pinkerton. Time, 1:09½. Winner E. Corrigan's br c, 2, by Isaac Murphy—Derochment.

The third race was the stake event, above described, and next a selling race at a mile and an eighth. Pepper was a 1-to-2 favorite, Basso and Candid next in favor, at 4 and 7 to 1, respectively. Mary S. with Tod Sloan up, showed first, but gave place to Basso before the stand was passed. The latter made the running to the turn for home, where he had to chuck it. Mary S., second all the way, passed him and showed the way into the stretch. Pepper, running last most of the time, had moved up to third position before the turn was made, and then he thundered through the stretch, imp. Candid at his loins, and together they beat Mary S. by three lengths, she a neck in front of Basso. Mary S. sold at 30 to 1 at post time. Time, 1:56. Winner P. Dunne's br c, 3, by Hindoo—Francesca.

Tobey, at one time as good as 25 to 1, took the next race, at five and a half furlongs. Abi P., the favorite, dropped back after the start, but from the half pole began to move up and almost caught Tobey at the wire. Conde was next in line, the three horses half-lengths apart. Time, 1:10. Winner Judge Tam's br g, 3, by imp. Greenback—Una.

Olive was made favorite for the last event, with Miss Gentry, Philomena and George Miller all well thought of. Philomena made every post a winning one, and Tim Murphy and Toano, a head apart, were second and third. Olive did not run her race. Time, 1:09½. Winner W. B. Sink's ch f, 3, by Himyar—Last Ban.

Winning jockeys were Garner two, Doggett, Slaughter, Tod Sloan and W. Martin one each.

INGLESIDE TRACK, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 13.

What a rebuke game, true, speedy Geraldine administered to the wise ones that suffered her to go to the post beginning at 30 to 1! If she had been at 4 or 5 to 1 the aforementioned wise ones would have tumbled over each other in their haste to get their money on. But from 50, she went down to 30 in the betting. At first the bookies' had the emery to offer most anything about the erstwhile record-smasher. It all happened in the last race at six furlongs, and Babe Murphy, that has suffered none others to head her out this way, was the only thing the talent could see. Arapahoe was on even terms with the Babe early in the betting, but while the latter was borne down to even money from 3 to 2, the Baldwin representative receded to twos. George Miller was well enough liked to keep him at about sevens. From the start the field ran in two divisions to the far turn, Mainstay, Geraldine and George Miller in the first, then came the others, three lengths away, Bell Ringer straggling along last. Going around the bend they bunched up and shifted positions, and then shot into the stretch looking like a solid phalanx. Out of the line two of the fleetest were seen to emerge, and amid cries of "Come on, Babe!" Geraldine led the gritty Babe to the wire. Doggett sat still and let his mare win without urging, while Cochran was at work with hands and feet on Babe and riding like a demon, but could not get nearer than a length and a half. Mainstay was two lengths behind. Time, 1:14½. Winner ch m, a, by Grinstead—Cousin Peggy.

Most of the tickets cashed on Geraldine were sent from the grandstand, and those were mainly taken on the sentimental respect the ladies have for a popular idol, even after shattered by age. In this case sentiment won against long heads, and the stand was a scene of joyous exultation.

Geraldine is now the property of George Rose, the book-maker and horse owner. She is in splendid condition, and her race to day shows she has not lost much of her speed. The heroine of many a hard-fought battle, and the central figure of a long and sensational career on the turf, she comes back to her old love and the hearts of all Californians warm to her as she shows her old speed and spirit.

Ingleside is a bright, cheerful spot, the uniformly neat and attractive arrangement of everything within the enclosure having a charm added by the verdant hills surrounding. In the grand stand or about the betting-ring or paddock one is always most comfortable these clear winter days, and the fact is becoming so well established that more and more make their way out there daily, and the attendance shows a very perceptible increase. The races are good, always, high-class horses meeting in nearly every contest, and the layers of odds are very liberal. To day was one of continual upsets. They began with the first event, and the coup de main came with the last race.

Theresa, at 15 to 1, upset the talents selection, Summer Time, in the first race, and Alvero, a warm second choice, finished outside the money, Beatrice Mara getting the show. Endymion opened at 7 to 2, but went back to 6 to 1, and was almost left at the post. Time, 1:03½. Winner B. Schriber's b f, 2, by Duke of Montrose—La Farandole.

The second race was a selling affair, at one mile, with thirteen starters, the blue pencil eliminating Pescador. Service, May Day, Rico, imp. Amarino and E. H. Shirley was the order the short-enders ruled in the betting. Service was out in front till he struck the stretch, then he got off his stride and came along sideways. Tar and Tartar, who beat the flag, but was taken back, came out of the bunch and won in a drive, with May Day but a nose short of the money. E. H. Shirley was a good third. Time, 1:43½. Winner N. S. Hall's br g, 5, by Hindoo—Bramblett.

Sir Play was an even money first choice for the third race, at six furlongs, Ramiro at 2 to 1. Rummel opened at 7, but drifted back to 10 to 1. Sir Play showed the way from flag-fall, after the field had been at the post ten minutes at least, owing to Reddington's actions. He kept command from Rummel and Reddington, both trying to head him, but Ramiro did the trick after straightened out for home and won by a length. Grady was next to last into the stretch, but he came with enough speed to pass everything up to Ramiro, and finished a very strong second, three lengths in front of Sir Play. The balance were in very close order, except Tenacity (formerly Modesty colt). Time, 1:15½. Winner Santa Anita Stable's b c, 2, by Gano—Cuba Queen.

On the entry cards sent out Thursday night, as well as the lists printed in the morning papers, Oakley instead of Oakley, appeared for the fourth race, at a mile and a sixteenth. Oakley was plunged on from the opening and was at 4 to 5 at the close. All Over and Foremost were at 3½ and 4 to 1, and Duchess of Milpitas 12 to 1. Zaragoza was out in front for three-quarters, then he was out behind. The Duchess took her place in the van, and led into the stretch. All Over was just behind her, but could not get up. Foremost came with a strong spurt at the finish and passed them both winning by a length, in a good drive, from Duchess, she a neck in front of All Over. Oakley was fourth. Time, 1:49½. Winner A. B. Spreckels' b g, 3, by Flood—imp. Queen Bess. The last race was won by Geraldine, closing a day of sport rarely excelled.

Winning jockeys were: Chorn, two; Todd Sloan, R. Isom and Doggett.

INGLESIDE TRACK, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 14.

The weather down town to-day did not look very promising, as it was cold and windy, but the large crowd that journeyed out to Ingleside found it a most delightful spot. Fully 5,000 were present, and though twenty books cut in at the drawing to-day, none of them seemed to be given many minutes' respite by the throng that filled the ring. The fields in the six races were of average size, and the events all proved highly interesting. Four favorites were first to show, Emma D., at 12 to 1, and Mestor, at 5, being the exceptions to the rule. The handicap, at a mile and an eighth, held the most of interest for the spectators. Seven starters were sent to the post. Bright Phoebus, the Realization winner, in his race on Wednesday seemed to be about ready and hence was installed favorite, though Pat Dunne's Pepper was soon quoted at even terms, and the two closed at 8 to 5. Of the others, Peter II, Polaski and Santiago were at 12 and Wawona and Cadmus 15 to 1. The light-weighted Polaski was the only one besides the favorites to receive any considerable support, having opened at 20 to 1. Slaughter took the Owens' entry out in front at once and was followed closely by Wawona. After the first turn was made Bright Phoebus, Peter II and Pepper, two lengths behind the leaders, ran side by side till the three-quarter pole was neared, then Pepper, on the outside, began to move up and Bright Phoebus followed suit, keeping about even and retaining the rail. Peter II fell in behind the Hobart horse, running easy. Santiago and Cadmus were close together in the rear, and did not show prominent at any stage of the game. Rounding the turn for home Wawona backed up, beaten, and Bright Phoebus fell into second position, Pepper, at his saddle girth, third. Bright Phoebus was not extended until about half the distance home had been covered, then George Miller, who had ridden a perfectly-paced race, shook out a wrap and the white-stockinged bay shot out in front and won easily by a good length. Polaski took place honors from Pepper, coming very fast, Peter II and Wawona, three lengths away, finished a head apart. The very good time of 1:55½ was hung up. Winner, Del Monte's Stable's b c, 3, by Falsetto—Buff and Blue.

The first race of the day, at five furlongs, went to the 3-to-1 favorite, Wm. Pinkerton. He got away third in the field of thirteen two-year-olds, but Doggett rushed him out in front at once and won all the way. Adolph Spreckels was second and Hazard third. Gov. Budd and Pique were favored in the betting, but were never prominent after the start. Time, 1:02½. Winner S. C. Hildreth's ch g, 5, by Shannon—Fannie Lewis.

Morven won the second race at six furlongs selling, as he liked. Abi P. was a close second and Road Runner, showing some of his old form, was third. Morven was an 8-to-5 favorite, and Abi P. a warm second choice. Minnie Cee and Centurion were recipients of some support. The former ran second to the stretch, but died away. Time, 1:16½. Winner White & Clark's h g, 4, by imp. Cheviot—Lurline.

Emma D., a 12-to-1 shot, upset the talent in the third race, at six furlongs. Sir Richard, Lismore and Oregon Eclipse were all backed to win, but the roan mare drew away from her field leaving the backstretch and won easily from there. Oregon Eclipse was two lengths in front of Lismore for place, with Sir Richard, Yemen and Bernardo all close up. Time, 1:15½. Winner J. P. Woolman's rn m, 5, by Jack Brady—Dolly Varden.

A selling race at a mile and an eighth followed the handicap, described above, for which Wheel of Fortune closed an even-money favorite. Stratbmeath was at 11 to 5, a warm second choice Light-weighted Belle Boyd, an 8-to-1 shot, made the running from the flag and was only nipped out at the wire by a short neck by Wheel of Fortune. Belle Boyd lost the rail on the turn to the Wheel, and probably thereby lost the race. Stratbmeath was third. Time, 1:55½. Winner Joe Harvey's ch f, 3, by Gano—Jennie B.

J. O. C. and April were both favored for the mile and a half hurdle race. Soon Enough made the running to the last jump then fell, and Mestor came on and won from J. O. C. by two lengths, Esperance third, half a length away. Alexis also fell. Time, 2:48½. Winner Garden City Stable's b g, 5, by Falsetto—Woodlark.

Winning jockeys were Doggett, Piggott, T. Sloan, Geo. Miller, Eddie Jones and Swift.

INGLESIDE TRACK, MONDAY, DECEMBER 15.

Muddy track again. Sunday night a heavy rain fell, and though the clouds were dry during the following day and night, early this morning showers began to fall, and continued at intervals during the afternoon. The track was soft and muddy and good time impossible. Form students were very far from correct, the races falling to long-shots and second choices, but one favorite winning. The attendance was very good, and far exceeded an average Monday crowd, even on fair days. The races were all up to the good standard established at Ingleside. Six races were carded, but the blue pencil eliminated one.

The first race was seven furlongs, with seven starters. Barney Schreiber's old gray gelding Braw Scot was installed favorite, and closed after warm support at 4 to 5. Rico opened at 4 to 1, but receded to fives and Outright was played down from 8 to 5. With little delay the field was sent away to a good start. Braw Scot held the rail, with Outright and Montalvo running alongside. Rico was prominent when they reached the stretch, and came on and won by a half length. Braw Scot looked beaten, but he came again in the last hundred yards, and had Rico not swerved in front of him at the post he might have won. He was second, Montalvo third. Time, 1:33. Winner S. C. Hildreth's b g, a, by Shannon—Fannie Lewis.

The second race was at five furlongs, selling, for two-year-olds. Big Chief and Salisbury II was scratched, leaving eleven to start. Tonino was favorite of the field, Endymion and Hazard on equal terms as second choice. Mr. Caldwell sent them away at the first break. The favorite was well up in the shifting field to the stretch, then drew away and won hands down. Walter J. (20 to 1 a place) was second by two lengths, Hazard third. Time, 1:05½. Winner Santa Anita Stable's ch g, by J. H. Fenton—Lizzie B.

The third race on the original card was declared off on account of scratches. The next was at a mile, selling. Red Glenn, Duchess of Milpitas, Capt. Skedance, E. H. Sherley and Mamie Scott declined the issue, leaving eight starters. Oakley and our Maggie closed on even terms, as first choice. Dunganven was popular for awhile, but receded from want of material support. Again the field was sent off at once, Our Maggie and Schnitz first to show. The latter took the lead on the first turn and with Our Maggie for company, left the others several lengths behind. Oakley was bumped by Bell Ringer at the start. Nearing the far turn Oakley, under whip, moved up around the field and as the turn for home was made he was third and gaining on the leaders fast. Half way home Schnitz was in difficulty, and Oakley could not keep up. Garner, hand riding Our Maggie, overhauled Schnitz and won easily by a length. Oakland came from nowhere and showed a length away. Time, 1:46½. Winner D. A. Honig's ch m, 5, by Post Guard—Marguerite.

The next was a five and a half furlong dash, selling. Empress of Norfolk was scratched, leaving eight starters. Conde was installed favorite at 11 to 10 and received most liberal support. Last Chance, second choice, closed at 16 to 5. Last Chance acted badly and delayed the start several minutes, but finally the lot were sent away to a good start. Sea Spray led to the three quarter turn, then Last Chance assumed command and led to the wire, winning easily by two lengths, the favorite second, a length in front of Sea Spray. Time, 1:12. Winner ch g, 4, by Duke of Norfolk—Vidette.

The last race went to Philomena. Emma D. was backed all over the ring. She quit badly in the last sixteenth, and George Miller and Clacquer were second and third. Time, 1:10½. Winner W. B. Sink's ch f, 3, by Himyar—Last Ban. Winning jockeys were Doggett two, Chorn, Garner and Cash Sloan one each.

INGLESIDE TRACK, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 17.

Notwithstanding the threatening and stormy weather of the morning, the afternoon turned off clear, and the large number that braved what appeared would be a stormy day did not regret their trip to Ingleside. A clear sky and bright, warm sun was their reward as regards climatic conditions, and six good races, the prime motive for the trip, were witnessed. Favorites were bowled over and favorites won with enough variations to keep interest at the keenest pitch.

The race of the day was the handicap at a mile, with Vincto, Libertine, Sister Mary, Handsome and Polaski. Libertine was said to not be partial to the mud, which made it look like Vincto's race, at the weights. Vincto was at 2 to 1, closing at 2½. Handsome was next in favor, his post price being 9 to 5, Sister Mary was at 3, Libertine and Polaski 10 to 1. A perfect start was effected at the first break. Libertine, Sister Mary and Handsome made the first turn heads apart. Then Libertine drew ahead a couple of lengths from Sister Mary. Macklin held his mount well in hand, keeping an eye on the bay mare. The other three had fallen back, Vincto in fourth place, but on the turn nearing the stretch Tod brought the Brutus colt up third, hugging the rail. The leaders swung wide and came down on the outside. Libertine held his advantage without any need of persuaders, but Sister Mary was under whip all the way through the stretch. She was two lengths behind Libertine at the wire. Vincto was third, ten lengths away. Time, 1:44. Winner J. G. Brown & Co.'s b c, 4, by Leonatus—Falaive.

The first race of the day was at six furlongs, selling. Of the eight starters Realization was an odds on favorite, Johnny Payne at 3 to 1, a heavily-played second choice. Imp. Amarino delayed the start at first, then Johnny Payne took a turn at refusing to break. Finally Payne broke in front, getting fully four lengths the best of the start, but he was immediately caught by Realization and Julia O. The three ran head and head to the stretch, Centurion next up. Amarino turned very wide while the other three held their relative positions next the rail. In the last sixteenth Julia O. began to draw away and Johnny Payne chuckled it. Julia O. was first by two lengths, imp. Amarino a head in front of Realization for the show. Time, 1:19. Winner D. A. Honig's b f, 3, by Outcast—Malva R. Julia O.'s closing price was 15 to 1, and Amarino 12 to 1 a place.

Summer Time was installed favorite of the ten two-year-olds in the second race, at five furlongs. Princess Rose II, La Vienta and Pique were on about even terms for second choice. The large field was sent away to a good start at the first break. Esel, with her usual burst of speed, was out in front at once, but Summer Time was sent after her. These two raced out by themselves till well into the stretch. The favorite held the lead from the turn for home and won easily by three lengths. Esel was half a length in front of La Viente, who came in very strong at the finish. Winner, El Primero's b f by Fitzjames—Springlike. Esel was at 20 to 1 a place.

The fourth race was another for two-year-olds at five furlongs with eleven starters. Ramiro was a hot favorite, and four or five of the others were on about even terms as second choices. There was a long delay at the start. Joan acted badly, for one, and others took their turns at it. The start was a scattering one, Wm. Pinkerton and the favorite off well in front. They raced away from the others, and none drew out to challenge them before the turn into the stretch was reached, when Grady was sent after them. Hugging the rail, he saved considerable ground, but was not equal to the task of catching them. Ramiro won easily by three lengths, Pinkerton two lengths in front of Grady. Time, 1:04½. Winner Santa Anita Stable's b c by Gano—Cuban Queen. Wm. Pinkerton was at 2 to 1 a place.

Pepper, the favorite for the fifth race, was beaten by the second choice Thornhill. Mary S. set the pace from the wire to the three-quarter pole, then Thornhill, closely followed by Pepper, moved up in front. Their positions were not changed and Thornhill was an easy winner by three lengths. Cadmus, third, was three lengths behind Pepper. Time, 2:00. Winner T. Lundy's ch h, 4, by imp. Cheviot—Phoebe Anderson.

In the last race Yemen, another favorite, was beaten three lengths in the last few yards by the second choice Sligo, after the former had made the running. Pat Murphy, third, was four lengths away. Time, 1:17½. Winner S. C. Hildreth's b g, 5, by imp. Mr. Pickwick—Henlopen. Garner, T. Sloan, Macklin, Chorn, Coady and Doggett each had a winning mount to-day.

INGLESIDE TRACK—WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 18.

The cold, forbidding aspect of the weather did not have a very noticeable effect on the attendance of the ladies to-day. There were a large number present, and they talked horse and backed their preferences with the sang froid of an old-timer. When the first race was called the crowd in the grandstand looked very light compared with the preceding ladies' days, but early in the afternoon it was comfortably filled. The ring below was a scene of bustling activity, and elbowing sideways was about the only way of making progress. Twenty-one books cut in for the next three days, and all were kept busy.

Favorites and second choices divided honors, but the books were hit pretty hard.

Adolph Spreckels, a second choice at 3 to 1, won the opening dash, for two-year-olds at five furlongs. The favorite Mt. McGregor, Piexotto and Hazard were prominent in the running till well into the stretch. Adolph Spreckels was about fourth most of the journey. Piexotto, backed up after the turn for home was made, and just when the race looked to be between Hazard and Mt. McGregor, Adolph Spreckels came up with a rush and won by one length. Hazard, second, was a length in front of Mt. McGregor. Time, 1:05½. Winner E. Corrigan's b c by Longfellow—Jennie Treacy.

Oregon Eclipse, the favorite in the second race, at six furlongs, got off well, but was beaten before the stretch was reached. Montana had declined to break and after some delay the field was sent away strung out badly, Montana among the last ones, and off his stride. He got half way through the bunch before the stretch was reached and after turning wide made for the rail and came fast. But over on the outside were George Miller, Highland and Carmel and all finished in front of him as named half lengths apart. Time, 1:18½. Winner W. L. Stanfield's b g, 5, by Loftin—Emma. George Miller's closing price was 3 to 1, Highland's 4 to 1 and Carmel's 50 to 1.

The third race was at a mile, with six starters. Jack Richelieu, Moderocio and Olivia having been scratched, Santiago and Sister Mary were coupled in the betting at 1 to 4. The others were from 10 to 30 to 1. Sister Mary took the rail on the first turn and held it without any difficulty, came into the stretch with a good lead, and won easily by two lengths. Roma had kept her company, but when Sister Mary swung wide coming home Roma saved distance and hugged the rail. Pescador made a spurt on the backstretch, and Navy Blue came up strong for a few yards after the turn was made, but died away again. Santiago passed him and finished third. Dunganven was hopelessly out of it before the quarterpole was reached. Time, 1:47. Winner W. B. Sink's h m, 5, by imp. Woodlands—Sister Roma was at 4 to 1 a place.

The fourth race was at six furlongs. Shield Bearer and Detective were installed even-term favorites, at 11 to 5. The former receded to threes, while the latter was backed down to 9 to 5. Collins was at 6 to 1, and proved the winner. Mr. Caldwell sent them away to as bad a start as was possible. They came up joggling and down went his flag, and away went the field scattered out, fifteen lengths between first and last horses. Shield Bearer was in front and staved there till out-run on the post by Collins. Julia O. got the show from Detective, who got off among the last ones, but came strong at the finish. Time 1:19. Winner Dr. H. E. Rowell's b r g, 3, by Inspector B—Piazza.

The last two races were at a mile and a sixteenth, over four hurdles. The first division had Malo Diablo as favorite, who was heavily played. He struck the first hurdle and threw his rider. Bell Ringer had been taken out in front at the start, but Rob Roy came up to him after the third jump. The last hurdle was cleared together, but from there Rob Roy won as he pleased, Bell Ringer's heavy weight telling on him after having made the running. Little Mid was third. Time, 2:03½. Winner Thos. Finn's b g, 3, by Robson—Green Leaf.

J. O. C. was favorite in the second division and won handsily from Nellie G., who was at 4 to 1 for place, with Alexis third. Soon Enough and Wag fell at the last jump. Time 2:05½. Winner Elkton Stable's ch g, 3, by Apache—Irene. Winning jockeys were Bergea, Cochran, Doggett, Chorn Finn and Hennessy.

INGLESIDE TRACK, THURSDAY, DECEMBER.

The attention of the day was the last number on the programme—an owners' handicap, at six furlongs, for gentlemen riders, minimum weight to be 145 lbs. Although not previously announced, the event was decided in two heats, S. Talbot Clifton winning the first one, hands down, amid the most tumultuous applause. After the preceding race had been run, a rush was made to the paddock and the horses that were to sport silk for the "400" were critically eyed as they were brought in from a warming-up gallop, and the riders also came in for a close inspection. Form was at a discount on such an event and Barney Schreiber left his block and went out and asked the rider of his horse if he was going to win. Not much book was made on the race. It was a foregone conclusion to the talent, and the bookmakers thought so, too. Then came the signal to mount. Jack Dinne treated the frequenters of the paddock to a severe shock—he went along from box to box, and in his sweetest tones said: "Please mount now, gentlemen." As each rider passed the stand he received an ovation. Arriving at the post Mr. Caldwell was found resting his chin on his hand, and with a very serene, patient look on his face. The aspirant for pigskin honors jerked and rushed their studs around and several good starts were imminent, but for the fact there seemed a lack of understanding as to which way of the course the race was to be run. At last came a cry from four or five thousand throats "They're off!" Some of the riders appeared in doubt about it, and reined up, while others were going like mad. Lord Clifton and his new horse, Johnny Payne, were of the latter. He had heard the cry "They're off!" but the low murmur of disappointment because it was not a go did not reach him. All he heard was scampering hoofbeats behind him, and he kept going. One by one his followers pulled up, as they learned their mistake, but not so with Johnny Payne and his titled master. They were after the silver cup, offered as a trophy to the victorious rider, and they kept going. It was a beautiful race. His lordship was riding at his best, and though his straining ear no longer heard the echoing splashes in the mud he could not afford to slow up, as his horse was carrying top weight, and he wanted to open up that gap as the others could not overcome. His gaily be-ribboned cap flew off, but that was a mere trifle, and he kept on his mad career and turned into the stretch leading by—three eighths of a mile! As he looked up to see how far it was to the wire his eye caught a mass of assembled colors over at the quarter-pole. Then he realized that he had been the only one in it. Johnny Payne has run the course by himself before so he did not mind it, but as J. Talbot passed the stand on his second trip to the post he tried to look as though he knew all about it, and gracefully acknowledged the plaudits that rang out after him.

The next heat was won by Ferrier, with a whole lot left, while Service, ridden by Mr. Simpkins, came very fast and nipped the place from Philomena, whom Mr. Sink thought was very safe for it. The riders came in for a lot of applause as they returned to the start.

Ferrier was installed favorite at 4 to 5, but he looked high in flesh and a play was made on Philomena at odds of 2 to 1. Service was supported by a few, as well as Oregon Eclipse. The others were at long prices, Johnny Payne 200 to 1 after his run.

A silver cup, valued at $200, was presented to Mr. Hobart, rider of the winning horse, by the Jockey Club.

The enthusiasm over the event was at a high pitch all the time, and vociferous applause made the rafters of the grandstand ring.

It looked as though it was a bad mistake to put this interesting number last on the card, and no doubt was the cause of the comparatively light attendance of the fair sex, as the running off of the race was not accomplished till after 5 o'clock, and at that hour these days the trip homeward is a very cold one.

The sport of the day opened with a mile race, with eight starters. Candor was favorite at 9 to 5, Minnie Cee at 3½ and White Stone 4½ to 1. The others were from 10 to 15 to 1. At a false break Candor was bumped and Macklin tumbled flat into the black mud. The field was sent away at the next break to a perfect start. A hot rush was made for the rail at the turn, and secured by Candor, Ike L. and Minnie Cee alongside. Candor tired on the turn into the stretch and Minnie Cee and Ike L. had a drive to the wire, the former winning handsily by three lengths, Fi Fi third, five lengths away. Time, 1:50½. Winner D. A. Honig's ch m, 6, by Plenipo—Jaconet.

Caliente closed favorite for the two-year-old race, at six furlongs, though having receded a couple of points from opening price. Yankee Doodle was the recipient of warm support on the rumor that Ed Purser was backing him, and went down from 8 to 4 to 1. Theresia and Toneno closed at about the same figures. The others were from 10 to 100 to 1. A straggling start was the order, with Doubtful and Walter J. out in front. They raced along together all the way, Caliente third. In the last sixteenth Walter J. tired, Doubtful won by three lengths easily, and Caliente beat Walter J. a head for the place. Time, 1:19½. Winner L. Ezell's ch g, by Doubtful—Natchitoches.

The third race was at a mile, a division of the first event. Gallant was installed favorite, with Mary S. played into second choice. The balance of the field of seven receded in the betting. The favorite sulked and refused to break, but on three or four occasions when he was ready Tod Sloan, on Mary S., and Cochran, on Montalvo, spoiled good starts by refusing them. After the race they were set down indefinitely. In the end off Gallant got away last. Mamie Scott and Mary S. showed the way with Montalvo close up. On the backstretch Braw Scot and Gallant moved up very fast. On the turn Mamie Scott chuckled it and Mary S. and Montalvo came into the stretch together, with Gallant crowding. Mary S. slowed up a trifle in the stretch, but at just the right moment she was sent along again and came with enough speed to overhaul Montalvo and win from him by a head, Gallant third by half a length. It was a desperate finish and was roundly applauded. Time, 1:47½. Winner J. H. McEvoy's b m, 5, by Duke of Montrose—Ocean Wave.

Sir Play, favorite at the close of the betting, won all the way from Potentate in the fourth race, which was at six furlongs. The latter was a well supported second choice, even ruling at the shorter price at one time. Can't Dance was on even terms with Potentate at the close. Sir Play, Potentate, Can't Dance, Zobair and Quirt was the order of the race, Can't Dance getting the place from Potentate, who swerved badly in the stretch. Two lengths separated the first three horses. Time, 1:17. Winner, G. B. Morris & Co.'s b g, 2, by Sir Modred—Plaything.

Ten starters went to the post for the fifth race. Montana was an 8 to 5 favorite, Sligo at 2 and Last Chance 6 to 1. The others ranged from 20 to 100 to 1 in the closing betting. Montana sulked at the post and in several breaks Ivy, Sherley and Pecksniff were prominent. Montana got off in the ruck, with Ivy, Sligo and Pecksniff in the front of the line. Montana was mowing down his field before the half pole was reached, and then it was all over. Ivy dropped back to fifth, but came again in the stretch and nipped the place from Sligo. Montana won by four lengths. Time, 1:18½. Winner, J. P. Woolman's b h, a, by Storey—Uga.

Jockeyship honors were divided between Garner and Tod Sloan, with two winning mounts each. McHugh won the remaining, and Mr. Hobart rode the winner of the gentlemen's race.

A CALL has been sent out for a meeting at Indianapolis, January 7, to arrange a circuit of running race meetings for June and July next year. The movement started with the Fair Association in this city, which has decided to give a running meeting instead of a trotting meeting, leaving the trotting field alone to the trotting association. The purpose is to organize a circuit, with from six to ten cities in this State, Ohio and Michigan.

THURSDAY one of the ladies in the grandstand plunged a dollar's worth on Hy Dy. He was a stranger to her. When the horses came to the post she picked him out by the programme number, then turned to her companion and said: "For Heaven's sake, look at the horse we bet on!" Hy Dy's not much for beauty, especially when he has his tail done up in curl papers.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

TATTERSALL'S EVIDENCE.—In 1844 the English House of Commons appointed a committee to take evidence on the subject of racing, and among other prominent men who appeared before it was Mr. Tattersall, and a part of his testimony was: "In Germany they run for good stakes or they could not afford to give such good prices. In America they run for larger sums than we do. This year a produce stake came off of one thousand pounds (not dollars) each, 220 pounds forfeit, thirty subscribers; I sent a mare over to a friend, her produce ran second. The winner was by an English stallion. They have given large sums for stallions that have won great races. I gave for Priam, to go to America, 3,600 guineas; and Mr. Batson refused, at my table, 5,000 guineas for Plenipotentiary, or 1,000 pounds a year as long as the horse lived, which he nobly refused—not for fear of the money for I would have been answerable. At that time one firm in America owed me upwards of 3,000 pounds. I paid for the same people more than 2,000 pounds for insurance of horses alone. Would they have done that unless the horses had distinguished themselves? They were most noble buyers. My orders were almost unlimited. They trusted to me, and all the best racehorses, now in America, are by English horses. Whenever racing is done away with, there is an end to the noble animal, the manly sport, and to your humble servant."

It was not done away with and it is far from likely that it will in that country notwithstanding the yelping kept up by a few who would fain stop all kinds of recreation except what they fancied.

"Compounding sins they are inclined to,
By damning those they have no mind to."

There is greater danger in this country though I am strong in the belief that good sense will prevail and the "manly sport" be preserved.

STONEHENGE ON THE HACK.—It appears that some who have more than a passing fancy for the hackney feel aggrieved over what I have written in relation to these horses. But with all their irascibility there does not seem to be any attempt to show that hackneys are different from what I have described them, or to prove by argument and illustrations that the breed is superior in any respect to American trotters. It is true that "Benédict" claimed in his article in The Overland, and that reproduced in pamphlet form, and disseminated from the rooms of the Horse Show Association, that the ratio of prizes would be as fifty to one in favor of hackneys, and the editor of the Rider and Driver made a general charge that trotting-bred horses had nearly all the faults that a harness horse can possess. The first statement has been shown to be utterly at variance with truth by the awards at the New York Horse Show, the other is a mere assertion without a shadow of proof to sustain it.

One of the best English writers on the horse, very many critics place him at the head of all others as a general writer, one who had a full understanding of the subject in all of its various phases, J. H. Walsh, F. R. C. S., and editor of the Field, better known, perhaps, by the pseudonym of "Stonehenge." His most voluminous work—over 600 pages—is "The Horse in the Stable and the Field, His Varieties, etc." Very elaborate his description of the various horses of all countries being pictured. Apart from thoroughbreds he classes the English horses thus: "The half-bred hunter; the Irish hunter; the charger; the covert, road and park hack; the ladies' horse; c b's, Galloways and ponies; the carriage, brougham or cabriolet horse; the heavy machiner; the phaeton horse; the gigster, or fast trotter."

It will be sufficient for my present purpose to copy what he writes about hacks, cobs and trotters, though it is evident that even so short a time ago as 1860, when the book was published, hackney was not used to designate any particular breed.

"By the word hack is understood a horse specially intended for the saddle, and to be used on some kind of road, which may be the cross-roads in the way to covert, or the ordinary turnpike, or, lastly, the loose gravelly roads of our parks. The same class of animals is used in all, but there are some slight differences between the three kinds, as we shall presently see, corresponding with the purposes for which they are severally used."

Neither covert, road or park-hack will answer for harness comparison, though the animals described had a great deal of thoroughbred blood, and from Stonehenge's description could have been made to trot fast, for their size, had the advantages of an American education been awarded them. Another section of the descriptions reads as follows: "About four-hands is the best average size for these hacks (covert) whatever the rider may be, he may be blood like, or even quite thoroughbred, if he can be obtained of that breed of sufficient action. Most covert-hacks, however, are under sized hunters, the produce of mares intended to breed something more valuable for the market; but not growing into the contemplated proportions, the breeder is obliged to sell them as hacks; and when fast and clever enough, they are devoted to the purpose now under consideration. Action is the main point; not too high, so as to throw time and space away, but a fast-stealing away kind of style, which goes over the ground without distressing horse or rider."

Previous to the matter copied it is stated: "If he is a perfect covert-hack he will creep or jump in hand, or get across the country in some way, according to the weight he has to carry; and he should therefore be a miniature hunter, with the additional requisite of being a good hack on the road."

"The road-hack varies from the foregoing in being necessarily more of a trotter than a galloper, inasmuch as he is intended for use on macadamized roads, many of which are made of granite or flint, and are, therefore, as hard as iron. To gallop much on such a surface is to lame your hack, and even a fast trot is not to be indulged in for any distance, or on successive days, for fear of the same results. The Americans drive their trotters in their own country, and do not ride them, by which a faster pace may be obtained without in jury; but in England the roads being so much harder, soon compel a moderation of the fast trot, even in the imported horses, whose legs and feet are undoubtedly very sound and good, but still not capable of sustaining the wear and tear of granite roads at the rate of sixteen miles an hour."

"The park-hack should be the road-hack I have described with the most showy form within reach; but as this last is the point which is the most attended to, an animal is often selected of the most worthless kind in other particulars, either from some deficiency of constitution or uniformity of legs."

"The cob is merely a thick and strongly-made hack about fourteen hands in height, and suited to carry from fifteen to twenty stone. All the points are therefore such as are required in the ordinary hack, but they must be strong in proportion to the weight to be carried. The twenty stone cob is, in fact, a compact and active little cart-horse, with cannon bones as large as in that variety, and generally with the same tendency to throw out bony growths."

"Between the Norfolk and American trotters, which may be taken as the types of trotting developed in the horse, there is a very considerable difference. I have already described the latter, but it remains for me to say a few words about his English rival."

In both there must be a considerable infusion of Eastern blood, not for the purpose of giving pace, but endurance. Many a low-bred animal can trot a mile in pretty fair time, but he cannot keep his pace up; and indeed when very fast time is to be made, as, for instance, what the Americans call "low down in the two thirties, that is, a mile in little over two and a half minutes, blood is almost equally in demand for that distance as for a longer, and the distress is nearly as great as in running a mile over the flat at Newmarket. Norfolk has long been celebrated for her breed of trotters, and these are still in demand for our gigs and phaetons, but their trot is not soft enough to make them desirable hacks, and they are little used for that purpose. * * * The foot is not thrust forward so much as in the American, either before or behind, and hence there is more time lost in each step."

In British Rural Sports, Stonehenge, there are additional accounts, and I was in error in stating that the work already quoted from was the most voluminous of the books of Mr. Walsh. B. R. S. is smaller in the size of page but that is double column, with smaller type and 700 pages. It preceded the other, having been published in 1856, and as its name implies, embraces all the field sports of England. The descriptions differ so little from those heretofore given that it is unnecessary to repeat them, and it is plainly apparent that the English hack is not a very desirable animal to improve American horses of any description.

It is also evident that at the time Stonehenge wrote there was no breed called hackneys, though it may be that the rough-gaited ones which were unfitted for saddle obtained the name, very likely that it was applied in some districts before the date of the volumes. That the Norfolk trotter prevailed in the combination of blood which forms the hackney is more than probable, though I have seen a genealogical tree, published, I think, in the Rider and Driver, which gave Arabs the credit of founding the family. The Norfolk Phenomenon was among the most noted of the tribe. Not very handsome, but a "good goer" and highly prized by his owner, Mr. Theobald, who had the honor of also owning the "Emperor of stallions," the peerless Stockwell. That imported Bellfounder was a Norfolk on the side of his sire is admitted and there is good authority, that of Samuel Jaques, that his dam was a thoroughbred mare. As the sire of the dam of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, Bellfounder is entitled to a place among the noted progenitors of famous horses, and he had one son who figures in trotting pedigrees.

When we class the hackneys of the present day with the "gigsters" of England it gives them better claims for consideration than any of these classes of hacks which Stonehenge pictures.

The high-stepping park-hack may have been mixed with Norfolk trotting strains so as to intensify the higher action of Norfolk trotters than the Americans, but then it is shown that those which were adapted for Rotten Row were not of any particular line, selected mainly for their "showiness." Stonehenge, however, gives such an account of their variations that where one might be useful in other fields than the "soft graveled roads of our parks," a majority are unfitted for general uses.

As Bellfounder is such a prominent factor in our fastest trotters, the union of his blood and several strains of Messenger resulting in a horse which, above all others, can be called the patriarch of fast harness horses, it may be that a hackney of similar breeding, that is, plenty of "blood" on the side of his dam, could be successfully used on a trotting stud farm. Experiments are valuable. Failures may teach a better system than has been originally pursued.

High steppers even might be used when there is a deficiency of action, though I should prefer in such a case a horse which had "reach" as well. The high steppers I saw at the Horse Show did not possess this essential, in my estimation, and could be classed the same as Dr. Samuel Johnson did a member of a club who had such an exuberance of speech that no business could be done, and an exuberance of action no speed. High hock-action is worse than an excess of knee action when speed is the object, and is far different from the one embalmed in an old English song:

"I ride as good a trotting horse as any in the town;
He'll trot you sixteen miles within the hour, I'll wager fifty crown.
He gathers up his knees so smart and tucks his haunches in"

is all that I can remember, but that is a better description of a fast trotting gait than if hocks were lifted high in place of "tucks his haunches in." The idea that hackneys are superior in endurance to trotting-bred, as was claimed here for a time, has been completely exploded.

I have a trotting-bred horse by Antevolo, his dam by Rustic, a son of Whipple's Hambletonian, which I loaned to go to the Silver Bow Farm near Milpitas. He made the journey to a heavy cart with two men in it in one day, and came home as lively as he started, was their report. "Fitting up" the distance, it was found to be fully eighty miles, and the only preparation was jiggling on the streets an hour or so each day. With proper conditioning it would seem that one hundred miles would be easily done in the same time. The party who made the trip did not think it was nearly so far. The start was made early in the morning and several hours spent at the ranch. He did not show any "soreness" the day following the trip, though he was not driven, but on the next he had his usual exercise and appeared as well as he ever was. That long journey may be termed accidental, for if the distance had been known beforehand, two days would have been occupied in the trip.

BETTING PRIVILEGES AT THE STATE FAIR.—In a late number of The Horseman, George Rose has an article which is "A Bookmaker's View." A very readable communication and quite fair, though in the paragraph giving the account of his purchase of the privileges, there is not a full enough account to give a proper understanding. He states he paid $16,100, but does not give an inkling of the result as to profit and loss. This could not be expected, especially if the prevailing impressions be correct that his venture was exceedingly fortunate.

When it was announced that so large a sum had been paid, nearly $6,000 more than the sum derived from pool-privileges in 1894, with a still larger difference in 1895, so far as the money return went it seemed to be a wise move on the part of the society.

I thought at the time and still adhere to the opinion that the admission of book-making at the State Fair was a mistake, and since I have learned that five per cent was charged on auction pools, and the books, of course, under the control of one man, the amount received was nothing like a full compensation for the privileges granted. For instance, when $10,315 was the portion of the percentage paid by the pool-seller the rate on auction pools was three per cent, on mutuels five.

Had that on the auction pools been raised to five per cent, and an increase on the mutuels sufficient to make an equivalent of five per cent. on all, $17,191 would have been the share of the society. But the books, without competition, the percentage in their favor would be as much as the bettors would stand, and I am informed by a bookmaker that it was, to use his expression, "the —at cinch I ever saw."

That was all right on the part of Mr. Rose. "Business," "all that the traffic would bear," and with this addition that very few knew anything about the odds they were "bucking against."

They had gone to Sacramento to wager, that is the betting contingent, the five per cent. in the auctions was apparent, and they would not suffer such flagrant robbery, thirty, forty or fifty per cent. in the books was beyond their arithmetical capacity, and hence they turned with indignation from the auctioneer and put their dollars on at the odds chalked on the board.

Then, too, he was wise in throwing out the mutuels. One sentence of his communication in The Horseman reads: "It was an intelligent public, too, and demonstrated in many ways that bookmaking was preferable to the old-fashioned Paris mutuel system."

As he did not give a chance for comparison, on what data does he award the preference? The interdict on mutuels compelled the small bettors to go to the books, and had the auctions been also thrown out, how triumphantly he could declare that auctions and mutuels had both been vanquished.

I would like to see a fair test made, and at the State Fair of '96, should the same arrangement prevail, put a prominent sign over the auctioneer five per cent. commission, and at the head of every board, when the opening odds are marked, give the percentage in favor of the book. Even then few would be guided by the rates when every hook had the same figures. The average bettor puts his money up without nice calculation. "What is the difference? if I win that ends it, if I lose, the money is gone, whether the odds are on or over so much against."

I have small sympathy for losers at the game which is so much in favor of those who take the other side. When "the pull" is of such exceeding strength as to give one man a monopoly of the business, it does not require a very powerful intellect to discover the advantage he has, and as it is of their own free will that the venture is accepted, all the grumbling about "cinch books" and "copper-fastened odds" is childish repinings.

Mr. Rose, in his article in The Horseman, gives some very good advice to those who are engaged in bookmaking, or who have a fancy to join the fraternity, but that is all on one side. Were many bookmakers as capable as the author, the backers' chances would be that much smaller, the big hits of plungers of less frequent occurrence, and long odds on a good thing unknown. Not quite in accordance, however, with a part of the history of book-betting, as the two most successful "bookies" of the past or present pursued a contrary course from that advised. These two "old" Crockford and "Leviathan" Davis whose books were never full. Crockford died worth several millions of dollars, and though Davis gave to one man a check for $150,000, winnings on one race, it left a "bank-roll" of mammoth proportions. The article would have been still more complete had there been a little advice to backers of horses.

A bookmaker has better opportunities for obtaining knowledge than a layman, but apart from an anecdote of a man who insisted on securing a nickel he was entitled to, an example which carries a good lesson, there is nothing to guide the neophyte. I would not proffer the same counsel as that of the man who claimed to have discovered an infallible method of "beating the bank" (faro) and when pressed for the recipe answered "don't play against it."

As I have oftentimes stated, men are gambling animals; were that passion completely eradicated there would be an end to progress. When the propensity does not become a passion it is of value, and even betting on races has claims for consideration. It adds to the interest of the contests, as the most violent opponent of wagering will look at a race with enhanced attention when he is aware that a good deal of money is depending, outside of the main stakes. It adds to the revenues, enabling associations to "hang up" more money, and this increases the emoluments of breeders and all who are connected with the business.

In place of proffering advice of my own, I will report what I heard Mr. Robert A. Alexander say over thirty years ago:

"Very many times," said Mr. A., "I have been solicited to give my opinion about betting on races, and under the following conditions can see no harm in the practice: Let the man who proposes to bet set aside the sum he can well afford to lose, and not exceed it whatever the inducements are. Better yet to divide it into three parts and hazard only one of them on one race. That will enhance the pleasure of the bettor; if he loses, he has two-thirds of the capital left; if he wins, in place of repining at his lack of confidence and faintness of heart, he can console himself with having displayed sound discretion, followed business methods by not placing all of his eggs in one basket, and that to be carried in a vehicle which was likely to be upset."

TURF AND TRACK

THE SULKY.

HORSEMEN are enthusiastic about holding the convention.

THE great mare Hulda, 2:08½, has been turned out for the winter.

GEORGE STARR will probably handle Fillmore, 2:21½, next year.

MONROE SALISBURY is expected in this city from New York to-day.

"THE AUTOCAR" is the best name yet proposed for the horseless carriage.

ANDY McDOWELL is getting a string of trotters and pacers together at Pleasanton.

RANCHO DEL PASO will be well represented at the trotting meeting to be given next year, so will the Aptos Stock Farm.

JOHN DICKERSON bade the San Mateo Stock Farm people good-bye last Saturday. He will proceed directly to Terre Haute.

CAPT. MILLEN GRIFFITHS, owner of Flying Jib, the phenomenal pacing gelding, has recently purchased a number of thoroughbreds.

WHEN Wm. Rysdyk bought the Charles Kent mare and her colt, he gave his note for $100 and $25 in cash, that being the purchase price.

THE trotter is purely an American product, but his usefulness is known to all civilized people. He is becoming a favorite in Europe, Asia and Africa.

EVERY trotting horseman who has seen the track at Ingleside longs for the time when it can be used for a trotting meeting. The course suits them.

It is claimed that Miss Russell and Nutwood are the oldest mother and son in the horse family living, they being respectively thirty and twenty-five years.

THE pet at Prospect Hill Farm is a grand weanling by Electric Bell (full brother to Chimes, St. Bel, Bell Boy, etc.), out of a sister to Baron Rogers, 2:11½.

P. J. MANN has placed his yearling filly, a full sister to Trumont, 2:21½, in the hands of Chas. Woods at Irvington to be worked for the Witch Hazel stake.

THERE is a two-year old filly at the San Mateo Stock Farm sired by Regal Wilkes, 2:11½, out of Mamie Kohl, by Steinway, 2:25½, that is the making of a crackjack.

THE Starboul filly Carrie C., which took a three-year-old record of 2:21½ the past season, is out of Sadie McGregor, sister of Silver Bow, 2:16, by Robert McGregor.

QUARTERSTRETCH, by Quartermaster, trotted two miles in 4:36, over the Vienna (Austria) trotting track a few weeks ago. This is the record for that distance in Europe.

WHEN Guy Wilkes won his record of 2:15½ in the fourth heat of a race he weighed 1,250 pounds, and had never been driven a mile for months previous to that day faster than four minutes.

SAM CATON, the Michigan driver, has shaken the dust of this country from his feet, and is now bound for Russia to join his brother Frank and drive trotters for a Russian horseman.

JAMES W. REA, of the Vendome Stock Farm, has hooked his two favorite mares, Nettie Nutwood (dam of Hillsdale 2:15), and Laura R, 2:21½, to that game campaigner, Boodle, 2:12½.

COPE STINSON is up to his eyes in business preparing the colts and fillies at the San Mateo Stock Farm for the next sale from this farm. If they are not first class they will not be sent East.

J. J. MONTGOMERY, of Lima, O., has started with a number of choice colts from J. C. Lineman's farm, Lima, O., for San Diego. These youngsters are by Alfonso, and will be wintered in this State.

THE New York courts have decided that the owner of a vicious animal is responsible for any harm done by it, and awarded heavy damages to the widow of a man killed by the kick of a vicious horse.

J. W. DALY thinks so well of Colonmore, 3, by Baron Wilkes, dam Colon, by Strathmore, who sold for $500 at the Kellogg sale, that he offers to match him for $5,000 against Rio Alto, who brought $3,300 at the same sale.

ELFRIDA, 2:13½, the fast five-year-old daughter of Candidate, sold in the New York auction ring last year and supposed to be practically broken down, stepped a mile in 2:08 this year to skeleton bicycle wagon, after she had been shod under the supervision of Robert Bonner.

IN the recent Horse Show, Walter S. Hohart won one championship ribbon, thirty-one blue ribbons, fifteen red, eighteen white and five yellow. He has been frequently commended for his judgment and knowledge about horses, and it is well known that he does not leave the choosing of them horses to others.

THE great broodmare Daisy B., the property of Dr. W. P. Harriman, died at Pilot Grove, Mo., last Wednesday, from running a paling into her side. Daisy B. was sired by Administrator, 357, son of Hambletonian 10. She was the dam of Ashland Wilkes, with a mark 2:17½. Ashland Wilkes was the sire of John R. Gen'ry. Daisy B. was twenty-one years old and leaves two valued colts, one a yearling and the other a weanling.

THE Park Commissioners the past week let the contract for the completion of the great highway from the Cliff House to Lake Merced, three miles. For two miles of this distance the foundation of rough stone has already been put in place. The other mile is still nothing but sand. The contract provides for a road through this forty feet wide; to have eight inches of rough stone rolled smooth and over the whole distance of three miles a top dressing of two inches of crushed red rock.

As there will be no race meetings at the tracks devoted to thoroughbreds in the vicinity of San Francisco after the 15th of June and the large number of Eastern horsemen here have determined to remain in California, the prospects for good trotting meetings in California which will be well attended are getting brighter every day.

G. L. TAFT's stallion Lash 27956, by Whips, out of Rosaline, by Liberty Sontag, second dam Ramona, by Bentonian, is being wintered by James Brockaway at Tacoma, Wash. Lash is a typical Electioneer in form, and is a line trotter with plenty of finish. This colt, with his giltedge breeding, should make a trotter. Mr. Taft is going to race him next season.

J. J. ASTOR sold out his Rhinecliff stud horses by auction last week in New York, and realized low prices. The stock was principally half-bred Hackneys. The highest price was for a six-year-old mare by Fashion, in foal to the prize winner Matchless of Londesboro, $200, and the lowest was $15, the first bid made by an incautious dealer. Eleven head brought $800.

LAST week T. J. Crowley sent his two pacers, Algregon and Ed. Laferty, to Oakwood Park Stock Farm for the winter where they will be well taken care of preparatory to next summer's campaign, and what low marks they are sure to get if all conditions are favorable, would be hard to surmise, judging by their performances with the little work they had last season.

O. T. MACKEY, of New York, has sold his trotting stock, including Silicon, 2:13½; Silurian, 2:25½, full sisters by Wilton, to Mike Bowerman, Lexington, Ky. The former is in foal to Bow Bells, 2:19½, sire of Boreal, and Mike is already figuring on what royalty he will get from the photographers who are going to sell the pictures of him and the future foal as champions of the turf.

JOHN TILDEN has a couple of "sensations" out of Red Oak. One is a yearling pacer by a son of Anteeo that can step a quarter in 35 seconds with only five weeks' training. The other is the Abe Downing pacer Hastings Boy. John says this fellow can beat 2:15 now, and the way in which he worked a last half the other day in 1:03 is good proof that he has speed enough to do it.

Six hundred and forty-nine trotters and pacers are credited to Electioneer's descendants. He has 162 2:30 performers, 59 of his sons sired 376; his daughters have produced 58; 14 of his grandsons have sired 18; daughters of these sons have produced 13; sires out of seven daughters have 20; performers whose grandams are daughters 1, and other descendants 1. Last year Electioneer's total was 520.

W. E. McHENRY, the well-known horseman, who has made his headquarters in Freeport, Ill., for several years, will dispose of his string of trotters and pacers at a sale in New York city. He will no longer conduct a public training stable, as he has engaged to take charge of Monroe Salisbury's stable the coming year. It is reported that Mr. McHenry is to get $8,000 a year for his services as a driver and trainer.

DUBUQUE, Independence, Davenport, Sioux City, Freeport and Peoria were represented at the horsemen's meeting at Dubuque, Iowa, December 12. The dates for the Eastern Iowa circuit are: Dubuque, June 23 to 26; Independence, July 1 to 4; Davenport, July 8 to 11. All purses are to be $500. Pacing classes number five and trotting seven. Money winners pay 10 per cent entrance, others 5 per cent. Sioux City will hold a meeting the previous week, and if Freeport holds a meeting it will be in connection with Joliet and Peoria after the Iowa circuit.

SEVENTY-FIVE per cent of the highest class park horses in New York are by trotting-bred stallions and one-half of them are out of mares that have one or more trotting crosses in their pedigrees, says the American Sportsman. While a number of dealers refuse to say anything about the blood lines of the stock which they are placing on the market for fear of making a buyer looking for a "Ackney, don't you know," a trifle shy, there are others who come out flat-footed and state that they are the only kind which will give satisfaction and that can be bought in the hope of making a favorable impression in the show ring.

LUKE DUBOIS, of Denver, will dance one of his famous buck dances and "agitate his trillies" as only Luke can when he sees what a handsome filly he has by Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, out of Moscova, 2:23½, second dam Mosa (dam of Inland, 2:26½), by Woodford Mambrino, etc. She is a model of symmetry and when he takes her to Denver every one will want to congratulate him on his success in mating trotters. Luke is one of the "good souls" that makes everyone happy around him, and when he gets an audience like Dr. Latham, Monroe Salisbury, and Capt. Millen Griffith around him he tells tales of the frontier and stories of the track that are never forgotten.

MR. J. C. LINEMAN, who has been the most conspicuous breeder in Lima, Ohio, is now at Coronado Beach, near San Diego, for the winter. He has been out of health for a year past, but is now improving, and hopes to be in good form in the Spring. His partner, Mr. A. A. Scott, is also a horse fancier, and owns some real hot stuff that he has the nerve to develop. He owns Antennette, 2:30, by Anteros. She was bred for three years to Alfonso, 2:29½. Last year she was taken up late, but went miles in 2:25. Mr. Scott is now having her jogged, and next season will campaign her. She is thought to be a sure candidate for the 2:15 class. He also owns Alcantara, by Alcantara. She has a three-year-old mark of 2:39½, but could beat 2:30 this fall. Mr. Scott's driver, Vanness Ruth, thinks she will be faster than Antennette.

L. G. POWELL, of North Yakima, is in Pendleton for the purpose of purchasing eight or ten cars of hogs to ship to Montana markets. He will dispose of them at Helena and Butte, says the East Oregonian. Mr. Powell is associated with his brother in shipping horses to Honolulu, and they have been engaged in this business for the past ten years. An average of 500 horses per year has been sent by them to Honolulu and other towns of the Sandwich islands, making a total of about 5,000 animals they have sold to the Kanakas. No large shipments are made, usually one or two cars at a time, but they keep them going steadily, and have a regular business worked up among the islanders. These horses are mostly sold to the planters, whose lands are too valuable for sugar cane and such products to allow the raising of hay and feed necessary in raising horses by breeding.

It would not be surprising if the grandly-bred, game racing stallion Silver Bow, 2:16, would be seen in the stud at Palo Alto next year. He would be a most valuable acquisition to the stock there. He is by Robert McGregor, 2:17½, "the monarch of the homestretch," out of Sadie (grandam of Carrie C., 2:21½), by Hambletonian 10; second dam Lady Wynne, by Wm. Welch, son of Hambletonian 10; third dam Eleanor Margrave, by imp. Margrave, and so on to the seventeenth dam, The Royal Mare. Robert McGregor, 2:17½, is by Major Elsal, 2:29, out of Nancy Whitman, 2:30½, by American Star 14; third dam Nance (dam of Madeline, 2:23½), by Durlands' Young Messenger Duroc (thoroughbred). Major Edsall was by Alexander's Abdallah, out of a mare by Harris' Hambletonian. There are few better models of a trotting horse than Silver Bow, and he transmits his excellent qualities to his progeny in a remarkable degree. It is hoped this rumor about his going to Palo Alto is well founded for no better stallion could be procured.

MONROE SALISBURY recently said that he did not think his campaigning stable would contain any more two-year-olds, as the hard racing some of the youngsters are liable to be subjected to might spoil the making of a good horse. His opinion is identical to the one expressed by C. J. Hamlin more than a year ago. While it is true that neither has had a taste of the victories won by colts in any of the big Eastern stakes, experience has taught them that possible champions can be easily ruined for life by too much racing in their two-year-old forms. When Mr. Hamlin took his stand against racing two-year-olds, it was said that the material to make a good showing in the races for juveniles was lacking in the Village Farm stable. Such was not a fact, however. On many occasions John Bradburn has found almost sensational speed in a full bunch of two-year-olds at Village Farm. These would be shown to Mr. Hamlin, and after he had found that they possessed great speed he ordered that they be sent to the brood mare barn to be bred. Sometimes a full dozen of the most beautiful fillies on the farm would be included. A few of them have since been seen on the turf, and more of them will be trained later on.

HORSEMEN and track managers are in partnership to all intents and purposes. That which works injury to one partner cannot substantially and permanently benefit the other. These facts should be kept in mind at all times. There is no need for serious family quarrels, and there will be no unsatisfactory misunderstandings if the hotheads are either gagged or disregarded. Campaigners have done business with track managers on an extensive scale for a quarter of a century, and have become involved in but few suits at law, which is pretty fair evidence that they understand one another. Just at present, which is apparent to everybody, there is a tangle, due to the forfeit system, but it will be straightened out at the proper time, and unless the signs of the times are all awry, in a manner satisfactory to horsemen. No association will hold a man down because he was so unfortunate as to slip and fall, and in the end the muddle ensuing for the follies of 1895 will be cleared. Campaigners will go on campaigning, track gates will be thrown open annually, much the same as if nothing had ever happened to make trouble, and the rules for racing, with the exception of a few amendments, will remain intact and will prove entirely satisfactory save to a few who do not know what they want, and would be at a loss as to what to do with it if they had it.

THROUGH Philip Hexsmer, Hoboken, N. J., W. R. Janvier has sold the stallion Alcandre 6850 to Count Adolphe Gyulai de Maros Nemeth et Nedaska, Vienna, Austria, for $8,000, and he was shipped from New York Dec. 7. Alcandre is without doubt a grand specimen individually as can be found in America—stands sixteen hands, and is a model horse at every point. His sire, Alcyone, himself a handsome horse, was, opportunity considered, by far the greatest speed sire ever produced. Out of about 100 foals, fifty-six of his get are in the 2:30 list, seventeen in the 2:20 list, eleven in the 2:15 list, and two in the 2:10 list. Alcandre's dam, Lady Carr, by American Clay, has four in the 2:30 list, and six producing sons and daughters, ranking her among the best of the great producing mares. Prior to Mr. Janvier's purchase of Alcandre, he had no opportunity, and had but a limited number of colts, and these in unappreciative hands. Since Mr. Janvier's ownership, however, he has made three seasons, and been given a first-class opportunity; especially the last season, when there were bred to him seventy-five mares in all, among them twenty producing mares—five of whom have produced trotters from 2:10 to 2:12½. His colts have the finish of their sire and great speed promise, and few sires are better calculated to improve the stock of any country.

It has generally been believed, and, indeed, has been frequently asserted in stock papers, that Mambrino Patchen was not a horse of much speed. Indeed, I have shared this idea myself. I was agreeably surprised the other day in talking to Mr. Tommy Britton, so well known as the former broodmare keeper at Glenview farm, to find that this is an error. Mr. Britton handled horses for Dr. Herr a great many years and knew Mambrino Patchen as a two-year-old and a three-year-old. At the latter age this horse could trot a 2:40 gait and could trot a mile in 2:50; he was also a very nice-gaited horse. This was a good while ago and a 2:40 gait for a three-year-old was then really fast. I am glad to assist in rescuing this fact from oblivion. It always struck me as rather singular that old Patchen, without speed himself, should have made as good a sire as he did and as great a progenitor. Dr. Herr preferred to show Mambrino Patchen out of harness because, like all very fine horses, he showed better without trappings than with them. No doubt many people supposed from the Doctor's reluctance to put Patchen in harness that it was because he could not trot, but this proves to have been an erroneous idea. Probably no horse of his day had more Messenger blood in his veins than Mambrino Patchen, and with this fact in view, it is not at all strange that his blood continues to breed on. As he was one of the soundest, healthiest and finest horses in the stud, it is but natural that in breeding to him should not have resulted in diminishing the vigor of the strain. Though not an immediate sire of extreme speed, he has proven one of the most useful horses in the stud, and probably no other animal has done as much to give form and finish as well as fine quality of bone to the trotting horse of to-day as Mambrino Patchen. Although Dr. Herr was an ardent admirer of Mambrino Patchen, he builded wiser than he knew. His blood being so intimately blended with that of George Wilkes has served to keep his memory green.—Horse Review.

THE SADDLE.

NAVY BLUE is not as good a horse as he was a month ago.

CENTURION pulled up lame and bleeding in the stretch Saturday.

TWENTY books, two field and a combination book were on Saturday.

THE starting at the Montreal ice meeting will be done by Frank Walker.

MR. G. WALBAUM intends to take a trip to California after Christmas.

COLONEL DAN BURNS has departed for a visit to his mines in Mexico.

JERRY CHORN'S endeavors to beat the flag in the fourth race Tuesday cost him $50.

OLD MARIPOSA, dam of Boulevard, is certainly in foal. She is twenty-seven years old.

BOB SMITH had a couple of mounts yesterday, one of them on Walter J., 20 to 1 a place.

JOCKEY J. OWENS, who rode Esperance on Saturday, had his first mount over the jumps.

SOME of the crack Eastern jockeys are riding unplaced more frequently than otherwise.

SLAUGHTER on Belle Boyd lost the race to Wheel of Fortune Saturday by losing the rail.

TOD SLOAN broke his record Tuesday. He had five mounts and only landed one winner.

MATTHEW DAWSON, in his time, trained six Derby winners and three Cesarewitch winners.

JOE MURPHY will be associated with John J. Carter in the judges' stand at St. Louis this year.

JOCKEY CLANCY'S ankle was sprained when Soon Enough fell with him in the hurdle race on Saturday.

CAPTAIN REES, the chestnut horse in the string of "Curly" Shields, was "fired" by Dr. Masoero Tuesday.

KATELE GRANDE, for which Charley Hughes paid $1,700 at the recent sale of the Iroquois Stable, died recently.

It is reported now that W. Clancy had a small bone in his leg broken when Soon Enough fell with him last week.

HARRY LOWDEN lost by death at Bay District on Thursday last his horse Pat Reddy. The cause of death was pneumonia.

THE book of the leading English sire, St. Simon, is full for three years to come, at 400 guineas the season, about $2,000.

ASCENSION, by imp. Australian, is dead at the Shepherd's Bush farm, near Gallatin. She was the dam of the good racehorse Ascender.

ALL the horses at Ingleside are in splendid health, and horsemen are very liberal in their praises of the stabling accommodations, etc.

THE name of Rey del Carreres, bay colt, 3, by Emperor of Norfolk—Clara D., the property of R. Croker, has been changed to Americus.

THERE is a letter in this office for a man named Covington who owned Metal and Dr. Livingston, two horses that were at the Bay District track.

THE most appropriate colors worn at the track are those that go with Joe Harvey's Wheel of Fortune—green, orange wheel on back, orange cap.

FRED MOSSAM has been put in charge of the Brookdale yearlings, thirty-one in number, and expects to get a number of stake-winners from the lot.

JOHN O'BRIEN, valet for Henry Griffin for the past four years, died on Sunday of pneumonia. The deceased was 23 years of age and a native of Boston.

JIM FLOOD won the Dry Monopole handicap, a mile and seventy yards, at New Orleans, in 1:45½. He was at 12 to 1. Booze ran second and Buckwa third.

JOHNNY HUMPHREY, who has been a heavy loser for some time past, cleaned up $10,000 last week, which put him on the sunny side of Easy street again.

TOM GRIFFIN has wired the Pacific Coast Jockey Club to reserve twelve stalls for him. Sir Vassar, Carrie M., Miss Ross and Rasper are among the horses.

DR. Garnett pulled up quite lame after his race Friday. This bay son of the Ill-Used is a very racy looking animal and should be a fair sort of selling plater.

THE inside track at Ingleside has been filled in to about the required width for the full course excepting on the quarter turn. Horses are galloped over it every day.

SALISBURY II. is the proper cognomen of Burns & Waterhouse's brown colt by Racine—Flirt. P. Daly had the call on the name for the aged son of Stonehenge—Julietta.

THE Longfellow—Modesty colt has been named Tenacity. He hung to the tail-end of the procession Friday with the tenacity of a bull pup to a root. He will improve, though.

LIGHTWEIGHT HEWITT put up a splendid ride on the Duchess of Milpitas Friday, bringing her in for place. He rode a desperate finish, worthy of more experienced jockeys.

CAPT. BEN E. HARRIS, who seems to have a failing for hair-breadth escapes from accidental death, is now nursing his face as a result of the latest mishap. He was struck across the face by a heavy piece of timber projecting over the tail-board of a wagon, and his nose and forehead were severely bruised and both eyes beautifully colored.

A NEW afternoon newspaper is about to be started in Lexington, and Byron McClelland is to be President of the publishing company. The new noted turfman was once a printer.

JOE NARVAEZ had his lip split open on Saturday when Alexis fell, necessitating the taking of a couple of stitches in it. This was Joe's first ride on the jumps, and he says it will be his last.

RILEY GRANNAN made a big winning on Rob Roy—stated to be $23,000. He got as good as 8 to 1 for considerable of his money. He was a heavy loser on the day previous to this race.

THE Kentucky Derby of 1896 promises to be one of the best races of the coming season, with Ben Brush, Applegate, First Mate, Nimrod, Captive and other good ones as prospective starters.

THE death of Dr. Kuapp leaves two vacancies to be filled on the Board of Stewards of The Jockey Club. The second is that left vacant by the refusal of Mr. A. J. Cassatt to serve after being elected.

GRIFFIN carried a piece of hose pipe Wednesday when he rode Mt. McGregor, and when the swerver began to bear out in the stretch Griffin gave him some persuasive caresses alongside the head with the rubber cudgel.

AT a meeting of the stockholders of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club, held Tuesday evening, it was decided to increase the number of directors from five to seven. Barney Schreiber and Walter S. Hobart were elected directors.

W. O'B. MACDONOUGH says that he is willing to match imp. Miss Brummel against Sallie Clicquot at six and a half furlongs, each to carry 115 pounds. He will not match Santa Bella, on account of her stake engagements.

NAMAQUAS, one of the yearlings brought here for sale by Matt Byrnes, died at Ingleside Monday morning of lung fever. The animal was sick when it arrived here and could not be saved. It was by Hyder Ali—Namonina (a full brother to New Moon).

SEA FOG, chestnut mare, foaled 1885, by Ventilator, dam Mag, by imp. Stonehenge, out of Bijou, by imp. Australian, the property of Lamasney Bros., died recently at the Lantonia race track while en route to East St. Louis. She was in foal to Tristan.

THE horses of Chris Smith, including Maid Marian, Urania and Prince Carl, will winter in Memphis. Plunger Smith has gone to New Orleans, where he will whoop 'em up in the betting ring.

LIBERTINE'S race Tuesday was not much more than a work-out for him. Macklin was looking back all the way from the half-pole, and all he tried to do was to hold the lead by a little margin.

THE lease of the Bay District track by the California Jockey Club expires on March 1st. The California Jockey Club expects to have the Oakland track in readiness by Washington's birthday.

THE Jockey Club's registrar, Mr. Underhill, has received the names and description of 600 more thoroughbred yearlings this year than last, and the time for registration has been extended to December 31st.

SUMMER TIME, the filly that was made favorite in the opening race, is the one that was the cause of Doc Street being ruled off the turf some months ago. She now runs in the colors of the El Primero Stable.

STARTER CALDWELL made two bad starts Wednesday—one of them very bad. In the latter the horses were sent away as they came up to him the first time. When the flag went down the horses were strung out like a flock of geese, and half of them were not on their stride.

MARTIN NATHANSON, who will act as clerk of the scales, and will also do the handicapping for the California Jockey Club, left for this city Monday. In all stake events, however, the handicaps will be passed upon by a committee consisting of James Burke and Trevatban, Ed. Smith and Starter Ferguson.

H. EUGENE LEIGH will have in training next year three two-year-old fillies by imp. Great Tom. Each of these youngsters is a splendid individual, and it is the opinion of good judges that barring accident they will race well in their two-year-old form. Leigh will be more than satisfied if one of the lot proves as good as Maid Marian.

FLUE broke out last Friday on the east end of the grand stand of the Brighton Beach race track at Coney Island. A brisk wind was blowing at the time, and the flames soon communicated with the stand and stables, which, with the grand stand, were destroyed, causing a loss of nearly $30,000. The horses in the stables were rescued with considerable difficulty.

NO. 1, VOLUME II of "The Form Book" has been received. It comes in smaller size, and is more convenient for the coat pocket. It covers races at St. Louis, Pimlico, Lexington and St. Asaph from the closing of Vol. V, November 10th up to November 21st. The next issue will contain charts of the local races. Form students will find these books of much value to them.

JOCKEY STANFORD was out at Ingleside Friday, with his arm in a sling. The fractured shoulder and collar bone, have knitted strong and smooth, and he anticipates no trouble whatever from that source, but at present the muscles about the elbow are contracted so that he cannot straighten his arm out. This difficulty will be overcome shortly. The successful treatment of such a case is Stanford's race, and Dr. Cohn is very much pleased over the result.

E. CORRIGAN'S Longfellow—Jennie Treacy colt, now called Adolph Spreckels, in compliment to the popular President of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club, is a very high-class two-year-old. He won cleverly Wednesday from Hazard. In their last meeting they were second and third, a length apart, and carried even weights. At that time Hazard got the worst of the start. Wednesday Hazard took on four pounds more and Adolph Spreckels twelve. Hazard had the best of the start, but was passed by the big bay quite easily, almost on the post.

SENATOR W. M. STEWART, of Nevada, has purchased a farm of several hundred acres near Leesburg, Va., to which point he will remove all of his choice mares and young things at an early date. A half-mile track will be constructed on the farm, and a skilled trainer placed in charge of the plant. Senator Stewart intends to spend all of his leisure hours on his stock farm, and devote himself to breeding trotters.

ONE argument advanced against the use of a starting machine in America is that our horses are not trained to break from a standing start and that they would never go up to the webbing. This objection is very forcibly answered whenever anything occasions a dismount at the post. Then the fields, whether two-year-olds or aged horses, stand quietly in perfect alignment. Jockeys are the ones that will need training when the machines come into use.

THE youngsters being prepared by Cope Stinson at the San Mateo Stock Farm for the great sale to take place from this farm in New York City in February, will, if no sickness occurs among them, be the best ever shipped across the continent. Mr. Corbitt will send his very best, and as the produce of Guy Wilkes have won more money in the past four years on the turf than any other stallion living or dead, there will be an active demand for the most of these.

BENJAMIN F. MILLER, a member of the firm of Winship & Miller, ice dealers of Saratoga, died in that place December 5th from consumption. Mr. Miller will be remembered by many race-goers here. He spent the winter in California two years ago, and was a frequent visitor at the track. He loved the thoroughbred and always held an interest in a few, but they were never raced under his name. His was a well-known and popular figure at the Saratoga course, and will be missed from its meetings.

CHIEF CROWLEY has begun to wage war on the poolrooms. The pretense of acting as commission men and placing the money left with them in the books at the track has been proven a mere subterfuge. As commission brokers the law could be evaded and has been, but now that the Chief has concluded to come down on the offenders they will have to close up or seek other ways of evading the letter of the law. A number of raids on poolrooms were made Monday and will probably be continued until all are closed up.

TOD SLOAN is frank, if nothing more. Last week he had a mount on Tar and Tartar. He always has a hankering for front position, and was quite en evidence with the old brown. Mr. Caldwell warned him back and he assured the starter he would not beat the flag. He did, however, and was assessed a hundred for it. When he went into the Secretary's office to settle up he said, "Well, I broke my word; I lied to him." Then he asked the starter to remit it, and sent some friends on the same errand, but without effect.

THE public is usually not slow to show its appreciation of any efforts expended for its comfort, but it is always hard to "teach an old dog new tricks." The grandstand at Ingleside is situated at such an angle from the track that every portion of the course can be seen from any position in the stand. Furthermore, the seats are arranged in tiers at such a distance above each other as to make it absolutely unnecessary for a person to rise from the seat to see the races from start to finish. Over four thousand people can sit in perfect comfort and without any craning of necks even can follow the course of the fields. Notwithstanding all this, the four thousand and over spectators in the grandstand Ladies' Day stood on their feet from bugle call to the tap of the result bell, made themselves uncomfortable, and emphasized the oft-repeated truism, "What fools these mortals be!"

It is amusing to watch and listen to the "rooters" at the termination of each race. Tuesday two gentlemen went into the grandstand together, sat down in a friendly way and kept up a general conversation while waiting for a start of the race. With the welcome cry, "They're off," each became intent on his own affairs. As the bunch swung into the stretch and a struggle seemed imminent, one of the gentlemen sprang on a seat, stooped down till his knees were bent, then as he straightened up, with his hands clenched, his arms at full length at his side, every muscle at a tension, from his mouth rolled a long-drawn-out, suppliant cry, "C-o-m-e-o-n, y-o-u-E-a-s-e-l!" Echo answered from a bench behind him, on which his friend had climbed, "Summer Time!" "C-o-m-e-o-n, E-a-s-e-l!" "Summer Time; Summer Time!" in a quick breath was the response. "I lose," dejectedly. "I win!" exultingly. Curtain till the next race.

JOCKEY BERGEN was fined $100 Tuesday by Starter Caldwell for breaking up a good start while on Johnny Payne in the first race. The erratic Johnny was away out in front when the flag fell. In the fourth Bergen had a mount on Gov. Budd. He felt disgruntled over his fine and succeeded in delaying the field at the post fully ten minutes. Mr. Caldwell then decided to further punish him, and hence he will not be allowed to ride any but the Corrigan horses for the balance of this meeting. Mr. Caldwell's rule is strict but just, as all strict rules are. He is not hasty nor does he impulsively pass judgment one moment and condone the offense the next. If he tells a jockey to take his mount back, he means it. The jockey may not comply, but if he thinks the infraction is overlooked he learns his mistake when he arrives at the weighing-in room. Under such rules it is not necessary that every boy having a mount at the track must feel the lash; one cut answers for many.

COLONEL WARBURTON, in his book "How to train a Race-horse," says of starting. "Being ready to go is half the battle. I have before now quoted what Archer has said to me on this point. He was great at jogging into line at the critical moment, so that his horse was in action when the flag fell. Rule 35 says that 'the horses must be started from a walk,' but a certain amount of discretion must be left with the starter, and if he sees a good line he is tolerably certain to say 'Go!' Yet how often we see jockeys looking at other horses, chattering, glancing first at the starter, then at the advance flag, then in some other direction, and then perhaps beginning to find fault with some other rider. The flag falls, and naturally the chances are they do not get well away, the probability being that they bustle their horses, and so are beaten before they reach the distance. Many races are won at the starting post, and not necessarily by the horse that gets off first. That one may jump off cross-legged or in some way out of form, so that he is all abroad at once. Race riding is a prettier and more intricate art than is imagined by any but those who have carefully studied it."

The Press and the Stand.

Within the last few years the ranks of the leading turf writers have been depleted by the laying aside of the pen for the assumption of official duties with racing associations. It is but natural that, in the line of racing, as in any other, the persons who have devoted the best part of their lives to the education of the people, to the moulding and shaping of opinion, and have expended their best energies in correcting or eradicating evils that had existed, should be called upon, when the occasion demands a thorough knowledge of essential details, to administer the very principles they had advocated. As a result, the seasoned warriors are becoming commissioned officers while raw recruits are swelling the depleted ranks. Following a line of thought suggested by a contribution to a recent issue of a prominent turf journal by one who honored the ranks by his service, and adds lustre to the staff by his presence, the question is asked: Should the public be deprived of their teachings, valued so long, but denied them with the assumption of official duties? To quote the writer in part:

"Hardly one racing man in a thousand will disagree with your statement that it seems natural that the men who occupy important positions in connection with horse racing ought to be essentially the persons from whom the public should receive its education, but I regret to say that that is not as much the case as it ought to be.
One after another of the capable, conservative men who know racing and its surroundings, are being grafted onto official positions, and from that moment they are cut off from the outside world, as far as concerns the open, candid, well-grounded articles which they formerly produced for the education and entertainment of the racing public."

Conservatism is essential in a judge, and conservatism will permit the intercourse and exchange of thoughts with those without the pale of the judicial box, and not rob a just decision of its weight nor dull the star of prestige. From the desks of reporters have risen the ablest men that ever graced a stand. They were of the people, by the people, and, after their elevation, their dignity should not suffer by being for the people.

John A. Goldsmith.

The death of this estimable young man in the prime of life will be deplored with unfeigned sorrow by all who have ever taken an interest in the educators of the trotting horses of America. From boyhood, his life was devoted to the one great object of enhancing the value of horses. He loved them, and they in turn respected him. He never used them harshly, but enlisted their best efforts by carefully preparing them for the tasks they seemed to enjoy. His gentle ways, kindly manner and consideration for the shortcomings of his fellow-men made friends for him everywhere. Whether in or out of the sulky there was always a magnetism about him that attracted others. His was not a demonstrative nature, but his appreciation of little acts or words of kindness was always made apparent.

His career as a conditioner and driver of great campaigners on this Coast will always fill one of the brightest chapters in the history of the trotting turf in California, and when, in years to come, the reader peruses those pages and notes how successful this youthful knight of the sulky was, in not only winning races that were considered lost, but also in giving race records to so many champions, the irreparable loss of such a one in such a calling will be acknowledged.

His life was one of trials and excitement, and only his ambition, perseverance and intelligence could have accomplished so much in such a short space of time. His was a nature that could not be subdued. His ambition, tempered by a thorough knowledge of what he should do at all times, carried him to the front and made him a king among his confreres. A king in position only, for he was as meek and mild as a child, and never forgot to speak kindly to those around him. His men revered him and their greatest boast was that they worked for his interests and they always deemed it an honor to do so.

He has passed away to his long rest, and the places that knew him once will know him no more. In his death a bright light has been quenched; a star obliterated and a void left that never will be filled. Only the remembrance remains of him who was at all times and places a general favorite and a true friend; one in whom the elements were so nicely blended that he was able to wear with singular grace and honor the noble name
"gentleman," whose kindly and courtly manner and amiable character endeared him to all with whom he came in contact.

To his bereaved widow, sister and nephews, over whom the clouds have gathered thickest, we extend our tenderest sympathy.

The Outlook for 1896.

Christmastide is a season of the year when all men (horsemen not excepted) are thinking about the holidays and in what way and with what gifts they will make those near and dear to them happy. These days of rejoicing are anticipated with pleasure during the previous months of the year, and young and old unite in the hope that the sunshine of prosperity will continue to bring warmth and good cheer to all.

The horsemen who have their interests centered in the future career of their choicely-bred colts and fillies, and have a live and ever-present hope that the few mares they bred to their favorite stallions during the past year have proven with foal, and will bring forth young that will be creditable, have much to be thankful for.

The year 1895 has been one of many trials to horsemen. At the beginning of the year the legislature was in session, and the agitation about the district fairs was kept up to fever heat. The all-wise farmer, Jim Budd, to satisfy a few political wire pullers in San Francisco, vetoed the appropriation bill for these district fairs, and claimed he did so on the score of economy. In looking at the tax rate we do not find that it made any difference, for State taxes are higher than ever, and the farmers and breeders who spent thousands of dollars in importing and improving their horses, cattle, swine, sheep and poultry did not get a glimpse of premium money this year. Their fair grounds, being heavily in debt, were threatened with destruction, the only attraction to draw the people, to pay gate money, to keep the buildings in repair and pay interest and taxes, was the race meeting. There was a certain determination shown by the associations to give meetings irrespective of Jim Budd's peculiar action, and the horseowners did their best to sustain them. The circuit was a long one, and more money was scattered among horsemen in stakes and purses than ever before. The lessons in regard to low entrance were tested severely, and although there were many men unable to settle their accounts with the associations, there is no doubt something will be done toward relieving them of their heavy debts. The number of suspended horses and horsemen is not pleasant to review, and the ambition of many to have large strings of horses and the ease with which they tumbled into debt for entrance money on these horses will not be forgotten soon.

During the whole season a largely-attended race meeting was in progress at San Francisco, and many of the followers of the races who were known to be liberal supporters of racing preferred to remain near the Bay District, hence their absence from the district fairs was felt.

The year was a disastrous one for the farmers and orchardists. Grain that looked rich and promised a bountiful harvest was affected by rust, and ten of thousands of acres were ruined, while the prices realized for the grain harvested, were not sufficient to pay for the planting. Orchardists reported poor crops and low prices, and many, who relied upon a heavy yield and good market were compelled to acknowledge they were sadly disappointed. These, and other serious drawbacks, affected the meetings of 1895, but the outlook for 1896 is brighter.

We have survived all the trials and tribulations of the past year and profited by the lessons taught. The prospects for an excellent year for horticultural, agricultural and viticultural pursuits were never better; the food supplies of the years previous to 1895 are depleted, and this agitation about the Venezuela claims will start more money in circulation, arouse the people of this nation to a sense of their strength and weakness, and millions of dollars, that ought to have been expended in strengthening the fortifications at the gateways of this republic will now be used in giving employment to thousands of men and placing the standing of this great nation more plainly before the rising generation than it has been during the past twenty-five years. The United States is self-supporting, and while we do not believe there will be any conflict between the two greatest English-speaking nations on the globe, we do not hesitate to say that it is about time they should respect each other's rights everywhere.

The prospects for good prices for all commodities are brighter, consequently, the producers will soon begin to realize something from their labors. Wheat, fruit and wine will bring higher prices than they have for years, and with them the prices of live-stock will increase also so farmers and breeders need have less fears for the future than they had a year ago.

There will be a number of radical changes in the rules and conditions of races to be announced by the various associations this year. There will be no race meetings at the Bay District or Ingleside during the time the trotting horses are on the circuit, and a large number of men of wealth who have attended the races this winter have made arrangements to attend our trotting meetings, and by their presence aid us in every way to make those meetings successful.

The extreme speed demanded of our colts and fillies in 1895 has relegated the majority of these youngsters to the paddocks and road where they will hereafter be found either enjoying a well-earned rest or delighting their owners by the way they move. The demand for material to take their places on the circuit of 1896 is a good and healthy one, and after the holidays there will be a general search instituted among our stock farms for promising trotters and pacers. The supply will not equal the demand, hence good prices may be expected.
The cessation of breeding during the past three years, and the large sales from our leading stock farms as well as the constant demand for first-class road horses has been the cause of this scarcity. The future is bright, for the associations and horse owners in this State will work together next year to retrieve their losses and conduct their meetings on business-like plans. The large stock farms are employing more men and doing more to develop their trotters and pacers than they have for three years, and the small breeder who has, in nine cases out of ten, just as good material, will be "standing in his own light" if he does not see that his colts and fillies are properly trained also.

WORK on the new buildings at the Oakland race track is being rapidly pushed forward. A large force of carpenters are at work, and the old fences around the enclosure are being demolished. When the gates of this place are thrown open the public will be as much astonished as they were at Ingleside.

The Speed Track.

The action of the new Boulevard Association in getting signatures to a petition to the Board of Supervisors is an excellent one, and it is hoped that success will crown its efforts. The need of a little more good, careful work being done on the speed track in Golden Gate Park, which was made by voluntary contributions from the prominent horsemen in this city, is urgent. It has never been a safe track for our horse owners to jog the horses over. The top dressing of clay has never been properly watered, harrowed and rolled, consequently it has been allowed to blow over to the sides of the course in places, leaving the road very hard and uneven. It was claimed that when the track was made it would be kept by the Park Commissioners in first-class condition, but a competent man with a team of horses has never been kept at work steadily on it since the day of opening.

The appropriation of $350,000 for the improvement of the park is a large one and, without doubt, the heaviest taxpayers who have contributed so much toward this amount, love to ride through the park and their demands to see a little more attention paid to the only driveway on which bicycles are forbidden, should be put in good condition for them to speed their flyers on.

They have been a silent, long-suffering class and have quietly looked askance at the demands of others which in the past were granted by the Park Commissioners, but now that they have thoroughly organized here is no doubt that, if time be given the members, who are circulating the petitions, the longest list of names of influential property holders in this city and county will be presented for consideration, and such appeals must not go unheeded.

The idea of building a neat cottage on the highest point on the road where horsemen can sit and watch the horses pass is also a good one, and we would suggest that a cooling-out shed be also built. It should be in charge of a competent man who would also supervise the care of the track. Every leading city in the United States has such a place, and it is about time that San Francisco should become as progressive. We have as fine horses and vehicles as any city in the United States, and we ought to have a place where we can invite our friends to see them.

NEXT Thursday afternoon the gates of the Bay District track will be opened, and the California Jockey Club will have its two weeks of racing. The horsemen who have been attending the Ingleside meeting will all be present at the old track, and the betting ring will never be so thronged as during this meeting. Horsemen have had an opportunity of comparing the talent in the starter's box and judges' stand, and the officials who occupy these places will be compelled to do their best to give the public satisfaction. The pool room war is still on, but it will end soon, much to the discomfiture of the forty poolrooms and their three thousand "tin horn" patrons. The solid eight in the Board of Supervisors is rapidly going to pieces, and a worse wreck was never thrown on the beach of distrust. After the term to which these servants have been elected ends, they will be chased into their places, where, surrounded by weiss beer, pretzels, and illuminated fly-specked whisky flasks, they can review their labors in the Board in trying to uphold the most disgraceful gambling swindles ever introduced in this city since the days of the famous clock game.

ENTRIES for the Coney Island Jockey Club events for the meeting to be held in June, 1896, will close Thursday, January 2. The programme of events and the large amounts offered are published in this issue and should attract the attention of hundreds of prominent horse-owners who contemplate taking their promising horses East to engage in the prominent stakes offered there. They should not overlook Sheepshead Bay, Coney Island. It is famous the world over for being one of our best courses and is likened to the Ascot in England. The appointments are unexcelled, and as the time is short for making entries this notification should not be overlooked.

THE racing department of the Detroit Driving Club of Detroit, Michigan, announces a splendid list of stakes in this issue, entries for which will close Friday, January 10th. The racing will take place during the summer when there will be no race meeting here, and horsemen should avail themselves of this opportunity of having their horses well engaged throughout the year and thus make all the money they can with them. Entry blanks may be obtained at this office, and as this advertisement will only appear once more it will pay horsemen to read it carefully and send in their entries at once.

A Valuable Acquisition.

W. S. Hobart, the young Californian millionaire, has shown his intention of going into racing more extensively by the purchase of a block of stock in the Pacific Coast Jockey Club. This, it is announced, will be followed by his election to the Board of Directors of that association. If Mr. Hobart enters upon a turf career with the vim and enterprise shown by him in his recent participation in the Horse Show, he will, indeed, be a most valuable acquisition. He comes quite naturally by his love for the horse, the late Mr. Hobart being in his lifetime one of the mainstays of breeding in California. The young gentleman soon showed his predilection, but hitherto his attention has been almost exclusively given to show horses and equipages. That his judgment was correct in the gathering of his fancy stock is best evidenced by the large number of blue ribbons he secured with his entries at the recent show. Previous to the running of the Realization this year Mr. Hobart purchased Bright Phœbus, contingent on his winning that event. With Ferrier, Joe Ripley, Romulus, Little Mid and Ali Baba, the jumper, the nucleus of a racing stable was formed, but it has been a matter of regret that his high-class horses have not heretofore been prominent in the entries at the local tracks. Purchases of promising young horses have been made at recent sales, and now that Mr. Hobart has signified his intention of going more prominently into racing, it will not be too much to predict that the Del Monte Stable will soon rank among the most formidable. The acquisition of men of the means and caliber of Mr. Hobart is a valuable one to the turf.

THE announcement of the closing of stakes of the Latonia Jockey Club, of Covington, Kentucky, for the Fall meeting of 1896 and the Spring meeting of 1897 appears in this issue, entries for which will close January 15th. The leading horsemen of America are in this city at present and when their attention is called to the splendid list of stakes offered by this live and progressive association, there is no doubt they will at once avail themselves of the opportunity of making entries on the events. The purses are large, the track one of the best in the world and the officials competent. There will be no race meeting here during the time this meeting at Latonia is in progress and owners will be consulting their best interests by attending to the filling out of the entry blanks at once. Remember they must be forwarded to the secretary on or before January 15th, 1896.

National Trotting Association.

Proceedings of the Pacific District Board of Appeals of the National Trotting Association at San Francisco, Cal., November 23, 1895.

Board met; present, N. T. Smith, Jesse D. Carr and D. L. Hackett, Secretary.

In the matter of the protest of S. C. Tryon against payment of claim for entrance money held by Stockton and San Jose associations, protest made on ground that entries were made and mailed after the date of closing of said entries. The evidence in these cases, consisting entirely of letters and telegrams, is to the effect that Tryon mailed the entries in Anaconda, Mont., and telegraphed and wrote asking that they be accepted. That answer was made that they would be accepted provided no objections were made thereto by others. That no objections were made, and it is, therefore, ordered that Mr. Tryon's protest be overruled.

In the matter of the protest of T. C. Snider against the payment or claims held against him and mare Eva M., by Stockton and San Jose Associations; protest made on the ground that entries were not made in name of said Snider but in name of J. Hallinan. The original entries were produced and showed that they were made by Snider; consequently protests were overruled.

Matter of protest of E. Dinkelspiel against payment of claim held by Stockton Association against mare Brilliantine on the ground that O. J. Holmes, who entered the mare, was not her owner and had no right to so enter her at that meeting. The evidence showed that Holmes had possession of the mare at the time and had raced her at other places and it was, therefore, held by the Board that the mare should be held for the amount.

Matter of protest of C. A. Owen and bay gelding Eagle against payment of claim against them for entrance due at San Jose; protest made on ground that said horse was entered in 2:30 pace at 1894 meeting; that one of the conditions of said race was that all horses making a record better than 2:30 prior to August 15th, should be barred from the race and entrance money returned; that said bay gelding Eagle did on August 10th make a record of 2:19½. Ordered: that Owens' protest be sustained.

Matter of protest of Hoy and Haney against payment of claim held by Stockton Association against horse Monroe S., protest made on the ground that the entrance to this race should have been but five per cent., and on that basis they had already paid the entrance and ten dollars additional, and were not liable for this $30 and penalty. On the evidence of Secretary Doan of Stockton (who was present) that there were not ten fully paid-up entries to this race, and that the published conditions required ten per cent. entrance when there were less, the protest was overruled.

Board adjourned. D. L. HACKETT, Secretary.

The above report was received and adopted by the National Trotting Association recently convened at Chicago.

The Rancho Del Paso Sale of Horses.

The Rancho del Paso sale of yearlings took place last night at the big tent on Market street under the auspices of Killip & Co. Thirty-eight yearlings were sold for $13,495, which is an average of about $360. The highest-priced youngster of the sale was the full brother to Sallie Clicquot, who was finally knocked down to Walter S. Hobart for $2100. Ab Stemler paid $1100 for the Midlothian-Starlight colt. The following is a list of the most important sales:

Chestnut colt by Sir Modred—Dixiane; F. Van Ness.....	$ 825
Bay colt by Tyrant—Electricity; P. Mitchell.....	350
Bay filly by Torso—Extract; Ed. Greaney.....	250
Bay filly by St. Andrew—Fleeta; Captain Godfrey.....	359
Bay filly by Take Notice—Glencola; Ed. Powe.....	225

Chestnut colt by Salvalor—Widow Clicquot; W. S. Hobart.....	375
Bay filly by Hallowmas—Zuleika; Captain Godfrey.....

Thoroughbreds Sell Cheap.

The sale of thoroughbred yearlings and two-year-olds from the breeding farms of James B. Chase and Marcus Daly took place last night in the salesyard of Killip & Co., at the corner of Van Ness avenue and Market street. The prices brought proved disappointing. The best prices obtained were for the yearlings from the Chase farm. The following is a list of the horses sold, together with the names of the purchasers and the prices paid. There is one cause for the depression in prices, the large buyers are well supplied and do not care to invest any more money in thoroughbreds at present:

Rafaela (half sister to Phœbe Ann), by imp. Midlothian—Archuthusa; A. B. Sprockels.....	$ 400
Etbelinda (half sister to De Bracy), by Peel—Glenn Ellen; Matt Storn.....	250
Mauzanilla, by imp. Merriwa—Rosedale; Lot White.....	100
Serena, by imp. Merriwa—Priscilla; Dr. Stimson.....	140

Good Outlook For Stallion Owners.

It is a pretty safe proposition that stallion owners will do a lucrative business in 1896, provided they take hold of the business with a determination; that the breeding of horses is a necessity, and are not afraid to talk it with an earnest air. The general depression of times has brought horses, with other commercial articles, down until the breeding of them has been virtually stopped the past two years, and breeding farms have been closed out all over the country. The European market has taken about all of our surplus grown-up stock, and the first demand made for good serviceable horses will find the supply short, for the country is bare of good-sized, well-formed horses to-day. While all this is true, the owners of broodmares having to pay a stallion fee, like money lenders, will move very cautiously in this matter, and it will evolve on the stallion owners seeking business to judiciously advertise their stallion before the public and push the breeding business, remembering that only first-class stallions will be patronized, and a stallion that is not worth advertising is not worth keeping. Delays should not be made in this matter, as it will take some time to work the people up to breeding. —North Pacific Rural.

Dates for C. J. C. Stakes.

The California Jockey Club has at last fixed the dates for the running-off of the various stakes for the next meeting at the Bay District track, which commences next Thursday. They are as follows:

Thursday, December 26th, the G. H. Mum & Co. handicap, for all ages, six furlongs.

Saturday, December 28th, the Elmwood stakes, for two-year-olds, six furlongs.

Wednesday, January 1, 1896, the Rosemond stakes, for two-year-olds, five and a half furlongs, and the Del Monte steeplechase, about one and a half miles.

Saturday, January 4, the Thornton stakes, four miles.

Wednesday, January 8, the Palo Alto stakes, a handicap, for two-year-olds.

There will be six races on Saturdays and holidays. On other days there will be but five.

The purses will range from $300 to $500. Stake events for two and three-year-olds that are closed in 1895 but run in 1896 will be run under the same weights as though run in 1895. Programmes for the first week will be announced on Saturday, December 21.

AN Indianapolis dispatch of December 11th, says: "The final knock-out to the Roby track people was given by the Supreme Court Wednesday, when the Lake County Court injunction, obtained on behalf of Gov. Matthews, was sustained. The opinion contains only one hundred words, the Court holding that the ruling in the previous injunction case applied to the suit of Edward Roby and others against Gov. Matthews. This is the second time the court has held that the Sellers act, regulating horse racing in Indiana, is sound. Nothing is now left for the Roby people if they desire to give continuous racing next year but to build three tracks and carry on the meetings under three different associations."

Salisbury not Discouraged.

"When I retire from racing," said Monroe Salisbury in Chicago this week, "I will do so after an unusually successful season. I am coming back next year, and I think I will get my share of the money. This time weather was against me. When I first started, rain began and my stable got a setback. All were short of work, out of condition, and when we did start we had to go so fast. The horses were not up to races of this kind. I won my share, and have no fault to find. Bad luck came to all of us, Hamlin, Doble, McHenry and myself. Nearly every horse went lame. Why, I do not expect to see another season like it."

"Azote is all right. I'll bring him over next year faster than ever. His lameness was not serious. Why, the great trouble with Azote was he had been shod too heavily. Last season I kept reducing his shoes, and this year he was shod lighter than ever. Same way with Directum. The last season I had him I began his work with heavy shoes. Then I reduced the weight, filing away a little every week or two. He did not go in heavy shoes when I let him go."

"Then you are not in favor of toe-weights or heavy shoes?"
"Only to make them square and level. I put on toe-weights and heavy shoes till I get them to going right, then I gradually lighten them up. That is my idea."

"Have you engaged a driver for next season?"
"No. I have applications from at least twenty men—all good ones. There has been some talk of McHenry. Well, he half promises in the fall and backs out every spring. He is first class. But I am like the running horse trainer. I fit the horse, shoe him, and he races as I direct. Now, I will not have a driver who will not obey orders. I may be wrong, but they drive for my money, and I am bound to have my say. I am the only one that trains on this plan. I know what I want, and I pay for it. If I lose, I am to blame."

"There is another reason why this season has been hard on horsemen," he went on, "and that is that associations would declare off-stake events and keep us from winning the money. When a man spends five or six weeks, perhaps months, in preparing a horse for a big stake, it is a disappointment to find out that he is left in the lurch. There is no redress for the horsemen. It is almost as bad as it is to go on and win and find you can't get any pay at all. I am in favor of tracks being run by associations. Cheap racing means a cheap crowd. There is no enthusiasm. One day's poor racing does not mean that a meeting will fail. An association of eight, ten or twenty men will not grumble at losing a few thousand. One man will. I am not in favor of the racing track proprietor. Trotting must be fostered by associations. That was why Fleetwood was a success. The directors just carried out the program and there was plenty of enthusiasm. Now, I had directly in several big stake events for three-year-olds, and the track managers declared them off. I had him fit for the events and the only thing I could do was to start him against old horses. He could beat the colts, but the others were too much for him. I have sent him home to California. No, I don't think his best days are over. He hurt his ankle, and it threw him out of work and what could I do with him? He has not lost his speed, by any means."

"There was a report in New York at the time of the Fleetwood meeting that I had charge of Robert J., but it was not so. Now I suppose, in a degree, I am responsible for the Hamlin success in New York. It came about in this way: After the Buffalo meeting Harry Hamlin came to me and said that they were going to give up, and that Robert J. was worn out, and he felt that Joe Patchen was sure to beat him at Fleetwood. I said: 'Robert J. is all right.' Harry asked: 'What is the matter with him now?' Then I said: 'You have drilled your horses to death. You began in California and raced them about the Coast and began the campaign in the East. They got no rest. They are all drilled out. Give Robert a couple of weeks' rest and he'll beat the other two easily. I'll give you $1,000 for his chance if you will turn him over to me.' They talked it over with Geers and he advised the same thing. That is all I had to do with it but Robert won."

"It did not take the Hamlins long to pick up after this. You haven't heard of Cicero J. Hamlin selling off his horse and quitting the trotting business? The Village Farm has not been sold, has it? Why, no man can win right along! Bad luck comes to us all. The rest is what the Hamlin horse wanted. But I was recently told Mr. Hamlin regretted that Azote had gone lame, for he was just getting Fantasy ready to beat him. That is too bad. Why, they thought she was ready the first time the two met this season. She had beaten Directum. I will give Fantasy a race when I come on next year, and I hope she will be ready to meet Azote. He will be if I bring him over. Then there will be others besides Azote. Hickok has a pretty good sorrel mare, Beuzetta. Geers is a good man, and if he thinks Fantasy can do the trick I'll just give them a race. Mr. Hamlin has a good man in Ed. Geers, honest, of good habits and very intelligent. Very seldom see him buying pools. Some of these drivers rush to the pool-box every heat. They know it all, but I do not find them successful."

"And now about Alix? Will she race next summer?"
"I think she will. She is all right now. The fact is I made a great mistake with Alix. I am not ashamed or afraid to own that I make mistakes. When I wound up the season a year ago she was the fastest mare on earth, and could go faster than she had yet done. The mare had wind galls and I wanted to take them off. I blistered them with iodine, and she got fever in that leg and it hung there all season. The wind galls never hurt her, just looked bad, and I should have left them alone. I'll bring her back next year, faster and better than ever."

Another Use of Cocaine.

It frequently happens that, owing to the death of her foal, or some other cause, it is desired to "dry up" a mare as quickly as possible, and hitherto the process of milking her incompletely has been almost universally adopted. This plan has of course succeeded from time immemorial, but the swollen, inflamed condition of the udder, and the ill-temper of the mare, have always proved how painful the process was. Now, however, it has been demonstrated that cocaine has the effect not only of diminishing the lacteal secretion, but of completely suppressing it. A five per cent. solution composed of equal parts of water and glycerine is applied with a pencil upon the skin five or six times daily. In all cases the function was suppressed in from two to six days. No inconveniences have followed this treatment. The surface of application need not be very extensive and, the absorption of the drug not being very rapid, there need be no fear of constitutional symptoms. The physiological action of the drug in this process consists in the removal of the sensibility of the nerve filaments in the glands. The nerves being paralyzed by the cocaine does not either by direct or reflex irritation increase the vascularity of the glands, nor stimulate the secretory glands; in other words, suppression of secretion is due to a local anesthesia.

This discovery is certain to produce beneficial results, and in all probability will be generally utilized on stock farms where an intelligent owner or superintendent presides. Veterinarians will also find it very useful in their practice, but perhaps the most important use to which it will be put will be to dry up mares it is desired to train and race. It will not be advisable, however, for everybody to try experimenting with the drug. Cocaine should be handled like dynamite—with the very greatest of care—and the man who does not understand its uses and effects thoroughly should never attempt to administer it.

The Loving Cup.

The Kentucky Trotting-Horse Breeders' Association has presented to Mrs. W. E. D. Stokes, of New York, a memorial cup, on account of her pacing team Miss Rita and Josie B. having taken the world's record over its track at its meeting in October. Speaking of this presentation the New York World says:

It was an event in the history of horse breeding and horse racing when Miss Rita and Josie B. passed under the wire, having paced a mile in 2:12½. That happened at the Fair grounds track at Lexington on October 14th last. It was an event because a team owned by a woman beat the world's record then. Mrs. W. E. D. Stokes, of New York City, owns Miss Rita and Josie B. She has a passion for fast horses; so has her husband. They wished to prove that Mrs. Stokes is possessor of the best team of pacers on earth. So Orrin Hickok sent the pair for the record and beat it—2:12½.

The gallant Kentuckians determined to fitly honor the event, and the Kentucky Horse Breeders' Association ordered a solid silver loving cup. The cup is about a foot high, of chaste and elegant design. The committee directed that this inscription be engraved on the cup: "Presented to Mrs. W. E. D. Stokes by the Kentucky Trotting-Horse Breeders' Association for the world's pacing team record, 2:12½, made by her team, Miss Rita and Josie B., at Lexington, Ky., October 14, 1895."

Then these Kentuckians, as modest as gallant, ordered the cup to be sent to Mrs. Stokes without even informing her of their purpose. A day or two ago Mrs. Stokes went to the silversmith's to buy a whip handle. When she was about to leave the salesman said to her:

"Have you looked in the show window, Mrs. Stokes? There is something in there that belongs to you."

"Oh, no doubt," laughed Mrs. Stokes, "no end of pretty things that I will get my husband to buy;" and, still laughing, she looked in the window, where the loving cup had been put on show. She saw the cup and read the inscription.

"Can I take it home with me?" she asked.

Miss Rita holds the three-year-old pacing record of—2:09½. W. E. D. Stokes gave the filly to his sweetheart, Miss Rita Hernandez de Alba de Acosta, before they were married in the fall of 1894, and named her after Miss Acosta. Oddly enough Miss Rita's mate, Josie B., was given by a Kentuckian to his sweetheart, and named after her. But after the Kentuckian's marriage fortune failed him, and he was compelled to part with Josie B., the filly, to W. E. D. Stokes, who gave her to his wife. Miss Rita and Josie B. are now in San Francisco, in charge of Orrin Hickok.

Mrs. Stokes owns Alcyone Jr., with a record of 2:15, the half brother of Miss Rita. She also owns Angie D., who holds the record for pacing mares. Mr. Stokes has also made his wife a present of Beuzetta, who holds the record for four-year-old trotters.

But the list of Mrs. Stokes' valuable horses does not end here. She now owns the Russian trotter Baolatsky, a yearling that the Grand Duke Dimitri, of Russia, presented to W. E. D. Stokes, and Stepiak, a Russian running horse, a yearling, full brother of a winner of a Grand Prix Patis.

The Owner of Directum Dead.

Ex Supervisor John Green, one of the pioneers of Alameda County, known throughout the State as a breeder of fine racing stock, died at Dublin, in Murray township, Alameda County, early Sunday morning. Death was not entirely unexpected, as the deceased had been suffering for some time past from a complication of organic troubles.

Mr. Green settled at Dublin nearly forty years ago and continued to accumulate property from the outset. He was of frugal habits, and through thrift and industry gained a competency which those closest to him estimate to be fully $200,000. He had large landed interests in Murray township as well as in San Francisco and Oakland. He was a great lover of fine horses, and among his many valuable animals was the famous Directum, 2:05½, the champion trotting stallion of the world, and Electress, 2:20. In 1860, Green built the first house in Dublin. He erected a hotel that for years was a way station for stage lines between Oakland, Stockton, San Jose and Martinez.

The deceased was a man of large family. He leaves a widow and eight children, five sons and three daughters. He was sixty-eight years of age, and a native of County Longford, Ireland.

The Oakland Board of Supervisors adopted resolutions of respect, and cited the deceased as a model citizen who was a fearless, honest and conscientious public servant. The flag on the Hall of Records was lowered to half mast.

THREE new jumpers made their appearance Wednesday in the first hurdle race, White Cloud, Little Mid and Malo Diablo. The latter came to grief at the first hurdle and threw his rider, but took the remaining obstacles in good shape. White Cloud and Little Mid jumped very well.

The Tout and His Wiles.

The following experience was recently related by an occasional frequenter of the races:

"Did you notice what that fellow was betting on?"

Turning, with an interrogation mark in each eye, to the long, stooped-shouldered, sad-eyed individual at my elbow, I received for an answer, "He just went by here playing a hundred in each book."

Almost before I could respond, came from my "side" partner: "There he is now; see which way he goes!"

With a quickly-awakened interest and a desire to see the game out, I turned and followed a well-dressed individual who had flashed past me, with four or five twenties in his hand. Half-way across the betting ring he came to a sudden stop, and I almost fell over him, as I had kept within "striking" distance, determined not to lose him. Flipping the ash from a half-smoked cigar, he fumbled in his vest pocket for a match, which he could not produce, then turned to me with a "Got a match, partner?"

"Thanks."

"Never mind; keep them," as he proffers the remaining ones, after he had smoked up, and a voice in my ear whispers, "Ask him what he's betting on."

Assuming an air of familiarity with the ring, I asked, "What do you like?"

Giving a hasty glance around, then dropping his voice to a confidential tone, the man with the twenties said:

"I don't mind telling you, if you don't put any one on. I am betting for wealthy and influential parties, and if the gang got on to my play they'd kill the odds. But if you want to get on a little for yourself I don't mind lettin' you in."

I appeared willing to be let in, and said, "All right, much obliged. What is it?"

"Now you won't tell anyone?"

"No."

"Then come with me."

Away he went, squirming around through the crowd, and I at his heels. We made about half a circuit of the ring when I was suddenly brought up in front of a bookmaker's block.

"Now give me your money and I'll place it for you."

"But I want to know what I'm betting on; which one do you like?"

"No, you give me the money and I put it on for you. Quick, they're going to the post."

Then I explained that I would have to go and "dig up," and as I left my new-found friend who was so anxious to accommodate me by letting me "get on" to his "good thing," I heard him say: "Be d—d quick about it or you'll miss the chance of your life."

A few minutes later as I looked down from the press stand my accommodating friend passed and caught my eye. He and I, and my long friend, too, went down town on the same car that evening, but he did not see me. Neither did he see the long one, as they sat opposite each other and each paid a fare. Not a sign of recognition passed between them, but by a co-incidence they alighted at the same corner and were in conversation before they had gone a half block.

Frequently afterwards I watched the pair, and day after day they may be seen weaving in and out among the crowd in the betting ring. As they pass each other you must watch closely to detect any sign of communication between them, yet they are always within reach, and if one accosts a person the other is there immediately.

No doubt it was the same pair that ran across a Frenchman and got him to play a winning horse. He did not show any inclination to reciprocate, and they determined on revenge. Shortly afterwards Goodwin 11 went to the post at 8 to 1, and was not supposed to have a ghost of a chance. Just before post bell the Frenchman was met and quickly snapped at the "good thing" they offered. He went and put on $25, and almost before the worthy pair got through laughing over their little joke the Frenchman was in line waiting to cash his ticket.

New Driving Association.

By some of the horsemen of this city it is now proposed to petition the Park Commission to have the speed track repaired and maintained in good condition. It has been allowed to go to ruin through apathy in the ranks of the horse-owners.

The Golden Gate Park Driving Association has been formed and is vigorously pushing the matter of the repair of the track. The new association is officered as follows: President, John C. Kirkpatrick, managing director of the Palace Hotel; Vice-President, Dr. George W. Leek; Treasurer, F. W. Thompson; Secretary, William F. Roeder; Assistant Secretary, W. S. Simpson; Directors, Walter S. Hobart, John Olant, Harry W. Patrick, Leonard Richardson, James G. Chesley, R. P. Hammond, Eugene Cerciat, L. Brown, John L. Bryan, H. Dutard and Messrs. Wangerman, Miller and Gibbs. Two more directors are to be added later. The association will hold stated speed trials, the horses to be driven by owners over a straight-away course, one heat to each contest.

One by-law of the association provides that a horse must be owned at least six months by the gentleman entering it for a contest. The association has no desire to antagonize the making of the proposed bicycle track, but feels that out of the appropriation of $350,000 for the Park there should be sufficient to meet the wants of both horsemen and bicyclists. The association purposes building an attractive roadhouse on some eligible site near the speed track.

MATT DWYER has returned from Austria and is busily engaged buying another consignment of trotters for the European market. Outside of Liverpool there is no demand for pacers, but first-class trotting stock sells quickly and at good prices. Mr. Dwyer was for several years at Palo Alto Farm, and has traveled extensively. He is very enthusiastic about the racing prospects over the ocean, and predicts that events equal to America's Grand Circuit will be the outcome of the boom in light harness performers in Germany, France and perhaps Russia in a year or so hence. It is very important that animals for export should be registered. I know of at least one sale of a fast horse in this city the past few days, that failed to materialize because technically the horse was not quite eligible to registration, although a brother to a nag in the 2:10 class.—Express.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Black brant are still plentiful in Tamales Bay.

H. Justins was at Alviso Sunday. He got seven snipe.

A. W. Allen bagged eighteen quail near San Rafael on Sunday.

Julius Bruns and J. Karney got but seven birds between them at Shellville.

W. J. Hines and E. Wands killed 26 ducks near the Drawbridge on Sunday last.

R. Van Orden bagged 24 ducks on the Suisun marsh near Teal station on Sunday.

E. H. Williams killed a large swan and a few ducks at Shellville on Sunday last.

Frank Maskey, Ned Fay and a friend bagged a nice bunch of quail at Point Reyes on Sunday last.

There is a State law in Iowa prohibiting any hunter from killing more than twenty-five quail in one day.

Frank Vernon bagged thirty-four quail at Point Reyes on Sunday over his well-known pointer Sally Brass II.

C. H. Bebrans, of Shasta, has been arrested by Deputy Fish Commissioner C. L. Paige for keeping live quail in a cage.

W. L. Prather, Jr., shot with the Mallard Club on the Suisun marsh on Sunday and bagged 15 mallards and other ducks.

The bit of poetry at the head of our Gun column last week should have been credited to Sports Afield instead of Field Sports.

There will be a meeting of the California Inanimate Tars get Association at the rooms of the Olympic Gun Club this evening.

Suisun is still the best marsh for duck shooting. Donald McCrae got thirty-four birds at Teal and Vic Harrier and Deitz forty.

Ed. Forster was one of the luckiest ones on the Sonoma marsh. He bagged twenty seven birds at his usual haunt. Most of them were canvasbacks.

The Lincoln Gun Club will give an open-to-all tournament at its shooting grounds at Alameda Point on Christmas Day. There will be a good attendance.

Swan seem to be much more plentiful than usual this season. Scarcely a week passes that several are not killed on either the Sonoma or Suisun marsh.

F. B. Harden was at the Pastime Club on Sunday. He only went a short distance from the club house on account of the rain, but bagged seven ducks and three rail between 7 and 9 A. M.

Edwin Thorne of Babylon, L. I., killed 249 broadbills, 5 whistlers, 9 coots and a sheldrake (sawbill) in one flight recently. Good duck shooting is not confined to this Coast by any means.

In spite of the storm on Sunday the duck shooting was not what the boys expected. There are plenty of ducks here but they seem to be scattered. At Alvarado and Mt. Eden the bags were very light.

The California Inanimate Target Association is in a flourishing condition. There are now seventeen clubs in the Association. The total receipts for the years are $903.95, disbursements $594, leaving a balance in the treasury of $309.85.

There is some talk of a combination of blue rock clubs or rather shooting grounds, the clubs to retain their individuality, but all shoot on one ground. It is proposed to erect a handsome building, put up three sets of traps and make it a first class ground in every respect. The scheme does not seem to find much favor among those we have spoken to on the subject.

Clarence Nauman, R. H. Liddle and M. O. Feudner were at Bird's Point, Alameda, on Sunday experimenting and shooting live pigeons. They killed 68 out of 72 birds within the boundary and two of the four lost ones were dead out of bounds. R. H. Liddle killed nineteen straight with "Monarch" smokeless. M. O. Feudner also shot the new "Monarch" Smokeless and killed twenty-four straight.

Some miscreant shot a nine-inch terrapin on the San Pablo preserve last week. This represents nine dollars, but it is not the value of the terrapin as much as it is the principle of the thing. The hunters think that they are right in this matter, and the preserve owners think that they are. The only way to settle the difference is in the higher courts. Such acts as the one referred to will injure their cause more than a little, and such vandals should be made to suffer for such lawless acts. Every man that goes on that marsh knows that the diamond backs were planted there by Mr. Emeric and nothing but petty spite could cause such a mean action. An arrest for malicious mischief would perhaps cool this fool's ardor.

Fish Commissioner Morrison sent Deputy Patrolman Helms to Sutter County last week to look for market hunters who were reported to be killing ducks with four-gauge guns. He caught Ben May and his hired man, Carroll, in the act of using twenty-six pound "bowitzers." These guns are double-barreled and five inches wide across the breech. These pothunters have an iron box under the bed of their wagon, and when a stranger comes into sight they lock up their artillery and take out ten-gauge guns, so it is hard to catch them at their unlawful work. Helms built himself a willow blind near where May was hunting, and slept there over night, and the duck-slaughters were bombarding the game in the morning before they discovered him.

A small carload of enthusiastic anglers went up Austin creek on Saturday night for steelheads. Among the party were M. J. Geary, E. Cross, Dr. Simpson, Doc Watt, Al Wilson, W. McFarland, J. P. Babcock and John Gallagher. Robert Liddle and wife were there on Saturday and Capt. Cummings spent four days there last week. The veteran angler was in hard luck and only landed one fish. Uncle Bob and wife hooked on to a couple of big fellows, but lost them. McFarland got one 14 pound fish, Doc Watt one, Babcock one, Wilson three and Geary three. Geary hooked on to three more, but lost them on account of running afoul of snags. The trout were caught below Duncan's Mill both from the banks and by trolling from boats. Very few were caught on bait. The Wilson spoon and red flies seem to take equally well. The bar is closed at the mouth of the Russian river, but should it open again the fishing will be grand. The fish are in fine condition.

A dispatch from Los Angeles, Cal., states that Messrs. John Bradbury, J. Downey Harvey, Peter Martin and Walter S. Moore, of that city, have received from the Mexican government a concession to the Island of Tiburon, in the Gulf of California. The island is inhabited by the Ceris Indians, a race of warriors and supposed cannibals. A company of three hundred men is being organized to kill off the Indians and take possession of the island. After the conquest of the island, each surviving soldier will receive one hundred acres of land and two hundred and fifty dollars. Col. Bradbury, who inherited a million a few years ago, furnishes the money for the expedition. It is the intention of the Tiburon Conquest Company, as the new corporation is called, to establish a republic of its own, and have the United States establish a protectorate. It is said Mexico has consented to this. One of the objects of the company is to establish a great resort, and lines of steamers will be put on from both Yuma and Guaymas. The climate is delightful. The island is teeming with game, and this will be protected.—Am. Field.

The Protective Association.

About one hundred sportsmen attended the mass meeting called by the Sportsmen's Protective Association on Tuesday evening last at the Knights of the Red Branch Hall in this city.

President W. J. Abers' opening address was brief, but to the point. He objected strongly to the term poachers as applied to members of the association and other sportsmen who were law-abiding citizens. The law allows any man to shoot on overflowed lands, and until such law was proven to be unconstitutional by the higher courts he thought the obnoxious term "poacher" entirely uncalled for.

He asked the gentlemen present to express their views of the present situation, and R. J. Boyer, president of the Mallard Club, Thos. Casey, H. Battu and Geo. Denis responded.

On motion of Mr. Denis a committee on legislation was appointed, consisting of R. J. Boyer, G. Denis, T. Casey, H. Battu and F. A. Staples. This committee were especially requested to confer with the proper authorities and ascertain if the blockades placed by the Teal and Cordelia clubs on the Frank Horan and Espinosa sloughs can be legally maintained. It is claimed that both of these sloughs are navigable, and if so the clubs can not legally obstruct them nor can they prohibit shooting on them under either the present law or any other law ever passed.

The question of prosecuting a civil action against the San Pablo Shooting Club in behalf of J. Jones for false imprisonment was referred to the Committee on Legislation.

The Association will prosecute all parties whether members of the association or not, who are caught in the act of shooting tame ducks, chickens or cows, breaking down fences or any other act of vandalism.

It is these kind of actions that make the ranchers forbid shooting on their ranches.

The next meeting of the association will be held at the same place on Tuesday evening, January 7, 1896.

How to Trap the Shyest Animals.

Our trappers rated the fox the hardest animal to trap, the wolf next and the otter third. To catch the fox they often made a bed of chaff and got him to lying in it or fooling around it, the trap being set under the chaff. Or a trap was set at a place where several foxes seemed to stop for a certain purpose. Or a fox could be caught sometimes by putting a bait a little way out in the water, and then putting a pad of moss between the bait and the shore, with the trap hid under the moss. The fox, not liking to wet his feet, would step on the moss and be caught.

For wolves the usual way was to put out poison (strychnine). Often they would not touch the poisoned meat.

For otter it was necessary to use great care, not leaving any chips or litter around. Our trappers usually caught them either on a slide or at the place where they came out of the water (not where they went in, as the otter slides with his feet doubled under and would be apt to spring the trap with his body.) It was a good way to drop a limb or stick on the side of the slide, cutting it down and letting it fall naturally, so that the otter could not so easily escape the trap. The trap should never be set in the middle of the slide, but at one side, as the otter's feet are so wide apart, and he would not be caught should he spring the trap with his body.

For otter and beaver, if they were trapped near deep water, a sliding pole was usually used, arranged with the small end stuck down into the deep water. The animal when trapped plunges into the deep water, and the ring of the trap chain slips down along the pole. The little stubs of the trimmed-off boughs prevent the ring from slipping back up again, and the animal is drowned. An otter should not be left in the water over nine days or the fur will slip. A few days makes no difference. All traps should be visited about once in six or eight days.—E. Hough in Forest and Stream.

Three Annie Oakleys.

"By the way, do you know that there are three genuine Misses Annie Oakley living in the United States? No! Well there is; one white, and two as black as the ace of spades. Let me tell you, for it's a funny thing. When we were about leaving Atlanta, an old darkey came to our tent and asked for Miss Annie. When she came out the old fellow took off his hat politely and said: 'This the little lady that shoots—sure it's her?' We told him yes, it was her—sure. 'Now, I'm powerful glad to see you, honey; and so youse the little woman that shoots. Deed, I saw yer this day, and you can shoot some, suah. I'm powerful glad to know you. Had a great honor for yer when I got to cabin last night. Old woman got twin gals. Named 'em right off. Saw you shoot, 'deed I did. Said to mah wife, good name for picaninny—Annie Oakley, both of 'em.'

'What! you named them both Annie Oakley? How are you going to call the one you want?'

'Easy 'nuff, suah—Miss Annie Oakley No. 1, Miss Annie Oakley No. 2. Want to see 'm?'

Butler said he had to draw the line there. Miss Annie, however, made quite a hole in her purse, for she went to town and bought print goods enough to clothe those other Annie Oakleys for some years to come. Thus it is that the United States now boasts three Annie Oakleys instead of one.—Shooting and Fishing.

Slaughtering the Buffalo.

If the present rate at which the wild animals in the National Park are being killed is continued, it will not be many months ere that beautiful park will have lost all its larger game. The wholesale slaughter demonstrates that the officers and soldiers put there to guard the park and protect the animals are either incompetent or unable to do the work. Not many years or months ago the park herd of buffalo numbered about 500; and to-day it is impossible to find fifty head.

One gentleman who came from the park last week said that he visited every nook of the place and saw less than twenty. He was sent down as an official investigator of that very matter, and made that report on his return. His visit was connected with the recent arrest of Thomas Courtney, of Butte, who is now under bonds of $1000 to appear before Judge McHatton to answer to the charge of killing twelve buffalo in the park. He killed the animals only recently and sold some of their heads and hides in Butte. The authorities are lothe to take any notice of these depredations, and Courtney would not have been molested had he not openly sold the skins and told where he killed the animals.

Mountain Sheep.

VICTORIA (B. C.), December 5.—W. F. Burton, who had just returned from a hunting trip in the interior of British Columbia, is authority for the statement that unless prompt steps are taken to prevent their indiscriminate slaughter by the Indians for hides and horns, the big horn will in two or three years be extinct. As it is, very few rams have been seen this year, and this can only be attributed to their wanton destruction by Indians, who have been paid $5 for each set of horns obtained. This, with the skins, is sufficient inducement for the natives to hunt the rams to extinction unless legislation meeting the point is speedily obtained.

The big horn has been and is one of the greatest attractions to sportsmen visiting British Columbia. While hunters have, however, done nothing in the way of hastening their extermination. On the other hand, the Indians have systematically slaughtered them in bands, leaving the carcasses to rot.

The Natural History Society considers Burton's statement of so great importance that a committee has been appointed to suggest means of protection for the persecuted game.—The Examiner.

A Dog With a Future.

Such a cunning little, foolish little, clumsy little thing!
Would you name him for the President or simply call him King?
Or Prince, or Duke, or Hero—
Julius Caesar—Pompey—Nero?
He will surely feel his duty is to live up to his name,
And not to have a noble one would be a perfect shame.

He shall learn to fetch and carry, and to play that he is dead,
To beg upon his hind legs, and to stand upon his head.
He shall guard the house at night, too,
Put robber hands to flight, too;
And this summer at the sea side he'll let nobody be drowned,
I suppose there'll be a hundred lives saved by my gallant hound.

And next winter I shall tell him—if a blizzard comes, you know—
He must rescue all the travelers who might perish in the snow.
Oh, if you only knew, sir,

The plans she has for you, sir—
You soft and warm, and limp and helpless, good-for-nothing pup—
Though the prospect's very glorious, I believe you'd not grow up!

—Ladies' Home Journal for December.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Each meeting of the Interstate Club seems to be better conducted and more successful than the last.

Champion Naso of Upton, the sire of the equally famous pointer Saddleback, died on November 16 last.

Mr. Barker would like to inform Mr. Haight that three constitutes a quorum of the Bench Show Committee.

W. Alcott, Alderson, W. Va., has imported the St. Bernard Lord Maplecroft, by Duke of Maplecroft—Lady Kildare.

The noted mastiff, Beaufort's Black Prince, has been sold to W. Norman Higgs of London. He has never been beaten on the bench in America.

Col. Fry has a St. Bernard dog pup by Reglov—Major Sutor's bitch, six and one-half months old, that weighs 139 pounds. He is the largest pup of his age yet seen on this coast.

The winner of the Irish Setter Field Trials Derby was by Finglas, and all three of the winners of the All Age were by Finglas. The Irish setter breeders seem to be afraid to start any other stock.

D. B. Woolf, Secretary of the Supreme Court Commissioners, has a splendid litter of fox terrier pups by Oriole Bluffer (Champion Bachenal—Verdict), out of Sunshine (Blem-ton Shiner—Sunbeam).

R. M. Dodge, the well-known and popular trainer, left Kenwood for Bakersfield on Thursday of this week. He took with him seven dogs all in fine condition. Four of them will run in the trials of the Pacific Coast Field Trial Club.

Mrs. E. B. Grace is getting together quite a kennel of good Yorkshires. Her well-known bitch Sally VIII, by Dandy-Sally VII, whelped two fine puppies, a dog and bitch, to her Frank on the 14th. This makes nine Yorkshires that she now has in her kennel.

Mrs. W. G. Brittan's recent purchase, the pug dog, Bradford Marvel, made his American debut at Bridgeport, Conn.; winning first in open class and special for best pug in show, beating the great winner Bob Ivy. After being shown through the circuit, he will be sent to this city.

The American Field, like the rest of our contemporaries, publishes but nine of the eleven entries to the Pacific Coast Field Trials. It is singular that a paper of the standing of the American Field cannot appoint a correspondent on this coast that is reliable. Its field trial reports and the majority of its coast news is biased, stale and often utterly false.

T. J. Cronin will open Newark Coursing Park on Sunday December 29th, with an open meeting at a $5 nomination fee. He already has forty-four dogs promised, and will undoubtedly have to finish the stake on New Year's day. Cronin is one of the squarest coursing men in California, and all true lovers of this sport should encourage him with their patronage.

W. H. Mudgett's R. C. St. Bernard Noble, by California Alton—Tomah, will surprise the talent at the next show. He has improved wonderfully. His coat is a bright orange, dense, and perfectly flat. His tail is very heavy, and adds to his appearance materially. His skull has filled out and his shoulders have grown more massive. His body and loins are excellent, and he stands well. Like all of Tomah's get he is a bit long in muzzle, but not especially so.

Forty Irish setters, and fox terriers were sold at the American Horse Exchange, New York, on the 22d. The dogs were sold at auction and were from the Mere Kennels, Larytown and St. Cloud Kennels of New York. The dogs only averaged about $100 apiece, the highest prices being paid for the fox terrier bitch Mere Flirt from the Mere Kennels for which E. E. Kimbell paid $21; the Irish setter Bessie Glencoe IV, from the St. Cloud Kennels, which cost C. C. Martin $15, and a fox terrier bitch, four months old, from the same kennels, for which K. Fry paid $25.

Vol. I, of the American Coursing Board Stud Book is an invaluable work to all who are directly or indirectly interested in the greyhound. It contains the names, colors, ages and pedigrees of greyhounds registered therein up to July 1, 1895, and a list of members of the American Coursing Board, constitution and by-laws of the latter, code of running rules, list and officers of coursing clubs; reports of meetings, containing list of winners, dividers and runners-up; registrations, re-registrations and changes of ownership; list of owners, breeders and coursers; registration of partnerships and kennels, and names of official judges and slippers. In its mechanical and artistic features the work is most skillfully completed. Address Roger D. Williams, Lexington, Ky.

J. Sparrow, of this city, has in his kennels a pair of bull terriers, dog and bitch, that are a credit to local breeding. They are by White Chief (Adonis—Fwilight) and out of Olivette (Sprig—Jennie), whelped August 15, 1894. The dog is considered as good a specimen as the best shown here. Mr. Sparrow intended having them in the last show, but was called away from the city at the time of the show. He intends sending the bitch to Los Angeles to be bred to Champion Crisp. Mr. Sparrow has an eight months St. Bernard bitch by Reglov—Lady Bute, which is the best proof that the smallest pup of the litter does not always remain so. He received this pup at six months old, weighing only two pounds. By careful nursing and judicious feeding it improved, and now is as large as others of the same litter.

Mr. W. Paterson's famous smooth St. Bernard Champion Lola IV, is dead. She took ill suddenly with inflammation of the lungs and was dead the following day, but a post mortem examination revealed the fact that her heart was diseased. She won first prize in every class she was exhibited, many times against dogs, which shows her quality. She was shown at the best shows only, and won the 100 Guinea Challenge Cup six times, and at the time of her death was holder of the Halsey Trophy, Bath Challenge Cup, and 100 Guinea Challenge Cup. She also won the Deakin Trophy the only time she completed for it. She was only bred from twice since coming into Mr. Paterson's possession, and he was unsuccessful, her puppies all dying. She has left two good bitches by St. Augustine, one a smooth, being first Limit, last Palace and third to Lola in Open. She had been served by Marengo and Mr. Paterson was in hopes of getting something to rival the sire and dam.—British Fancier.

Upon a recent visit to Lathrop, Cal., we met T. J. Walker, a fancier of fox terriers, and upon a pressing invitation, looked at the inmates of his kennel. First on the list was a promising seven months' son of Hillside Inferno, all white with some black on ears, long head, small ears, good legs, feet and body, rather cobby in build, and long in coat. If he develops right he should be a credit to his breeder. Gyp, the bitch that has a reputation as a wildcat and raccoon killer, was suffering from an injury to one of her hind legs, and was out of condition; she is by Brockenhurst Ruby and as she is getting old, Mr. Walker will mate her to one of our best dogs. Ripple, the bitch that won third in Puppy Class at Oakland, has developed too small and will be used for breeding purposes only. Several other pups were running about the kennel and a number of others were out at board at some of the neighboring ranches. Mr. Walker reports the death of Hillside Inferno (Brockenhurst Tyke—Hillside Spinster) from being run over by the cars last May.

The Philadelphia K. C. Trials.

The annual field trials of the Philadelphia Kennel Club were held at High Point, N. C., on December 1st and 2d. W. S. Bell officiated as judge. The Free-for all Stakes were won by a pointer, an English setter taking second prize, and two English and one Irish setter divided third. The dogs were run as follows:

SUMMARY.

S. Murray Mitchell's orange and white English setter dog Sandy Gladstone, by Breeze Gladstone—Belle of Delaware, with Frank H. Fleer's liver and white pointer dog Gamester, by Duke of Hessen—Woolton Game.

Dr. G. G. Davis' Irish setter bitch Currer Maud, by Finglas—Currer Belle IV, with S. Murray Mitchell's black, white and tan English setter dog Popillon, by Antonio—Lily Burges.

Francis G. Taylor's black, white and tan English setter dog Ben Hur of Riverview, by Ben Hill—Zoe W.

Frank H. Fleer's black, white and tan English setter bitch Flora, by Roi d'Or—Tory Diamond, with I. A. Winslow's black, white and tan English setter dog Breeze Belton by Breeze Gladstone—Nellie Belton.

J. B. Baker's black, white and tan English setter bitch Lou, by Count Gladstone IV—Mollie, with G. H. Thomson's black, white and tan English setter dog Frills by Edgemark Lucy II.

Dr. G. G. Davis' Irish setter bitch Loo, by Finglas—Currer Belle IV, with J. B. Baker's liver and white pointer bitch Westminster Zoe, by Duke of Hessen—Woolton Game.

The members' stake was run on December 3d. The dogs were drawn and ran as follows:

Dr. G. G. Davis' Loo with M. S. Mitchell's Duly.
J. F. Freer's Gamester with G. H. Thomson's Frills.
M. S. Mitchell's Sandy Gladstone with F. G. Taylor's Ben Hur of Riverview.

Dr. Davis' Irish setter Lou had the best of it in every respect, according to the Forest and Stream, and was promptly declared the winner.

The $500 Rule.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6, 1895.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:

Gentlemen:—I read your article on the $500 rule in your issue of November 30th with a great deal of interest, and desire to commend the tone of it. Whether the delegates will agree with the views therein expressed or not, they cannot help but respect those views. The article is clean, a fair argument, well expressed and gentlemanly in its composition. All most desirable in comments by the press. The kennel press cannot conscientiously find fault with the morals of the average dog man, so long as it descends itself to their level. It is certainly the province of that press to set the example, and its correspondents will soon follow that lead. With kind regards, yours truly,
A. P. VREDENBURGH.

Field Trial Racers.

Mr. Wm. Brailsford, who attended the Canadian trials, writes his views for the English Field. He is not impressed with the racehorse style of our field dogs, and figures that beyond the speed which they show in trials they are of little account as bird dogs. His opinion is best given by the following extract:

In continuation of the Continental All-Aged Stake on September 4th the conditions for working were good, but the "seasoned" dogs, as a rule, were wild in the extreme, and showed even less breaking than the puppies; indeed, during the many years of my field trial experiences, I have never witnessed anything so ridiculously wild as the work of that morning. The fourth brace down, Jingo and Little Ned, were both pointers; each ranged very wide, and the former was soon lost for a considerable time, while, in his absence, Ned, in sight of spectators, though a long way off, ran through a brood of chickens without paying them the slightest attention. When Jingo again put in an appearance both took some wide casts, and, as far as we could see, were near together on point. A long race then took place, the two handlers first, next Judge Wells, with a dozen or more "riggs" of spectators in the rear. The result, I believe, was that the point, which was considered one of merit, was awarded to Jingo, and at the conclusion of the stake he was awarded second prize.

This uncontrolled wide ranging is here regarded with such favor that, for a dog to reach the end of a stake, it is almost an essential feature of his work. The winner of this stake, a very lively black, white and tan setter bitch, when first put down took a straight run out; my eyes followed her for at least a mile, until she was no longer visible; in about ten minutes she was seen returning, and afterward, in the cool of the evening, did some good work. Another remarkable feat was run in this stake between a pointer, Tick Boy, and a setter, Cynosure. The handlers were working wide of each other, and, when fully half a mile apart, each made gestures that his dog had a point; this was repeated, and I certainly felt some sympathy with the poor judge, who had to form some sort of opinion as to the merits of the respective points; however, he apparently took matters very quietly, and, in time, got the handlers and dogs once more together to finish their heat.

As amongst the youngsters, so in this stake were several dogs evidently possessed of good natural abilities which I could not but admire, and which, if under proper control, it would be a pleasure to follow. Wherever field trials are held the aim ought to be the better training and general improvement of dogs over which to kill game, and unless this end is to some extent attained they must be, for all practical purposes, useless. In America, unfortunately, both in Canada and the States, the field trial dog and the dog to shoot over are considered almost as distinct animals; hopes, however, are expressed by some of the more moderate supporters of field trials that the wild work now so general will eventually be abandoned, and that more rational sporting views will ere long prevail. Should this desirable and important change be brought about, as I hope it may, it would then, but not till then, be a delightful experience to me to again compete in field trials on these grand prairies.—Turf, Field and Farm.

Irish Setter Clubs Trials.

The trials of the Irish Setter Club began on December 2d at High Point, N. C., and the clubs field trials began at the same time. There were but two starters in the Derby and three in the All Age Stake, and one of the latter was entered in the Derby.

This is what we term a disgrace to the Irish setter breeders of America. W. S. Bell officiated as judge. The dogs were run as follows:

THE DERBY.

F. E. White's Irish setter bitch Mollie Gibson, by Dakin—Jessie Fremont, with A. Von Cotzhausen's Irish setter bitch Lady Finglas, by Finglas—Lady Swiveler.

Judges at New York.

Jas. Mortimer, superintendent of the Westminster Kennel Club's annual bench show to be held at New York on Feb. 18 next, sends us the following list of gentlemen who have kindly accepted the invitation to judge at that show.

Mr. Geo. Raper, Sheffield, England, for Mastiffs, St. Bernards, Bloodhounds, Russian Wolfhounds, Deerhounds, Greyhound, English Foxhounds, Collies, Old English Sheepdogs, Poodles, Bull Dogs, Bull Terriers, Fox Terriers, Irish Terriers, Scottish Terriers, Bedlington Terriers, Pugs, Toy Spaniels and Miscellaneous classes.

Mr. Wm. Tallman, Plainfield, N. J., English and Gordon Setters.

Mr. G. Mues—Arnolt, Tuckahoe, N. Y., Great Danes, American Foxhounds, Bassethounds and Dachshunds.

Mr. Jas. L. Anthony, Netherwood, N. J., Pointers.

Dr. Wm. Jarvis, Claremont, N. H., Irish Setters.

Andrew Laidlaw, Galt, Ont., Canada, Irish Water Spaniels, Clumber Spaniels, Field Spaniels and Cocker Spaniels.

Mr. W. S. Clark, Linden, Mass., Beagles.

Mr. W. C. Hook, Boston, Mass., Boston Terriers.

Dr. H. T. Foote, New Rochelle, N. Y., Black and Tan Terriers, White English Terriers, Yorkshire Terriers, Toy Terriers, Dandie Dinmont Terriers, Skye Terriers, Whippets, Italian Greyhounds and Schipperkes.

The Portland Bench Show.

The attempt made by the Sportsman to arouse sufficient interest and union among dog owners to secure the holding of a bench show in Portland has proved abortive. The rivalry existing in this city between men interested in dogs is not of the generous character found in other localities which leads to concerted action in getting dogs together, and strong individual efforts to secure the prizes after this is done.

Such jealousy and rancor has been engendered here by past happenings in the kennel line that barrels of the oil of peace would be wasted apparently in efforts to calm the troubled waters. The only dog likely to be exhibited in Portland is the "dog in the manger." Instead of trying to become reconciled and work together, the two factions representing canine enthusiasts simply glower at each other over the fence, and are united only in a determination not to allow anything to be accomplished by either side.

This is a regrettable state of affairs, but it is the existing one, and of course a successful exhibit is out of the question until it is overthrown and better counsels prevail. Just now a change of heart seems as remote as the millenium and a Portland bench show is indefinitely postponed.—Northwest Sportsman.

A Costly St. Bernard.

At the Birmingham Dog Show, held recently in England, the largest price that has ever been realized for a St. Bernard at any show auction sale was made by Lord Hatherton, a young dog whelped in February last. This dog carried all before it at the show, and is said by competent authorities to be the best St. Bernard ever exhibited. The catalogue price was £210. There were three or four bidders, and after spirited bidding the dog was ultimately disposed of for £470 to Mr. Joseph Royle of Oldham road, Manchester.

The New Orleans Meeting.

There are over a thousand thoroughbreds at and near the New Orleans Fair Ground. Among the more prominent stables on hand are those of A. H. & D. H. Morris, Avondale Stable, W. J. Spiers, C. H. Smith, J. M. Murphy, T. H. Stevens, Tom Kiley, New City Stable, W. H. Roller, G. W. Poole, W. M. Barrick, G. C. Bennet, Ireland Bros., Tom Griffin, J. J. Macklein, William Scully, C. A. Smith, J. Hardie, W. Donohue, Irving & Chinn, D. Waldo, Lilly Meade Stable, P. M. West, Clyde Stable, J. Delong, M. P. Mattingly, Ben Falk, P. J. Gilman, M. E. Dyer, Nashville Stable, D. W. Kelly, J. E. Brown, Sam Linton, H. F. Batchelor.

And among the horses of note on hand are Buck Massie, Buckwa, Lezette, Jeanie June, Queen Bess, Logan, Prince Imperial, Bowling Green, Nicholas, Mazarine, Metropole, Longbrook, Overella, Bloomer, Domingo, Fair Faith, Jim Flood, Dominion, Tom Sayre, Jack of Spades, Governor Sheehan, The Sculptor, Dr. Work, Florence P., Pop Gray, Souffle, Aunt Lida, Blasco, Hi Henry, imp. Woolsey, Norman, Lightfoot, Marcel, Orinda, B. F. Fly, Jake Zimmerman, King Mac, Sir John, Newhouse, imp. Percy, Mollie B., Arsenic.

It is a pity that, with such fine racing, the crack jockeys Thorpe, Clayton and Perkins are not on hand; but as it is, there is a liberal supply of good riders, including J. Hill, Lamle, Caywood, McGlone, L. Soden, T. Murphy, Everett, W. Jones, Hyle, Ham, J. Gardner, Clerico, Turner, A. Barrett, D. Davis, R. Doggett, Knapp, Burrell, Wynn, P. Clay. Thorpe will be here in a few weeks, and it is possible Perkins and Clayton may come down during the winter.—'Broadchurch' in Spirit of the Times.

THE trotting mare Orange Girl, 2:20, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian—Dolly Mills, by Seely's American Star, is now the dam of three in the list, viz.: Arcturus, 2:21½, by Artillery, 2:21½; Orangeland, 2:16½, by Greengrass, 2:12; and Ozoma, 2:29½, by Earl, 2:23½. Artillery, 2:21½, sire of Arcturus, 2:21½, is brother in blood to Orange Girl, 2:20, being by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, out of a daughter of Seely's American Star.

JAMES H. TARR, Gloucester, Mass., writes: I find "Absorbine" the best thing I have ever used for swelling, etc.

CHAS. H. ANDREWS, No. Easton, Mass., writes: I think "Absorbine" a valuable remedy for Puffs and Swelling, and think something every horse owner should have in his stable.

Arrival of Artillery.

Among the passengers who arrived on the steamer Alameda Thursday, was George Humphreys, of Christchurch, New Zealand, who brought with him Artillery, a half-brother to Carbine, who was sold for £13,000 to the Duke of Portland. Subsequent to the sale, it is said, the Duke was offered £17,000 for his bargain.

Artillery was brought out here for sale. The price asked for him is $25,000.

Artillery is by Musket, out of Ouida, by Yattendon, out of Guinare. He is now twelve years old. One of his best performances was his victory in the Canterbury Cup, at two miles and a quarter in 1886, in which race he defeated the great horse Nelson, thrice winner of the Auckland Cup, who was considered one of the best stayers of his time. He was second in the Canterbury Derby to that good horse Disowned. Artillery's breeding shows a wonderful combination of running blood. Guinare, the maternal grandam of Artillery, descended from the same line that produced The Barb, winner of the Melbourne Cup. He has shown his ability to get race horses, as evinced by his first representative, Foresight, out of Spec. In her three-year-old career she started thirteen times, was eight times first, three second, one third and one unplaced. His only three other representatives have also done pretty well.

THE ranks of capable jockeys now located in California was increased Thursday by the arrival of Charley Ballard, who has recently been riding at the Baltimore meeting. He says although the advertised dates were filled there the meeting was anything but a success. Like Marty Bergen, Sam Doggett and other good 'uns, Ballard has attained the age but not the size of ordinary manhood, and his liberal stock of good common sense is neatly packed away in a small parcel. He rides easily at 108 pounds. He first became prominent riding for Itkens' successful German combination in Guttenberg's palmy days. Last year he put a number of good ones over the plate for Matt Byrnes' copper king division.

THERE was a great deal of dissatisfaction expressed at the way Gallant was sent off in the third race. Piggott went back when told to, but the others did not come to him, and three or four good starts were spoiled by Sloan when all seemed to have an even show. In the send-off Mary S. and Montalvo were off first and finished first. Gallant, the favorite, was off last and finished third. Tod Sloan and Cochran were set down indefinitely, but there is little consolation in that for those who backed Gallant.

IMP. IVY came at the finish with a remarkable burst of speed and snatched the place from Sligo. After running in the first bunch to the stretch she fell back, and it looked as if she was done for, but she came again in a very game manner. She was as good as 40 to 1 for the place at one time.

MR. HOBART was kicked on the knee by Service while a the post in the gentlemen's race, but he bore the pain and rode out the race. By the time he dismounted his limb was badly swollen and he walked with evident discomfort. We trust the injury will not prove at all serious.

TANCRED won at New Orleans and Tancred won at Alexander Island the same day. Both are three-year-old geldings, the one at New Orleans by Pardee—Quindaro Belle, and the other the Blemton cast-off, by Marglay—Tarantula.

CRIT DAVIS, who has gained an enviable reputation as a trotting horse trainer, will turn his attention to the thoroughbreds. He has been engaged to train for B. B. Million, of Million, Ky.

A bets B that he has a colt by Director, out of a trotting mare that is a half brother to Directum. B bets that he cannot unless he is out of Stemwinder. Who wins? Answer—We dislike to decide bets that depend on a "catch" on either side. It is generally accepted that the term half-brother only applies to colts out of the same dam, but by different sires. In reality two by the same sire are half-brothers. On a technicality years ago this was the claim. This bet should be a draw.

J. G., Sonoma, sends the following: Some time ago you asked for the pedigree of a horse called Roscoe. We send you the following. Answer—Roscoe was a black horse, foaled 1879, sired by Mohawk Chief, first dam Black Bess, by Venture; second dam Bess, by Easton's Dave Hill; third dam by Rockingham, the mare that Dr. Hathaway owned. This horse was taken to Australia by Thomas G. Jones in 1881, and was sold to Messrs. Brunner & Woolf, Maitland, N. S. W.

THE New England Trotting Horse Breeders' Association held its annual meeting at Boston, Mass., last Thursday. Little was done outside of the election of directors, which resulted as follows: J. Malcolm Forbes, John R. Graham, John E. Thayer, George A. Litchfield, Harry Button, George Van Dyke and Frank G. Hall. The most noticeable thing was the absolute refusal of James O. Gray to allow his name to be used. Mr. Gray's withdrawal was because of his connection with the Saugus track. He considered it would be bad policy for him to be a director as long as the association has a track of its own. From reports rendered it was learned that the association's new track at Readville is nearing completion. The grading has nearly all been finished, and the top soil is being put on. Over $28,000 has been expended so far. A contract has just been made for the erection of 231 stalls. President John E. Thayer started a discussion on the advisability of inaugurating a $10,000 Futurity stake. The subject was discussed nearly an hour, and, although no formal vote was taken, it can be said on excellent authority that as soon as the new track is completed the stake will be an assured thing.

FRED S. MOODY, the brother of Mary Best and Guy Wilkes, is the biggest winner in the two-year-old division this season, having earned a total of $8,000. During the campaign he won five races and suffered defeat but once, and at Lexington he lowered the record for two-year-old geldings to 2:18. Wiggins was one of the most remarkable performers of the year. He won five races in straight heats, trotting ten heats the fastest in 2:19 and the slowest in 2:27. On the day he made his record, 2:19, was no measure of his speed, but he went wrong before he was put to a test, as in the Futurity of Kentucky he was sadly out of form. In condition it is hardly probable that Fred S. Moody could have headed him in 2:18. Wiggins finished third in the Futurity, swelling his winnings for the year to $4,400. He is by Aberdeen, out of a daughter of Stamboul, and next year should be in the front rank of three-year-olds. Hattie R., the Ohio-bred filly, is also unbeaten. She earned a record of 2:20½ early in July, and from the way she carried the lion-hearted campaigner Nightingale home from the half in 1:05½, the last quarter in 31 seconds, shows that on that day she could have beaten the 2:15 of Impetuous and Silicon.

THE latest reports of the English horse Cloister, the best steeplechaser of late years, are far from encouraging, and the "friendly bullet" is probably the next item.

A Remarkable Showing.

This best posted horsemen claim that no stallion has ever beaten or equaled the young sire Bay Bird as a speed producer, judging from the number of colts trained and time made. There were only five colts by Bay Bird trained this year, 1895. Three of them beat 2:20 in hotly contested races, viz.:

Dr. Puff (3), record 2:16½.

Geo. Ayers (4), record 2:17½.

Hal Corbett (3), record 2:19½.

Lucien (4), public trial 2:27.

Violetta (3), race trial 2:33.

Furthermore, Dr. Puff trotted a half mile in 1:05, a mile in 2:14; Hal Corbett was a good second in 2:11. Geo. Ayers won three races in succession in straight heats, and showed his ability to beat 2:10.

No stallion, living or dead, has equaled Bay Bird as a color breeder. All the colts sired in Montana are bays with little markings, save one and he is coal black. Bay Bird, from his most fashionable breeding, has a right to breed not only fast horses, but race horses—being by Jay Bird, son of Geo. Wilkes, and out of a producing dam by Geo. Wilkes. He is now at Rancho del Paso.

Mr. Larabie has sold to W. J. Parks of Eastern Montana four colts, all by Bay Bird. One is a full brother to the great three-year-old, Dr. Puff, record 2:16½. Also among the number is Geo. Ayers, record 2:19½, who carries more of the blood of old Hambletonian than any horse living.

Mr. Larabie has also sold to Capt. D. B. Wilson, of Fort Missoula, a very stylish and highly bred two-year-old by Alaska, son of Electioneer; dam, the dam of Reese, (2:47) by Pilot Duroc.

This closes one of the oldest and most famous breeding establishments in Montana, the Willow Run Stock Farm. Mr. Larabie has bred and owned many fast and noted horses; among them Patchen Wilkes, sire of the great pacer Joe Patchen. Patchen Wilkes is now owned by Henry C. Jewett, of Buffalo, N. Y.—Deer Lodge News.

THE queen of the road at Woodland is owned and driven by the prince of good fellows, O. A. Lowe. She is a pacer and sired by Alex. Button, out of Viola Flaxtail, and answers to the musical name of Violin.

Six furlongs.

The California Futurity Stake

To be run at the State Fair of 1898.

For the produce of mares covered in 1895.

A sweepstake for two-year-olds, foals of 1895, by subscription of $10 each, for mares covered in 1895, and of $100 each for the produce of such mares. Entries as follows: $10 for mares to be covered in 1895; $10 for produce, payable January 1, 1897 (when color, sex and marks of foal must be given); $15 November 1, 1897; $25 January 1, 1898, and $50 on September 1, 1898; the State Agricultural Society to add $1,000, of which the winner is to receive $600 and stakes paid in produce; second colt $250; third colt, $150; the owner of mares at three winners of first, second and third mares were foaled to receive 60 per cent, 30 per cent and 10 per cent, respectively, of money subscribed for mares on January 1, 1896. Colts to carry 115, fillies 115 pounds. Winners when carrying standard weight for age at the course where race is run, of one stake race of five value of $1,500, or two races of any value, to carry 3 pounds; of three races, 5 pounds; of four or more times, 7 pounds extra. Allowances: Non-winners when carrying standard weight, if beaten twice, allowed 3 pounds; if three times, 5 pounds; if four or more times, 7 pounds. The produce of mares not having foaled a winner prior to January 1, 1896, to be allowed 5 pounds additional, if claimed at time of entry of mare. In case of sale of mare before foaling, or production of foal, notice thereof should be filed with the Secretary, as payments not made as subscriber in all liability. If mare entered and proves barren or has dead foal, entry is void, and money paid will be returned; otherwise entry follows colt. Three quarters of a mile.

Entries to close with Secretary Jan. 1, 1896.

Training
The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, galloping, driving, keeping racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm."

FOR SALE.

A FINE DOUBLE TEAM OF FAST TROTTERS.

A splendid pair of roadsters, one of the finest buggy teams in the city, is offered for sale. They are well-bred, fast, stylish, and perfectly gentle—safe for a lady to drive. In breeding they cannot be excelled, being of the most fashionable strains. Any gentleman wanting a last team will find a bargain in this pair of trotting horses. They are only four years old, and, being untrained, will continue to develop speed by careful handling. They are slightly below medium size, but of strong conform and perfectly sound. This team may be seen at the Dexter Prince Stable, 1509 Grove street, near Baker. They will be sold at a low price.

ALSO FOR SALE

Fast Roadsters, Race and Business Horses

BRED AT THE

NAPA STOCK FARM,

Napa, Cal. By purchasing directly from the breeder one ensures getting sound and serviceable animals at lowest prices. Colts and fillies are offered for sale by that great young sire, PILOT PRINCE; also by Dexter Prince, Sidney, Victor, 2:22, Grandissimo, 2:23, George Washington, 2:16, El Benton, 2:23; Don Marvin, 2:22, etc. These have all been bred at the Napa Stock Farm and are out of first-class mares.

Promising colts of tried speed lines will be supplied to trainers at very low prices. A large number now ready for track work are offered for sale.

Bredmares are also offered for sale by Woodmire, 2:16, Dawn, 2:18, Grandissimo, 2:23, Dexter Prince Hawthorne, Arthurhorn, Nautub, etc.

A feature is also made of supplying good livery and business horses for city use.

All stock guaranteed sound and as represented. Having been raised on the improved pastures of the Napa Stock Farm they have the best of feet and legs and will therefore stand hard work. All stock sold from this farm has given the best of satisfaction. Bargains are offered to all desiring to purchase good stock of any kind.

"Gold Dust" Smokeless Shot Gun Powder.

THE BEST SHOT GUN POWDER MADE.

Its claims for superiority are as follows:—

- FIRST It is not affected by heat, cold, moisture or age, and will not detonate.
- SECOND It will not cause headache.
- THIRD It is under all conditions the safest powder in use, as it contains no nitro-glycerine or gun cotton. It will not explode unless confined and ignited by fire, as in the loaded shell in the gun.
- FOURTH It has a light recoil and great velocity.
- FIFTH It is the quickest and has the greatest killing power at any distance.
- SIXTH It gives the best pattern at any and all distances.
- SEVENTH Its action is the most uniform in all respects.
- EIGHTH It can be used in cheap paper, or brass shells with any primer.
- NINTH It is the cleanest powder in use, and if the gun is not cleaned for weeks after using, a dry cloth is all that is required for that purpose, when it will be noticed that there is no corrosive action, but, on the contrary, the residue has preserved the metal. The residue does not accumulate with long continued shooting, there being no more after fifty shots than after the first. (After shooting other powders, the gun barrels should be wiped out and cleaned before using "GOLD DUST.")
- TENTH It is the cheapest powder to use, as every package sold contains full weight (16 oz. to the lb.); and each pound contains more than double the number of loads to the same bulk of any other powder (with the exception of one brand, which sportsmen generally hesitate to use, considering it dangerous).

¹Address delivered before the California State Veterinary Association by R. A. Archibald, V. S., of San Francisco.

When we say that this is one of the most important subjects we could submit for your consideration, we feel sure you will not contradict us. There is no disease of the foot so prevalent or so disastrous in its results as the one under consideration, and further, that the disease is due to the universal ignorance that usually attends civilization, gives it still more importance in our estimation.

Those of us who are thoroughly conversant with the intricate, anatomical structure of the horse's foot, realize that it may be classed as one of the most important organs of the horse. While the laity, on the other hand, look upon the horse's foot much the same as they would look upon a mechanical contrivance composed of inorganic matter, therefore it behooves us who purport to be anatomists and practical veterinarians to be versed on the anatomical structure and physiological properties of the horse's foot, so we can be prepared at any and all times to disabuse the erroneous ideas promulgated by prominent horseshoers, jockeys, etc.

With this end in view we have no apology to offer for entertaining into the anatomy and physiology of the horse's foot before proceeding to consider the disease in question.

In reviewing the anatomy of the equine foot we shall more particularly describe that portion of it which pertains directly to our subject, and shall only casually refer to contiguous structures.

The foot contains the following structures: First, the third phalanx, navicular bone and the lower third of the second phalanx; these bones form the articulation of the foot. Second, the ligaments which bind the bones together. Third, a portion of the tendons of the flexor pedis and extensor pedis perforans. Fourth, the complementary apparatus of the foot, consisting of the lateral cartilages and the plantar cushion. Fifth, the matrix of the hoof or the keratogenous membrane, which is a continuation of the derma or true skin which clothes the digital region. To these parts already enumerated may be added the blood vessels, nerves, etc.

Believing you to be familiar with the anatomical disposition of the above named structures, we shall not enter into a description of them, but shall proceed to a description of the hoof, the structure and disposition of which we think we can safely say is not understood by twenty-five per cent of practicing veterinarians at the present day.

Considered as a whole, the equine foot may be represented as a kind of box which protects the inferior portion of the digit or sensitive foot, by fitting intimately to the keratogenous membrane in a manner familiar to all.

Its shape is uniquely demonstrated by Bracy Clark, as that of the moiety of a cylinder cut obliquely across its middle and resting on the surface of the section; however in nearly all feet the shape is conical rather than cylindrical.

If we macerate the horny foot for a long time in water we find there in the following structures:—The wall, sole and frog.

The wall or crust is that portion which is seen when the foot rests on the ground. It covers the anterior portion of the foot, passes round on each side to the bulbs of the plantar cushion, where its extremities are sharply inflected inwards between the frog and the internal border of the sole, becoming confounded with the sole about its middle or anterior third.

The anterior part of the wall is commonly known as the toe, the sides of which are known as the inside and outside toes. The lateral region constitute the quarters. The heels are formed by the angles of the inflection of the wall's extremities, while the extremities passing along the inner border of the sole are called the bars.

With the structure of the wall and its manner of attachment we shall have nothing to say but will proceed to briefly describe the sole and frog.

The sole is a thick horny plate comprised between the inner border of the wall and the bars, it thus occupies the interior face of the foot as a V shaped structure.

The frog is a mass of horn, pyramidal in shape lodged between the bars filling up the triangular space. The base of the frog contributes to the heels; there are two round flexible and elastic eminences formed by its extremities and separated by the cleft of the frog, these cover the angles of inflection of the walls and continued round the superior portion of the wall in the form of a band, which is called the coronary frog band or perioplic band.

Let us now consider the physiological function of the foot:—

Upon our first glance at the foot of the horse we are surprised at its size in proportion to the size of the body, but upon careful consideration of its structure and mechanism, we arrive at the conclusion that the equine foot as far as size is concerned with that of the biped, the advantage certainly lies on the side of the quadruped. Though the equine foot presents to the casual abserver a small circumference, yet in reality, as we shall show later on, it incloses a vast area.

We will first consider the nutrition of the foot. The foot is one of the most vascular organs of the entire body. The enormous amount of blood sent to it is necessary for the purpose of producing the needful quantity of horn, even the bones of the foot are so constructed that they can accommodate a large quantity of blood.

Owing to the foot being situated at the lowest part of the body we are led to inquire why it is that the blood is able to circulate through it so thoroughly, and if the heart receives any assistance in facilitating the circulation. The arterial blood pressure of the foot is very great owing to the fact that the arterial walls are very elastic and gravity assists the heart in sending arterial blood to the foot, but though the action of the heart is sufficient to bring the blood back from the rest of the body it is doubtful whether it would be wholly able to empty the foot of venous blood.

The venous circulation is assisted by the movements of the foot, the expansion and contraction of its posterior half and the descent and elevation of the inner foot under pressure of the body.

This is demonstrated by the fact that when a plantar vein is severed, every time the foot is placed on the ground expansion occurs and the jet of blood is considerably increased, and when the foot is taken off the ground and jet of blood decreases. Further there are no valves in the veins of the foot and none are found until near the middle of the pattern, and still further the large veins of the posterior part of the foot pass through or are in close connection with the lateral cartilages.

Our conclusions are therefore that the circulation is largely facilitated by the expansion and contraction of the posterior part of the foot during expansion of the blood being drawn upwards and during contraction of the veins relaxing aspirate the blood into their interior.

Therefore, if the expansion and contraction of the foot is impaired, the circulation of the foot is impaired, causing a diminished nutritive supply to the hoof.

We shall now consider the means whereby the weight of the body is supported within the hoof. It is a recognized fact that this function is performed by the union of the horny with the sensitive laminae. The fact that the enormous weight of the equine body should be supported by these minute slips of sensitive and horny laminae is truly wonderful, and it is beyond doubt the most remarkable feature in the physiology of the foot.

The horse's weight is supported in the foot by the dovetailing of hundreds of sensitive and horny laminae; this union is made still more complete by each primary sensitive and horny laminae containing a hundred or more secondary laminae. These laminae afford an immense surface of support. They are more numerous at the heel than at the toe, the proportion being about one to twenty, that is necessary as the amount of pressure is far greater at the heel than at the toe. Anteriorly the laminae are attached to the pedal bone, but posteriorly they are attached to the lateral cartilages, the tendon of the extensor pedis and the lateral ligaments of the foot joint. About one half of the attachments are osseous, the other half cartilaginous, and the cartilaginous portion is situated just where elasticity is required—at the posterior face of the wall.

But little weight is placed on the sole of the foot with the exception of the marginal portion where it becomes united to the wall. Remembering that the sole is, or should be, concave, we can readily see that it must have some other function besides weight-bearing to perform; its function is to protect the sensitive sole and pedal bone.

The following up of the sensitive and horny laminae in the foot as the leaves of a book has another function to perform besides supporting weight and uniting the horny covering of the foot. It is owing to the fact that the bearing surface of the foot should be proportionate to the size of the body. In other words the foot is kept within small proportions without affecting its stability. Take a book for instance, it is made to occupy a bulk representing but a few inches, but if each page be laid out and made to touch one another the surface covered will be considerable. This is exactly what occurs in the foot.

The bearing surface—calculated by numerous authorities—afforded by each foot, is equivalent to about eight square feet, affording a total area for all four feet of thirty-two square feet.

If any doubt exists as to the function of the laminae in supporting the weight of the body, we have only to call your attention to the condition sometimes caused by laminitis, where there is separation of the horny from the sensitive laminae, when the horse's weight, being no longer supported by the walls, the pedal bone is forced through the sole of the foot.

The arrangements which exist to save the foot from concussion are numerous. There is the elastic and india rubber-like horny frog, the plantar cushion, the lateral cartilages and the descent of the sensitive foot within its horny covering.

There are some people who deny that the foot descends and the posterior wall expands, but we shall demonstrate later on that the foot does expand and descend. The necessity of such function should be apparent to all.

The foot comes to the ground either flat or frog first. When an animal walks it comes to the ground flat or nearly so, but in the trot or faster paces the frog comes to the ground first.

The frog not only saves the leg from concussion but it gives the foot a grip on the ground, preventing slipping. It also in connection with the plantar cushion protects the navicular bursa. It is essential, therefore, that the frog should consistently come in contact with the ground. In this respect it is entirely different from the sole even though they are so closely situated. If the frog be kept off the ground the parts atrophy, the heels contract, the foot becomes smaller and the frog becomes diseased. We can see, therefore, that is highly essential when shoeing to give the frog a chance to exercise its natural functions.

Concussion at the anterior part of the foot is prevented by a rolling motion through the medium of the laminae and elastic tissue found in that region, the sole also slightly descends nearer the ground but should not touch.

Let us further examine the functions of the wall. We have already seen that the wall supports the weight of the horse's body and not the sole. On further examination we find that the wall is thicker at the toe than at the heel. It is thickest at the toe to guard against the wear and tear of the foot at that part. The toe is the last part of the foot to leave the ground, and as the propulsion given to the foot is given by the toe, we can readily see how necessary it is that the wall should be thicker at that part.

The object of the wall becoming thinner towards the heel is to allow expansion and contraction to take place.

We will now observe the varying degrees of toughness and elasticity as provided for in the foot. The anterior part of the wall is longer than the posterior, consequently the anterior part is tougher than the posterior, for the reason that the horn is much older at the extremity of the toe than at the heel, and it is further away from the coronet, and therefore contains less moisture. The wall at the heel is some months younger than at the toe, it is thinner and contains more moisture, therefore it is more elastic but not so tough. This is a point that should be remembered when we come to the shoeing of the foot. The age of the wall is just as important as the thickness, etc. The horn at the toe being older than the horn at the heel, it provides against friction during progression, while the young, moist horn at the heel allows expansion to take place.

The expansion of the wall is aided by the lateral cartilages which carry outward the dovetailed arrangements which unite the laminae. At the heels the wall is turned in or inflected to form the bars, their function being to support weight, for which purpose they are united to the sensitive foot by means of sensitive and insensitive laminae.

We have already considered certain functions of the lateral cartilages, but we do not think it would be out of place to summarize our knowledge of their functions. First, they form an elastic wall to the sensitive foot, and afford an attachment to the sensitive laminae. Second, as the foot increases in size the cartilages carry outward the sensitive laminae, which are attached to them and so prevent any disturbance of the union of the horny and sensitive laminae. Third, as large veins pass through and close to the cartilages of the foot, the movements of the cartilages assist in the venous circulation. The function of the cartilages has light thrown on it by disease processes. When these elastic structures become ossified lameness occurs, and we believe that some of you gentlemen have seen us perform a simple surgical operation, which relieves a large percentage of cases and which demonstrates that it is possible, by surgical interference, to make the horny foot larger, and thereby render it capable of accommodating without inconvenience to the animal, lateral cartilages which have become ossified and thereby increased in size. This operation, you will readily see, is based on physiological principles. The object, therefore, of having lateral cartilages at the posterior portion of the foot is to admit of expansion.

As navicular disease is often a sequel of contracted feet, we propose to dwell a short time on a description of the navicular bursa.

As you well know that the os pedis has a very small articular surface, much smaller than the surface that rests upon it. In order to increase this surface a sesamoid bone is added which is known as the navicular bone, by this means the os corona rests on the pedal bone which is rigid and unyielding anteriorly and on the navicular bone which is yielding posteriorly. The navicular bone is supported by the perforans tendon, this fact leads us to believe that pressure from the weight of the body above and the tendon below is the chief etiological factor in the production of navicular arthritis, more especially where navicular arthritis is a sequel to contracted feet. We can more readily understand this when we remember that the navicular bone is unlike other sesamoids inasmuch as it does not act in the capacity of a pulley, but rather as a flexible articulation upon which the weight of the body comes before it is transferred to the pedal bone.

By a careful consideration of the foot you will find that a like arrangement exists clear through it.—An elastic posterior and a rigid anterior. It is such a physiological arrangement that facilitates circulation and destroys concussion.

We shall now proceed to the consideration of the elasticity and distensibility of the foot.

It has been amply demonstrated by anatomists and physiologists that when weight is placed on the feet the heels expand.

Prof. Lechner of Vienna was one of the leaders in the study of the horse's foot. He employed in his investigations a most ingenious instrument, which chiefly consisted of an electric current and bell.

The Professor along with other noted scientists reached the following conclusions:

1st.—That the foot when raised is smaller at the plantar surface than when it is resting on the ground.

2nd.—Dilatation of the plantar border augments with the velocity of the gait.

3rd.—The inside heel dilates more than the outside.

4th.—The heels of the hind feet dilate less than the heels of the front feet in the same animal.

5th.—The coronary border dilates at the same time as the plantar border.

5th.—Healthy or diseased feet dilate above, under pressure.

7th.—The dilation of the posterior part of the foot causes a shortening of the foot.

8th.—The dilation of the plantar part of the foot varies with the form of the foot. In angular narrow feet it increases towards the quarters and diminishes towards the heels.

9th.—Normal dilation is not complete in shod feet.

10th.—Suppleness of the hoof and integrity of the frog are necessary for normal and complete dilation of the foot.

11th.—Shoeing and dryness of the hoof interfere with the movements of the foot.

12th.—In contracted feet there is a certain dilatation of the quarters, but the heels not only do not take part in the dilatation, but on the contrary retract slightly.

The above-mentioned scientist with others demonstrated that the dilatation of the normal foot under pressure, dilates from the coronet to the ground surface from 1.20 to 3.20 of an inch.

Some investigators claim that when the foot is placed on the ground, there is dilatation of the coronary portion with a retraction of the plantar edge of the heels producing a rotation of the posterior extremities of the walls. We are of the opinion, however, that these investigators must have conducted their experiments on feet that were slightly contracted, as there is no doubt that slightly contracted feet do rotate at the heels and this rotation is an important factor in increasing the disease.

The above evidence amply demonstrates that the heels of a normal foot dilate under pressure when the animal is standing, and more so when it places increased weight on the foot during progression. When the weight comes on the foot, it is received by the posterior part of the foot, that is to say on the posterior wall, bars and frog through the plantar cushion, etc. The posterior wall is pressed outward by the compressed india rubber frog and it expands from the coronet to the ground surface.

We can safely conclude that anything that interferes with the dilatation of the hoof must produce an abnormal condition and must interfere with the function of the blood vessels and nerves contained within the foot, causing diminished nutrition, producing atrophy of the tissues and pain due to pressure on the nerves. When any interference with the dilatation of the foot is permanent it produces a diminution of the size of that organ. This reduction in size may be general, including the entire foot or local including only one or both heels. This is the condition known as contracted feet.

Contraction of the feet is evidenced by a decrease in the size of the horny covering of the foot. It may or may not be attended by lameness. It may be total or partial. In total contraction the entire foot is diminished in size, usually accompanied by increased concavity of the sole, an atrophied condition of the frog and the approach of the wall at the quarters and heel towards a more vertical position. The surface of the wall is dry and shows superficial ridges and cracks.

In partial contraction the abnormality is confined to the heels. Contraction may be either unilateral or symmetrical, that is to say, one or both sides may be affected. In regard to symmetrical contraction, it may be congenital; in such a case it should hardly be considered a morbid condition and a condition that will hardly yield to treatment, but while it may not be classed as a diseased foot it undoubtedly predisposes to all other troubles which are found as a result of contraction from other causes.

Etiology.—In some cases it is very easy to determine the cause of contraction, but there are cases so complicated with other lesions that it is absolutely impossible to determine which is the cause or which is the effect. For the reason that the secondary effects or sequels of contraction are lesions which, occurring in a healthy leg, would produce contraction as a complication.

Race is a predisposing cause of contraction. There are certain breeds of horses that are more subject to the disease than others.

Heredity is also claimed by some to be an important etiological factor. It is even claimed that horses who have acquired contracted feet may transmit the defect to their progeny; if so, such animals should be excluded from the stud.

Climate.—Hot, dry weather, tends to favor the evaporation of moisture from the horny foot. This favors contraction by diminishing the elasticity of the foot.

Stabulation affects the hygroscopicity of the hoof to a great extent, more especially if the foot is exposed to alternate dryness and excessive moisture, consequently the perioplic fluid does not retain its normal relations to the hoof.

Inaction, which is the result of stabulation, diminishes the moisture of the hoof, owing to the fact that the circulation of the foot is impaired, consequently there is diminished nutrition.

Leaving shoes on too long alters the conformation of the foot. Not dressing the foot when the animal is inactive for a long time. At Alfort, France, there is a specimen in the museum of a stallion's hoof which is turned up like a horn. This condition was due to the fact that the stallion was the subject of a legal controversy, and was kept in a stall for twelve months with the same shoes on.

The pernicious habit of blacksmiths rasping the wall of the foot after shoeing diminishes the hygroscopic power of the hoof, and hot shoes applied for any length of time produces a like result.

The vicious system of cutting away or thinning the bars or opening the heels, as it is called, removes the natural support of the quarters and heels. Tight-fitting shoes preventing expansion of the heels and driving nails too near the heels, all favor contraction.

Disease of the posterior structures of the leg causes pain; as a result the animal will favor the foot, more especially the heel, producing inaction of the foot, resulting in diminished circulation and atrophy. In fact, pain in the leg or foot from any cause is an important etiological factor in the production of contraction.

Paring the foot more on one side than on the other not only causes contraction, but injures nearly all other lesions to which the foot and leg is subject. Uneven shoeing is also a cause, and so on there are a great many other causes too numerous to mention that favor to a greater or less extent contraction.

Symptoms.—Are usually sufficiently pathognomonic to allow any person to recognize them. There is alteration of form. If only one foot is affected the affected one will be smaller; if both feet are affected they will be of unequal sizes. The foot takes on an oval appearance, the heel becomes higher, the frog is atrophied and thrush is very often present. The concavity of the sole is increased, the wall becomes hard, dry and brittle, and presents an uneven, rolling surface and has a hard, shiney appearance. The bars, if they have not been removed by the blacksmith, approach a more vertical position. Lameness may or may not be present, but the animal will usually point the affected foot. If there is pain present the animal will paw and be very uneasy while in the stable. When taken out of the stable the lameness, if present, will usually warm out, and the animal will travel sound. Atrophy of the muscles of leg and shoulder constituting sweeney is in some cases a prominent symptom.

Diagnosis.—To the practical veterinarian it is not a difficult matter to diagnose a case of contraction, nor is it difficult to determine the extent of the lesion, or whether the contraction is unilateral or symmetrical, but it is generally a difficult matter to determine whether contraction is the cause of lameness or the effect, and it is very important that the practitioner should reach a conclusion whether the disease is an original one or a sequel.

It is in the majority of cases impossible to diagnose contraction by direct diagnosis or diagnosis by conformation, consequently we have to depend on indirect diagnosis or diagnosis by exclusion in order to reach a conclusion. In other words we have to look for all other lesions that might produce the symptoms indicated, excluding those not found present. If by this means we can discover no other disease we can safely and reasonably come to the conclusion that contraction is the lesion we are called upon to relieve. In some cases however, the above examination must be continued for several days before a definite diagnosis may be reached.

Prognosis.—Depends to a great extent upon the duration of the disease and the amount of structural change that has taken place in the foot. When you have general or true contraction it is nearly impossible to suppose that the foot can regain its normal condition. While partial contraction in the majority of cases can be remedied, as the foot possesses an enormous amount of resisting and recuperating properties. In most cases however tentative treatment should be applied before a definite diagnosis be given, as apparently mild cases will sometimes prove very obstinate and severe cases in which the deformity is excessive will make a wonderful recovery if rational treatment be applied.

Complications.—A paper of this nature would be incomplete did we not refer to some of the complications attending contraction. The most important complication is navicular arthritis, with atrophy and ulceration of the bone. This lesion as we have stated in another part of our paper, when it exists as a complication is due we believe to pressure on the navicular bone from the body above and the tendon of the perforans and the unyielding foot below. Corns are often caused by contraction, due to lateral pressure bruising the podophyllous tissue. Quittor may be caused by defective nutrition, also greasy heels, thrush, etc. Ringbones, sidebones, windgalls, etc, may be caused by the unnatural position assumed by an animal affected by contraction, causing strain of the ligaments. Contraction and degeneration of the tendons may be caused by inaction. Atrophy of the muscles of the leg and shoulder due also to inaction. Interfering may also be classed as a probable result. Scars, produced by the firing iron and blisters, from the scapula to the coronet. All these complications and more may follow contraction.

Pathological Changes.—In another part of this paper the external changes have been mentioned as symptoms. In addition to these external changes there is found upon post-mortem examination an atrophied condition of the natural structures of the foot. The plantar cushion is atrophied and contains a large quantity of fibrous tissue. The podophyllous laminae are diminished in size. The pedal and navicular bone may in badly contracted feet be atrophied.

Treatment.—May be divided into preventative and curative.

Preventive treatment is very important and should commence with the foal when running with its dam. Foals born in the late fall or winter are often forced to stand on dry floors. This extracts the moisture from the cushions of the feet, prior to the development of the wall and frog. This is often sufficient to start contraction before the animal has had, you might say, a start in life. Even foals born in the spring or summer, when housed in the winter, have no opportunity of wearing down the growth of horn and are turned out the following spring with deformed hoofs.

From the time the animal is born the feet should receive attention; they should be dressed in a rational manner with the rasp or knife when any defect appears. If it be necessary to house in the winter time, good, clean, dirt floors should be provided and plenty of exercise should be permitted. If the feet become brittle, whether the animal be old or young, they should be treated so as to bring them to their normal hygroscopicity. When an animal is to remain for any length of time at rest, from want of use, illness, lameness or for any reason, the feet should receive immediate and constant attention, more especially in cases of lameness, for in this case the animal will keep all weight off the affected foot, the circulation will be impaired, then nutrition to the horn is diminished, the moisture already in the walls evaporates and the foot necessarily contracts.

Carelessness in the use of water-baths and poultices remove a great amount of moisture from the horn, and they have a tendency to destroy the natural varnish on the outside wall, and unless precautionary measures are immediately used they are apt to leave the foot dryer than it was before they were applied. Some hoof preparations are detrimental, owing to the fact that they become rancid and produce a decomposing effect. When any hoof preparation is used the foot should be thoroughly washed clean from the previous application before a fresh one is applied. There are, however, numerous preparations which are beneficial when used with judgment and there are cases where it is absolutely necessary to use some preparation. But the most important preventative treatment of all is the proper application of the shoes. If the foot be kept perfectly level, giving the frog and heel proper bearing to admit of elasticity of the foot, nature will then through the circulation, bring the proper nutrition and normal emollients to the surface of the keratogenous portions of the foot.

Curative Treatment.—Much that we have said in connection with preventative treatment is also applicable to the curative treatment of contraction. When we are called to treat a case of contraction we should first see to the conditions of the flooring and bedding of the stall. The amount of moisture which comes in contact with the feet should be regulated. In fact the entire hygienic surroundings should receive attention. The foot should receive a careful examination in order that the nature and the extent of the contraction can be ascertained. Some practitioners even go so far—and we believe it to be a good practice—as to take the measurement of the foot, so if the shoeing is left in the hands of a blacksmith, they can determine from time to time the exact amount of gain. For this purpose they use an instrument called a podometer. This instrument is very useful inasmuch as you can determine the level of the sole and heels and the angle of the walls at any part of the foot.

In mild cases of contraction where there is not much deformity, the foot should be leveled and the heels relieved of pressure. In more severe cases, however, the deformity should be remedied. The change should be made gradually, as too sudden a change might be attended by disastrous results.

Special shoes are sometimes used to advantage, which by the addition of springs, screws, etc., force the heels apart, but such appliances should be used with utmost caution, so as not to produce inflammatory results. The choice of shoe depends a great deal upon where the animal is to be treated, whether he is to be treated at the practitioner's sanitarium, at work or at the stable of the owner. If treated at the owners' stable where the practitioner can see it but rarely the treatment must be mild and calculated to be long continued. On the other hand, if the practitioner has the case under his personal supervision, more heroic treatment may be indulged in.

We will now consider some of the principal methods of bringing about a cure.

1.—Taking off shoes and lowering the heels to obtain as much frog pressure as possible. This method of treatment can only be applied to animals which are to do nothing. When it is necessary to work the animal and at the same time give frog pressure the following shoes may be used to advantage: The half shoe or the three-quarter shoe. These shoes prevent wear and tear at the toe and at the same time do not interfere with the elasticity of the heels and they admit of frog pressure just as much as where no shoe is used.

Bar shoes when properly made are very beneficial in some cases, more especially where the frog is badly atrophied.

A shoe in which the nails are only driven on one side of the foot has some supporters, it allows of free expansion at the heels, but in our estimation it is not a very practical contrivance.

A shoe in which the branches are beveled outward is claimed by some to have beneficial results.

The Charlier shoe can be recommended, but it is only applicable to a certain class of horses and is an expensive method of shoeing.

Articulated shoes have been used to a great extent on the European Continent, but for our part we cannot recommend them.

In badly contracted feet the Defay's expanding shoe can be, we believe, be used to advantage in the hands of a careful operator, but the case must be where the practitioner can give it his personal supervision.

There are expanding shoes furnished with fixed screws and springs, all of which perhaps have merit, but as we have already stated they should be used with caution and replaced as soon as possible with a plain shoe.

When the frog is badly atrophied and the bar shoe is not applicable, a contrivance called the "Neverslip Horseshoe Pad," may be used to advantage. This consists of an india-rubber frog attached to a piece of sole leather.

When you have contraction complicated by side bones, the operation of guttering the walls of the quarters in an oblique angle to the fibers of the wall, followed by the application of a blister and a har shoe is attended by beneficial results.

There are many other methods of treating contracted feet but it would draw out this paper to an unnecessary length in order to enumerate all of them.

Before concluding permit us to make a few remarks on physiological shoeing.

By bearing in mind the functions of the different parts of the foot, we can certainly reduce the evil effects of shoeing to a comparatively narrow limit, and in a few words we will sum up what constitutes physiological shoeing.

First—Reduction of the wall to its proper proportions, such as would have occurred by friction had no shoe been worn.

Second—Fitting the shoe accurately to the outline of the foot, not altering the foot to fit the shoe. Rasping away the crest to fit the shoe not only renders the horn brittle but is so much loss of bearing surface.

Third—Leaving the wall intact as far as its varnish-like layer is concerned. The pernicious practice of rasping the wall for appearance sake destroys the horn tubes and allows so much evaporation from the surface of the foot that the wall becomes brittle.

Fourth—The sole not to be touched by the knife, it cannot be too thick, as it is for the purpose of protection.

Fifth—The bars not to be cut away, they are part of the wall, and are intended to carry weight, the shoe should rest on them.

Sixth—The frog to be uncut and left to attain its full growth, which can only occur by resting on the ground. No frog can perform its functions unless on a level with the ground surface of the shoe.

Seventh—The pattern of shoe is immaterial, provided it has a true level bearing and rests well and firmly on the wall and bars. We believe the simpler the shoe the better, that is to say, one that is plain on the ground and foot surface, to be retained with as few nails as possible, as nails destroy the horn and they should not be driven too high up, as nails driven too high are ruinous to the hoof.

We have no apology to offer for the length of this paper, for we realize that in order to do justice to a subject like this the paper should be much longer than we have made it. However, we have carefully considered this subject, and we trust and hope that we shall be able, as we are willing, to answer any and all questions that may be propounded to us by you gentlemen. In the meantime we thank you for your kind attention, and we solicit your pardon if we have unintentionally wearied you.

We Must Have a New Organization.

[Written for BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

The National and American Trotting Associations have held their meetings and adjourned. As was anticipated, nothing was done looking towards the revision of the rules, whereby horsemen might have more protection. On the other hand, however, several decisions were rendered which go a long way to show that there is need for a new organization. When the American Trotting Association started, it was claimed by opponents of the measure that two associations could not live, that it would be a case of survival of the fittest. On the other hand, the evils when existing in the National were to be remedied; the new organization was to right all wrongs and instead of an arbitrary body, with the accumulation of a large surplus and declaration of large dividends as a primary object, it was to be conducted in such manner as would provide a protection for all who came under its rule, whether horsemen or associations. Some changes for the better were made in the manner of doing business. New rules were incorporated, old ones revised, and so long as they were adhered to, few complaints were made. As time wore on, By-laws were ignored, the American Trotting Association became a money-making body, and practices which had come so near causing the annihilation of the National Trotting Associations were indulged in and to-day we have demanded from all sections of the country, from all classes and conditions the people interested in harness racing, that a change of some kind be made. It is not very long ago that an Occidental Association was in existence upon this coast. It is not the time or place to discuss why it ceased to perform the objects of its organization. The circumstances are such, the demands for relief so great, that the thought is presented, would it not be a good thing to revive the old organization or incorporate a new one?

Its territory might be enlarged and its usefulness felt, if necessary beyond the Rockies. The horsemen of this coast, are as fully cognizant of the evils existing in the National and American rules, as any can possibly be and in the formulations of new rules, with their aid, advantage could be taken of the mistakes or failures of the old associations and protection given to horsemen and local organizations alike. There is room for another parent organization. The territory now occupied by the two old associations is too great for either or both to handle, as they now do. The increased number of racing associations, horsemen and horses demands that something be done to remedy the ill. The Occidental trotting association, properly organized, with rules to protect every interest, would be a move in a direction toward the solution of this whole problem, and while doing good in its own territory, indirectly, it would keep all, for the present organizations in order to do business, would be compelled to legislate along the same lines. The great army of horsemen who are today under the ban of suspension, would hail such a movement as their salvation and would enter horses at such meetings as floated the banner of the new association and through their influence, which must not be under-rated, could get many memberships as far east as the Missouri River should such be desirable. The organization or re-organization of the Occidental Association contemplates many radical changes not only in the government of horsemen and Associations, but in the entire harness horse industry and it should not be handled too hastily. The varied interests at stake demands that the best and brightest thought should be given from the different standpoints and as the convention which has been called for next month, will be composed of representative men from each interest, why would it not be wise to devote a portion of the time to the consideration of this question?

INGLESIDE TRACK, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 20.

BUT five races were on the card to-day, but the talent had had enough of it by the time those were run off, and the bookies, on the contrary, were willing, aye anxious to keep the hall a-rolling. Favorites were bowled over from early in the game up to the last race, and the courteous gentlemen of leather lungs had a very lucrative day of it. The first choice in the first race was the only one to secure winning brackets.

The track was in the worst condition of any day yet. The exceedingly heavy rain of Thursday night beat the mud down until the surface of the track was perfectly smooth and the water ran off the surface. Then a cold, drying north wind, that set in early, had the effect of drying off the top to some extent. The result was a very heavy, sticky track.

The attendance was very good, and though the air was cool in unprotected spots, the grandstand was in a flood of sunshine all afternoon.

The first race, a six furlong selling event, went to Bueno, a good thing that was backed into favoritism by stable money. W. L. Munson, Imp. Crighton and Zoolein had opened on even terms with the winner at four, the former closed at three but the other two receded. Pecksniff, Masoero and Skalkaho also were at their shortest odds at opening. Zoolein set the pace at the half-pole, where he was collared by Bueno, and the latter showed the way home. W. L. Munson headed Bueno in the stretch, but Macklin did not let up in his efforts and got his mount across the wire first by a nose. Zoolein was third two and a half lengths away. Time, 1:20. Winner El Primero's blk c, by Hidalgo—Bertie W.

The second race at a mile and an eighth saw a neat upset. Cadmus was a 7 to 10 favorite, Julia O. second choice at 4 to 1 and Trix next at 6 to 1. The others were from 10 to 100 to 1. The start was a good one, and when the bunch passed the stand Silverado was in the lead, Julia O. in second place. Cadmus and Trix started around their field as soon as the hackstretch was reached, and were soon challenging the leaders. Silverado chucked it on the far turn, but Julia O. kept on her way, and as Cadmus shook off Trix and set sail for the Outcast filly, Garner let out a wrap, and Julia increased her pace. She came into the stretch with a good lead, but Cadmus seemed to be gaining on her. Half way home the Spreckels' horse was in difficulties, and Willie Martin went to the hat. Julia O. came on and won easily by two lengths, though she swerved to the outer rail badly and looked as though she would foul Cadmus. Trix was a poor and tired third, fifteen lengths away. Time, 2:16. Winner D. A. Honig's b f, 3, by Outcast—Malva R.

Ramiro was a hot favorite in the third race, and Highland was a very tropical second choice. They ruled on even terms for awhile, but finally closed at the prices quoted above. Roma was at 5, Miss Maxim 10 and Tenacity 30 to 1. The race was at a mile, and a poor start was affected. Miss Maxim secured the rail at the turn and led to the three quarter pole, where Ramiro headed her and led into the stretch, with Highland next up. Miss Maxim bugged the rail, while Ramiro and Highland turned wide and came down on the outside. They raced along together till near the wire, when Tenacity joined them, coming like a whirlwind, and in a furious drive the three finished heads apart, Tenacity first, Highland second and Ramiro third. Time, 1:46½. Winner E. Corrigan's b c, 2, by Longfellow—Modesty.

Miss Brummel was favorite all the time in the fourth race at six furlongs and closed at 7 to 10. Kowalsky was at 3, Wm. Pinkerton 10, and the others from 12 to 60 to 1. Kowalsky showed well in front to a bad start, and set a hot pace, steadily increased this lead till he was nearly half a dozen lengths in front of his field. Miss Brummel, off sixth, was sent after him and before the turn was reached overhauled Ida H. Kowalsky had no trouble to keep his field off and won easily by two lengths. Miss Brummel coming fast, was four lengths in front of Wm. Pinkerton. Time 1:18½. Winner E. Corrigan's br c by Isaac Murphy—Derochment.

The last race saw another upset. Circe was played down from 8 to 1 to 11 to 5, no doubt somewhat influenced by Garner having the mount, but Foremost was looked on as ready money by most of the ring. Jack Richelieu, at 6 to 1, was the winner by a length, with Fred Garner second, five lengths in front of Foremost. Circe had led to the far turn, where Jack Richelieu headed her, then she backed up. Foremost held third position throughout the journey, Fred Gardner having followed Richelieu when Circe was displaced. Time, 1:33. Winner B. Schreiber's b b, 5, by Great Tom Envenom.

Jockeyship honors were monopolized by Garner, with three winners out of five mounts. Macklin and C. Slaughter rode the other two winners.

INGLESIDE TRACK, SATURDAY, DEC. 21.

It was meet and proper that a Rancho del Paso bred colt should win the first running-off of the Haggin stakes, named in honor of the wealthy owner of the magnificent breeding farm in Sacramento county. The track was very much to the liking of Sir Play, and he clearly showed his partiality to a soft track by forging ahead from flag-fall and holding off everything that tried to catch him. The race was called for 3:15, and promptly on time the nine starters filed out to the eighth pole. Sallie Clicquot had been scratched, leaving Sir Play alone to sport the purple, white cap of Green Morris. He ruled favorite and closed at 7 to 5. The Corrigan pair, Can't Dance and Tenacity, were coupled in the betting, and were very warmly supported, closing at 3 to 1. Belle Boyd was at 9, Kamsin and Argentina 10, Grady 15, Caliente 20 and Wm. Pinkerton 25 to 1. Starter Caldwell did not seem able to make any progress towards a send-off, and as the horses appeared tractable enough, the fault must have been with the boys. In fact, it was stated by a gentleman who had gone to the starting point, that the jockeys were doing all they could to worry Mr. Caldwell. On Friday Bob Smith and Sam Doggett were fined $100 each at the post by the starter, and Doggett had said in the presence of Mr. Caldwell that he "didn't have to pay it." Be that as it may, Doggett rode again on Saturday, and it was stated the fines had been remitted. If Mr. Caldwell has lost his whip-hand he will be led a merry race by the mid-gets.

After the horses had been at the post over half an hour it was noticed that Belle Boyd had struck herself on the left hind leg just above the hoof, cutting an artery, which spurted blood everytime she stepped. Garner took her back to the judges' stand and the filly was allowed to be withdrawn and all bets declared off. Twenty minutes was allowed for a new book. Prices ruled about the same, excepting for the Corrigan pair, which shortened up some. Another long delay followed the return to the post, and in all an hour and a half elapsed between the ringing of post bell the first time and the start, which was a perfect one. Pinkerton and Argentina were prominent at once, and Sir Play soon joined them, the three running heads apart as named. Passing the three-quarter pole Sir Play had opened up a gap of three lengths on the other two, and Kamsin had joined the first division. Tenacity and Can't Dance seemed in difficulty from the start, and made a very poor showing, which might be said of Grady, too, as he came in a very poor last. Caliente fell back at once after the start, rallied and passed Tenacity and Grady, then went back again and finished next to last. Sir Play's lead had been reduced to a half-length by Kamsin turning for home, with Argentina three lengths away, she eight lengths in front of Pinkerton. Sir Play was let out a little and won easily by two lengths, Kamsin six lengths before Argentina, third. Time, 1:33½.

The value of the stakes was $1,500 to the winner, $250 to second horse and $100 to third. The winner is G. B. Morris' b g by Sir Modred, out of Plaything, dam of Jou Jou, Fair Play and Tournament, the latter bringing $33,000 at auction as a 2-year-old and winning $107,778 during his turf career. Plaything is by Alarm, out of Pet, and her latest foal is by Salvador G. B. Morris paid $4,200 for Sir Play at the Rancho del Paso yearling sale held in New York in 1894. The colt has run a number of good races, and won three in the East, was second five times, third twice and unplaced but twice, one of the latter in the Garnet Stakes at Cincinnati. He has been started four times here, winning three, and third once, earning in all $2,250 at Ingleside. His winning races here have been over a muddy track, and on a dry one he ran third to Ramiro and Grady.

The first race of the day was at six furlongs, with Road Runner favorite, Outright and Starling next in favor, as named, at short prices. The others at from 12 to 60 to 1. Little Mid showed the way from the start, but was headed at the turn for home by Podiga. Road Runner had kept Little Mid company on the backstretch, but fell back. Podiga won under a drive by a length and a half, and Starling beat Little Mid as far for the place. Time, 1:20. Winner A. Berry's br g, 5, by Powhattan—Cadiga.

Next came a six and a half furlong selling race, with five starters. Doubtful was an even-money favorite, Theresia 3 to 1, Hazard 4½, Walter J. 7 and Pollock 30 to 1. Walter J. acted badly and delayed the start quite awhile, and Theresia reared up and fell over backwards, Chorn sliding off, but being caught and thrown down as the filly fell. Neither horse nor rider were injured. Pollock led at the send off, with Doubtful next up. Before the half-pole was reached Pollock, Walter J., Doubtful and Hazard were running side by side, and Theresia apparently out of it. On the turn, Walter J. led into the stretch, Doubtful second, Hazard third, and Theresia fourth, coming very fast. Pollock dropped out of it. In the run home Hazard overhauled Walter J., and in a desperate finish Theresia passed the latter and was second to Hazard by a neck, a length from Walter J. Time, 1:27½. Winner J. G. Brown & Co's ch c by Strathmore—Zoo Zoo.

The stake race was third on the programme, then came a mile race with seven starters. Libertine and Ferrier were installed on equal terms of 3 to 2, but the latter receded to 3 to 1, while the former closed at 7 to 5. Gallant and Peter II were at 5 to 1, and Flashlight 20, Monita 40, Whitestone 100 to 1. Garner had the mount on Gallant and took him out in front at once and he won as he pleased, finishing three lengths in front of Monita, who had forced his way through from the last one, and beat Ferrier four lengths for the place. Libertine did not show any form, which was a disappointment after his last run in the mud. Time 1:47½. Winner A. B. Spreckels' b c, 3, by Fellowcharm—Jennie Belshaw.

The fifth race was run off in the gathering gloom, and jockeys colors were hardly distinguishable. Service and Clacquer closed on even terms as first choice at 2 to 1, Abi P. was at 7, Pat Murphy 8, Ivy 10, Mamie Scott 12 and Conde 15 to 1. Service made his run through the stretch and won by a head from Pat Murphy, who led almost to the wire. Time, 1:20½. Winner B. Schreiber's b h, 6, by imp. Woodlands—Lady's Maid.

The hurdle race was postponed until Monday, darkness intervening so it could not be run off.

The attendance was very large and betting was spirited. Twenty-two books weighed in, an increase over the last drawing of one.

Chorn landed two winners and C. Slaughter, Macklin and Garner one each.

INGLESIDE, MONDAY, DECEMBER 23.

Ladies' Day again brought out a good attendance of the fair sex, although the cold weather must have kept some away, as the special crowd was not up to the average. In the afternoon an Oregon mist filled the air with moisture, and before evening it turned to a good steady drizzle, and forgotten goloshes and umbrellas were longingly remembered. Betting was lively all afternoon, and the books were very liberal in their offerings. The track had dried out considerably during the night and fair time was made in the earlier races. Favorites and fairly long priced horses divided the honors of the day. Close finishes in three events heightened the interest in the six good races that were run off during the afternoon.

The first race was at six furlongs, selling. Zoolein was an even money favorite at the close, starting 3½ to 1, Zaragoza 6, Little Mid 8, Myron 20 and the balance from 25 to 80 to 1. The favorite was mulish at the post, but after a short delay a good start was made. Ida Sauer showed first. The favorite, on the outside, moved up fast and made a play for the lead, but Myron found his way through and got in front. The rest of the race was between these two, the favorite, under the most vigorous riding through the stretch, and under whip all the way, finally getting the front horse in difficulty. McHugh went to the bat when his mount was collared, but Zoolein was lifted along by Chorn and finished a neck in front. Little Mid was ten lengths behind Myron. Time, 1:19½. Winner B. Schreiber's h, 6, by Zorilla—Fraulien.

The second race was at a mile and a half. Of the six starters Julia O. and Foremost were on about even terms in the betting, the former closing a slight favorite at even money. Fi Fi was very gingerly handled by the bookies at first, and opened at 4 and closed at 3 to 1. Adalante and Ike L. were at 15 to 1. The first mile was a slow one, with Ike L. in front under a pull, the others just keeping along. On the backstretch the field bunched up, and Julia O. began to move up. On the turn Ike L. quit and Foremost was sent after Julia. He could not catch her, as she finished first easily by three lengths, Fi Fi on the inner rail, getting the place by a half length. Time, 2:43. Winner, D. A. Honig's h, 3, by Outcast—Malva R.

A seven-furlong handicap with Adolph Spreckels for favorite at 8 to 9, Ferrier second choice at 13 to 5, was the third number. Miss Maxim was at 3½ and Rosebud 4 to 1. Miss Maxim led from start to finish, and won with the greatest ease. Rosebud did not show any speed. The race was between Spreckels and Ferrier for the place honors, but the former drew away and finished six lengths behind Miss Maxim and three in front of Ferrier. Time, 1:33½. Winner G. B. Morris's h, 3, by imp. Maxim—Ventura.

The postponed hurdle race at a mile and a sixteenth was fourth on the programme. Bellinger and Cicero were coupled in the betting at 6 to 1. J. O. C. was favorite at 3 to 1, Oregon Eclipse closed at 8 and the others were from 10 to 20 to 1. Oregon Eclipse and then Nellie G. were pacemakers for half the journey. Alexis lost his rider at the fourth jump. Coming into the stretch the field were in close order and five took the last jump together. Bellinger, J. O. C. and Cicero made the race for the wire and finished as named, a head between first and second, and two lengths between second and third. Nellie G. was fourth, Oregon Eclipse and Uncertainty fell at the last jump, one on top of the other, but horses and jockeys escaped without serious injury. Time 2:16½. Winner S. C. Hildreth's h, 3, a, by Troubadour—Boscobelle. White Cloud dropped dead at the conclusion of the race.

Pat Murphy was a hot favorite over Lucky Dog in the next event, at six furlongs, selling. The old roan was pace-maker into the stretch, and Lucky Dog showed enough speed to pass him at that stage of the game. Realization came like a cyclone down the stretch and looked all over a winner, but the game Pat Murphy was turned loose again in the last sixteenth and just landed by a head, Realization second three lengths in front of Lucky Dog. Time, 1:8½. Winner A. B. Spreckels' h, 3, by imp. Kyrle Daly—Maggie R.

Cabrillo, R. Van Brunt's Los Angeles Derby winner, at odds of 6 to 1, landed the last race, Jack Richelieu, the 7 to 5 favorite finishing second, beaten by a head, which may be charged to Chorn's very poor ride. Ivy was most prominent in the stretch and looked a winner, but had to be content with third place, finishing a length behind Richelieu. Time, 1:19½. Winner, R. Van Brunt's h, 3, by St. Saviour—Lizzie Hampton.

Winning jockeys to day were Chorn, Garner, Slaughter, Spence, Piggott and Bergen.

INGLESIDE TRACK, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 24.

The weather to-day was beautiful. The north wind cleared the atmosphere and the bright sunshine that flooded the grandstand was of that genial nature that made overcoats and sealskins superfluous and Ingleside was a particularly pleasant spot during the afternoon. The track showed the effects of the drying wind, and was in fair condition for the first race, and improved as the day wore along. Three of the five favorites won their races and second choices took the others. Two close finishes were among the interesting features of the day's sport.

The first race was at six furlongs, selling, Arctic was excused leaving eight starters. Capt. Skedance ruled favorite, and Schnitz was a popular second choice. The others were at from 7 to 100 to 1. E. H. Sherley caught the caller's eye first, but Schnitz had assumed command before the half-pole was reached and maintained it to the end, winning easily by one length. Ike L., second all the way, got the place by five lengths from Maggie. The favorite was not very prominent during the journey and finished fourth. Time, 1:19. Winner C. F. Sander's h, 3, by Panique—Illia.

The second race was a selling event, at seven furlongs. Highland closed a slight favorite over Gallant at 2½ to 1, the latter at 16 to 5. Chartreuse was at 5, George Miller 6, Collins and Our Maggie 8, and Fred Gardner 25 to 1. To a good start, Geo. Miller was first to show and led to the three quarter pole, with Gallant, Our Maggie and Highland all lapped. Gallant shot out in the lead on the far turn and led into the stretch. George Miller dropped back and Collins came very fast, with Our Maggie and Chartreuse after him. Collins looked safe in the last sixteenth, but Gallant came with a great burst of speed and got the judgment by a head, Our Maggie third, half a length in front of Chartreuse. Time, 1:32½. Winner A. B. Spreckels' h, 3, by Fellowcharm—Jennie Belshaw.

Ferris Hartman, a 3-to-2 favorite in the third event, a selling race at six furlongs, ran a game race through the stretch. He did not look to have a ghost of a chance as the field swung for home, but he came on and kept coming, and in the end won in a hard drive by a short neck. Lizzie H. and Walter J. were so close for place as to leave the spectators in doubt but the former's number was hung out. Salishury made the running the first part of the journey. Hazard, who, on form, should have been prominent, was in difficulty before the stretch was reached and Toneno, also with a license to be out in front, was in the ruck the full journey. Lizzie H. and Walter J. were both at 8 to 1. Time 1:19. Winner B. Shreiner's h, 2, by imp. Woodlands—Honora.

The next race, at a mile, had five starters. Kowalsky was an even-money favorite, Semper Lex sold at 2 to 1, Service 7, Daylight 20 and Endymion 60 to 1. The start was a perfect one. Kowalsky secured the rail on the turn and after making a little spurt, was eased up on the backstretch. Daylight and Semper Lex were next in order. Turning for home Kowalsky was loosened up, but he lost valuable ground by a wide turn into the stretch. Service hugged the rail and became a very dangerous opponent before half the distance to the wire was covered. Kowalsky won by a length, however, but it was because the colt so far outclassed everything else that the poor judgment of his jockey was not a sufficient handicap to beat him. Service was second, half a length in front of Semper Lex. Time, 1:45½. Winner E. Corrigan's h, 2, by Isaac Murphy—Derohment.

Montana was the favorite for the last race at six furlongs, closing at 4 to 5, Yemen a 7 to 2 second choice. Montalvo was at 8, May Day and Polaski 15, and Pascador and Fortuna 40 to 1. Montana got away fourth, on the outside and at once began to mow down his field. At the three quarter pole he was in front and from there won as he pleased. Montalvo, third most of the journey, passed Yemen, who had held second place to Montana clear into the stretch, and secured place honors easily. May Day, sixth into the stretch, showed a length in front of the Schreiber horse. Time 1:18½. Winner J. P. Woolman's h, 3, a, by Storey—Uga.

Winning jockeys were C. Slaughter, Piggott, Chorn, Garner and Doggett.

INGLESIDE TRACK, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 25.

There did they come from? was the question asked on all sides at Ingleside to day, as the ten thousand people who had come by every sort of vehicle known looked at the hills surrounding the course and saw them covered by thousands of "outsiders."

The betting ring was thronged, and the sweet voices of twenty-three pencils and the magnetic influence of the chalk marks kept the people digging in their pockets for coin and then exchanging it for pieces of cardboard containing magical mystical figures which to them meant a gain or a loss. The crowd kept moving as the odds were changed, and like an angler playing with a school of fish the wily pencils would chalk up odds that would draw a moving mass near that would overwhelm them with a show of hands.

Back and forth the good natured crowd surged, while upstairs in the grand stand were thousands of ladies dressed in their holiday attire. The same wave of nervous anxiety which, like a current, swayed the masses down stairs, passed through the occupied places where the fair sex and their escorts were making their selections. On the sloping walk the directors of the association were all to be seen, each of them wearing a pleased look, for this day's returns showed them that the people were willing to endorse by their presence their efforts to give square racing and foster the sport of kings.

Starter Caldwell was in excellent trim; the glorious weather seemed to have a most cheerful effect upon him as well as all the other officials. He started the fields off in perfect order and with little delay. The racing could not be excelled in any part of the world. Aside from the habit some jockeys have of thinking they are in a football match, where in jostling and bumping are allowable, there were no complaints heard. The favorites, with two exceptions, were beaten.

In the first race there were eight entries, and a round of applause was heard as the different horses were sent to the post. It was for six furlongs, and the twenty-three bookmakers in the large betting ring were kept busy taking in the coin at the following figures: Ike L. 5 to 2, Little Mid 3, Sir George 4, Pecksniff 7, W. L. Munson 5, Starling 3 and Garcia and Fi Fi 10 to 1. Money did not roll in as fast as the bookies thought it should, so they increased odds on every horse before Starter Caldwell dropped the flag to a splendid start. Louis Ezell's horse, Sir George, after shaking off Ike L., the favorite, had to do his best to keep in front of Little Mid, who finished at his neck in 1:19, Pecksniff getting the show by a head. Winner ch h by Spendthrift—Piccadilly.

The mile and a sixteenth race, selling, had eight candidates for the coin. A. B. Spreckels' handsome mare imp. Candid was a strong favorite at 6 to 5, Dunganen 4, Tar and Tartar 5, Ransome 5, E. H. Shirley and Salonica 10, Carmel and Hy Dy 12 to 1. Imp. Candid got away in the sixth position and did not seem to be able to mow down the field in front of her. Dunganen was in the lead but Ransome passed him about fifty yards from the wire and won by a length in 1:53½, Carmel nipping the place from Dunganen by a head, imp. Candid was fourth. Winner, ch h by Algerine—Ransome. This was one of the prettiest races seen at Ingleside and evoked great enthusiasm.

In the event of the day known as the Hobart stakes for two-year-olds, six furlongs, only seven appeared for the $1500 prize. Imported Santa Bella opened favorite but receded in the betting as rolls of gold and silver poured into the coffers of the bookies on Argentina 5 to 2. Sir Play 7 to 2, and Gratify 3 to 1, Wm. Pinkerton 11 to 1, Instigator 40 to 1, and Grady 10 to 1. Tod Sloan who had the mount on Santa Bella, was not slow in getting away but got the filly to the front and kept her there from flag fall to finish, Argentina made an attempt to accompany her but it was a weak one. Sir Play then moved up and was a length behind the flying Macdonough filly, but was unable to get any further to the front notwithstanding Chorn's masterly ride. Tod Sloan rode as if the silken purse on the wire would fall to the ground if he did not catch it in time, and his efforts were rewarded for amid the loud cheering from the vast multitude the little midget piloted his horse in a winner by a length from Sir Play and then modestly cut the string which released the silken purse and walked to the saddling paddock prouder than any king that ever was crowned. Gratify was third. Time 1:17½ was remarkably good, for the track was slow. Winner 5 f, by St. Cert—Maiden Belle.

In the hurdle race J. O. C., that good, game son of Apache, piloted by Hennessy, lay back in the third place and allowed Templemore to set the pace until the homestretch was reached, then he came on and stole the victory by a head from the latter in true Hennessy style. Cicero was the favorite and came in third. Tom Clark and Bellringer were not dangerous at any time in the journey, and came in easily. Imp. Crighton and Bedford fell at the first jump, while Cascade, who dislocated his knee at the third jump, ran and cleared the hurdles until the last one was reached, and in landing after clearing that jump he broke the injured leg. A friendly bullet put him out of misery. It was the most heartless cruelty to ride him on three legs, as was the case, and the jockey showed no sense of humanity. The time of the race was 2:55.

Imp. Cascade was imported by R. E. deB. Lopez from Australia a few years ago, and was one of the greatest hurdle jumpers and race horses in the Antipodes. On his first appearance in America at the Bay District Track, he was poorly ridden by a jockey, and fell over the first hurdle, badly injuring his foreleg. He was given a rest and it was thought he would prove a useful horse again, but the injured leg was not strong enough to stand the strain.

The great Libertine, who has been a little off in his races and was getting to be disliked by the bettors who knew that he is one of the fastest horses in America, showed that when opportunity offered he could make dogs of the best horses here by jumping to the front in the Christmas Handicap this afternoon, and with the good odds of 4 to 1 as an incentive, leave behind him such fast ones as Bright Phœbus, who sold favorite at 6 to 5; Vincto 7 to 2, Can't Dance 5, imp. Star Ruby 6, Polaski 12 and Santiago 10. Libertine, with Macklin up, showed that this pilot can ride him good if necessary, and also very bad, if necessary. Star Ruby, Polaski and Bright Phœbus kept coming, but Libertine showed them the way to the judges' stand and defeated Star Ruby by a length, the latter three lengths in front of Bright Phœbus. Time, 1:44½. Vincto came in next to last.

The last race was a six furlong selling event. The entries were Jack Richelieu, 9 to 5, Rico 3, Capt. Skedance 4, imp. Ivy, May Day, Royal Flush and Monterey at odds from 5 to 7 to 1. Imported Ivy, who got off fifth, shot to the front and led to within two lengths of the wire, where the good old stake horse, Jack Richelieu, shoved his nose in front of her and won the race by a neck. May Day made a splendid run getting the show. The time, 1:17½, was as fast as that made by Santa Bella in the Hobart stakes. This was another pretty race, and was a fitting ending to the most successful meeting ever seen in California.

Principal Winning Owners.

Below is a list of the principal winning owners at the Ingleside meeting. G. B. Morris & Co. heads the list. A. B. Spreckels and B. Schreiber have been the most frequent starters, and have been inside the money very frequently. W. O. B. Macdonough made the best record. With but ten starts, third in the list, and his horses ran unplaced but once. C. Boots was inside the money with half his starters.

The Leading Jockeys.

Below will be found a table showing the standing of the leading jockeys at the Ingleside meeting. Tod Sloan leads with twenty wins out of fifty-nine mounts, twenty-two of them unplaced. Garner is second in point of winning mounts but his percentage is not as good as some lower in the scale; as he rode sixteen winners out of 79 mounts, 41 unplaced. Willie Martin, though fourth in the list, has a very high percentage, as is Doggett's, and Hennessy is another whose showing is very good. Cash Sloan has ridden in poor form.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

SENTIMENT. BUSINESS AND SENTIMENT.—The last expression will serve my purpose better when applied to racing affairs. When there is an absence of sentiment in turf matters there will be wanting what has surely been the popularizing influence in the past, and which is likely to retain its prestige in the future. Should there be a lack of business management under the more complex systems which now prevail in sports of the turf, there would be failure, inasmuch as the pecuniary results would not justify lavish expenditures for the benefit of owners. The "happy mean" is a union of both, and I am much pleased that California racing has now the support of both elements. Those who make a business of racing are associated with men of wealth who are not dependent on pecuniary returns, and it is safe to infer that the "glory" of winning, to them, is of greater importance than gain. Not that the "business" end ignores this essential feature, as the shrewd men, who are so intimately connected with racing as to give it their whole attention, are well aware that honor is the guiding star, and any other beacon illusory, a will-o'-the-wisp, which will lead to destruction.

It would seem invidious to name those people of wealth, who are now identified with California racing, but this much can safely be said, that in no other State in the Union is there a greater display of that essential in giving tone to racing. Fortunes of such magnitude that the expense of a racing stable, however large, can be borne without encroaching on anything else, and this is a guarantee that the excellence of the component parts of their stables will be in keeping with the owner's means.

In the olden times a racing establishment was considered a part of the state of a gentleman, especially a country gentleman who bred the horses he raced. North and south the very best men of the country were identified with the pursuit, and men, eminent in politics, in business and in society, were active participants. There was a time—during the excitement and turmoil of civil war—when racing did not present the prominent characteristics which formerly prevailed, but from the incorporation of the American Jockey Club in 1865, there has been constant progression, and though there were a few clubs which did not adhere to the higher standard, the lapses were overcome by those of sterling merit. Even the deviations from a proper course have been of service. It has been demonstrated—with all the force of the solution of a geometrical problem, that these errors cannot be perpetuated without breaking up a recreation which has held such a prominent place in all the prominent countries of the world.

There is little to fear in California now. Business and sentiment will be in accord in accepting the lessons of the past, and with both of these powerful influences at work, failure is not a possible sequence.

TROTTING PROSPECTS.—Quite a hard job to convince those who are inclined to pessimism that there is a future for harness-horse racing. Ready to grant, perhaps, that there is some show in the East for high-class trotters and pacers, though set in their notions that so far as California is concerned the outlook is far from being pink-colored. I cannot agree in this estimate. It may be that it will be a couple of years before the depression is overcome, though there are better prospects for 1-96 than 1895 foreshadowed. I may be overconfident in the results of the convention, which is sure to be convened in the spring season is fairly opened, but, unless greatly mistaken, from that will come a better feeling. There must be harmony. Associations, owners of horses, trainers, must pull together, and with unity of action good must come. Let bygones be bygones. Nothing but injury from harping on old questions of difference; nothing but vexations in the reopening of old sores.

I am fully assured that the racing associations will do their part towards advancing the general horse interests of the State, no half-hearted support, but anxious and eager to do all in their power to further the cause. Whatever little jealousies there may have been on the part of trotting folk that must not be allowed to come in the way of co-operation. Some of those, it may be, were based on good grounds, though in general these were misguided notions, some of them grossly erroneous.

That a circuit can be arranged so that spring and early summer meetings will be held, in addition to the usual autumnal events, is beyond reasonable contention. The California Jockey Club will give a harness meeting after the racing comes to a close, and in all probability that will be supplemented by others.

Then the fairs will have nothing in their way, a fair field unobstructed by a clashing of interests.

It will not do to overlook the Pacific Coast Jockey Club in connection with harness horse racing. That club has signified its willingness to let the Trotting-Horse Breeders have the use of that magnificent course to hold a meeting upon, and this concession tells more than a whole chapter of predictions.

ENTRANCE FEES.—That there will have to be a radical change in regard to entrance in purses is beyond question. The temptation to incur liabilities under the provisions which prevailed in many cases last spring will have to be removed as it is well assured that it wrought injury to all parties, there being an option to pay small sums periodically, though the indebtedness did not mature until the night before the day set for the race, even when the animal was known to have little, if any, chance to win any part of the money, to "declare out," required a payment which could not be made, and thus the whole amount of the entrance became due. Then, too, there was the hope that something might happen to better the prospects, and, catching at the straw, left the person still in trouble.

Even among horse owners there is a disposition to return to the old usage, ten per centum on the amount of the purse with entries closing a short time before the race is to be decided, and that would be preferable, in some respects, to making entries so far in advance. Heavy expenses, however, are an incubus which is the bane of harness-racing, and if these can be lowered without material injuries to associations, the consummation will be a boon, duly appreciated by those who are benefited.

"Dollars at the gate." An increase in that sort of revenue is the surest way to seek relief, and by enlarging the attractions the returns can be augmented to a degree which will surprise those who advocate sticking to the old, old route.

"GOOD ROADS."—A manifesto, if not as important as the late Presidential message, has been issued by the "wheelmen" of California that will be apt to have some political significance. Governor Budd has awakened the ire of bicycle folk by refusing to appoint one of the league a member of the good road commission. There is no disputing the fact that this weighty confederation exerted a great influence in bringing the subject before the public, securing a wider hearing than it would have received, and insuring action that cannot fail to be beneficial.

The Call, in an editorial, expresses surprise that a body infinitely smaller than that of the horse brigade should be so successful and ascribes that success to activity and energy beyond that of the quadrupedal supporters.

Undoubtedly a just conclusion, though not entirely correct. There is the strength of combination, a united effort on the part of enthusiastic advocates, imbued with a determined spirit, and that concentrated so as to give its full effect. But there is another reason for the display of activity, the absolute necessity for roads over which a bicycle can be propelled without serious drawbacks. The horse can carry a person over almost any kind of ground, he can draw a wagon where the wheel would be useless, while owners have been supine and nearly regardless of the advantages which would result from improved highways. "Necessity is the mother of invention," and to this very old saying can be added, an incitement to work. Good work has been done by votaries of the velocipede, and while not ready to grant superior intelligence I am "more than ready" to accord them more "public spirit." The following is one paragraph of the editorial.

"The commission was undoubtedly created by the wheelmen through their persistent demand for good roads. The curious part of the matter is that the owners of horses and vehicles outnumber the wheelmen a hundred to one, and that the material interested represented by horseowners are immeasurably more important than those attaching to the ownership of bicycles, and yet the wheelmen found no trouble in organizing the setting afoot a movement which will bring far greater benefit to the owners of horses than to bicyclists themselves. If this is not explainable on the ground that wheelmen are superior in intelligence and public spirit to horse-owners, we should be glad to learn the reason."

Governor Budd raised such a storm of indignation among agriculturists, horse and cattle breeders by his veto of the appropriation for the district fairs that he may have thought that ignoring the wheelmen would placate the ire of those he had so grievously offended, but that was too hot to be chilled, and now he has another army arrayed against him.

THE OAKLAND TRACK.—Work is progressing rapidly on the grand stand at the Oakland track. All the men that can work to advantage are employed, and when the weather becomes more favorable the improvements will follow.

The race course is to be widened ten feet on the home-stretch, twenty feet on the "first turn." A "chute" will be added which will give straight work for those quarters of a mile races excepting one semicircle. The rain will delay the earthwork, though when the weather is suitable a large force can be employed to advantage. Every old building, old fences, in fact, all of the old, are to be removed, so that there will be no discordant feature to mar the beauty of the whole.

The fence will be placed on the boundary lines so that nearly the whole 104 acres will be within the enclosure. Already there has been a decided impetus given to real estate transactions, Mr. Emery having sold more lots within the last two weeks than he had in many months before. Mr. Emery's property is contiguous to that which has been leased to the California Jockey Club, extending the whole length of the southern boundary, with the exception of lots in Emeryville. He has widened streets, laid out another wide avenue from San Pablo to the railway, in order to give facilities for electric railways.

When these are completed, and the new ferry, from the line of Emeryville to San Francisco, in operation there will not be a racecourse in the United States which has better transportation facilities.

In order to fully comprehend the situation a map would be necessary, but even a few lines of description will show that the claim is based on good grounds. First the two ferries now in operation giving the choice of three routes and service only fifteen minutes apart. The broad-gauge connecting at 7th and Broadway, Oakland, with San Pablo cable cars, the Berkeley train running directly to the park; the Alameda connecting with cable at San Pablo and 14th streets. The cable is soon to give way to electricity which will shorten the time and that will run directly to the course. There is to be an electric line following Horton street, that and the Berkeley trains, through a spur track, unloading passengers at the entrances of the grand stand. There will be electric cars from East Berkeley, Claremont and Piedmont, and then the Hayward, Fruitvale and Alameda electric trains will complete the circle. The whole of the country, in fact, placed within easy reach. Mr. Emery says that the new ferry is now an "assured fact" and when that is in operation the only trouble will be in the embarrassment consequent upon so many routes to choose between by the people of San Francisco.

THE AUSTRALASIAN METHOD of starting horses has been received with such unqualified approbation in the country of its invention that it seems idle to question its efficiency here. The argument that our horses are such unmanageable brutes that they cannot be kept in position is merely conjecture, as a trial has not been granted. The same conditions prevailed in Australia, and the same virulent objections, which a trial dissipated, and that so effectually that the most obstinate adherent of old methods was forced to succumb.

A great deal has been printed and said lately in regard to "up-to-date" proclivities, and these usually interlarded with charges of being "being behind the times," it does not seem that these young fellows who offer such strenuous objections to even giving a new device a fair trial, should hesitate a little before denouncing the "old fogies" who favor innovations.

Let the gate be given a fair trial. Let it be tested with fields that are not likely to be troublesome, and if satisfactory under favorable circumstances, let succeeding tests be more secure.

JUDGE LYNCH.—While arguments are all against the encroachments of Judge Lynch on the regular courts, there is no question that there may be times when a short shrift and a stout rope is the best solution.

The attack on the car at Ingleside is one of these instances when punishment should follow as certainly as the scoundrels are captured. Ready to murder, the will for the deed should govern, and if the act which penalizes holding up a railway with death can be enforced in this case, that or life sentence be the fiat.

A CONVENTION.—That there should be a convention of people who are interested in harness-racing is accepted by all whom I have heard express an opinion on the subject. There are many things to consider, in fact, it appears as though action was imperatively demanded. It will be well, perhaps, to delay assembling until the opening of spring, March or April, in order to give plenty of time for consideration before the meeting is held. A full discussion, through the columns of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, will simplify and accelerate the business so that it can be transacted with as little delay as is compatible with good work.

Review of the Inaugural Meeting.

Wednesday's racing closed the inaugural meeting of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club. It has been a success, and a marked success, from every point of view. In the matter of attendance, the Association has been flattered by ever-increasing gate receipts. Notwithstanding the far from ample transportation facilities of the first few days, the race-going public was patient, and as better accommodations were provided and the headway of the electric cars were increased so that the trip could be made in comfort and with less delay the daily attendance began to show a marked increase.

The accommodations provided for the public at the track are in every way in keeping with the liberal policy of the Association. Every convenience has been provided for patrons of either sex, and an occasional trip to Ingleside is now becoming a regular treat to many who had not been on a race course in years. The grandstand, with its southern exposure, is flooded with warm sunshine all afternoon, yet the sun is in such a position in the heavens as not to interfere with the prospect of the races at any point. Of course there are some days on which the sun does not shine, even in California, but they are comparatively rare, and the very comfortable outlook of the races provided is already fully appreciated.

In the matter of accommodations for horsemen and their horses, a very general inquiry among owners, trainers and stablemen has failed to bring to light any cause of complaint or dissatisfaction, and many gladly avail themselves of the opportunity to extol the liberality of the management in every thing.

The races over the new course have been high-class to a very notable degree. The large number of crack horses that came from the East, as well as the not by any means inferior ones of our own State, have been very liberally entered and have provided sport of the best class. The purses have been most liberal, and five stake events decided. During the month's racing, 129 races were decided, and $57,750 in stakes and purses disbursed among horsemen, as well as the presentation of two bracelets and a silver cup, valued in all at $350, which were trophies of special events.

The tendency has been towards longer distances, and very few races have been started beyond the quarter-pole. They are assuredly the most popular, and they are a step in the right direction. The day of the short-bred sprinter is drawing to a close, and breeders are looking to weight-packing, staying strains to redeem themselves and the sport from the dire effects that have followed in the wake of the short-course races.

The track will no doubt be a fast one. Records may not be broken over it this winter, yet good time was made during the very few days it might have been said to be "fast." It was muddy on the opening day, and has been muddy nearly ever since, though the number of rainy afternoons have been very few. The rains came just frequently enough to prevent a drying out, yet most of the downpour occurred on "nights and Sundays." On one occasion the track was dry, and while fast time was being anticipated another shower came on. One thing about the track, however, it does not absorb the water to any great extent, and though it may look to be in a very bad condition, it has a splendid bottom and is always safe. Aside from the discomfort of the jockeys, the wet condition only makes fast time impossible, but does not endanger horses in the least.

The officials of the new association have been uniformly courteous and generous in their treatment of the public and the horsemen. Most of them have served in similar positions with older associations having a wider scope, and brought to their new field of labor a ripe experience, while those who assumed entirely new duties took on the mantle of office with a grace and deftness born of wide knowledge in business affairs.

The meeting began most auspiciously, and but for the dampening effect of a drizzling rain and a muddy track, precluding a proper display of the high-class horses that were entered on the first day, the new track would have been visited by one of the largest crowds that ever attended a race meeting in this city. The attendance was very large, notwithstanding, but has since been eclipsed. The public learned that the gala-day programme offered was but a sample of what was to follow, and that the very best sport was provided on all occasions. Many firm friends have been gained during the past month.

TURF AND TRACK

THE SULKY.

HAPPY NEW YEAR to all!

HENRY PIERCE, of the Santa Rosa Stock Farm, arrived from New York on Monday last.

A SPLENDID string of youngsters from the Oakwood Park Stock Farm will be seen on the circuit of 1896.

DANIEL MISNER has a few horses on the Petaluma Track this winter. "Horse business in Sonoma County is very quiet," he says.

THE Ohio fair associations are reported to be making energetic efforts to secure a bill in the coming legislature exempting them from taxation.

CALIFORNIA breeders have no reason to complain of the splendid showing made by the California-bred horses here and in the east during 1895.

BOODLE's book looks as if it will be filled. We shall publish his advertisement soon, so that owners of broodmares will know what the terms of service are.

Z. E. HEBERT, of Salinas, has in Dolly, by Mozart, one of the best broodmares in California. She is the dam of Bruno, 2:16½, Altoonita, 2:22½, and Lara D., 2:28.

At the Oakwood Park Stock Farm the plan of breeding the large boned, well-bred thoroughbred Major Ban to the Cleveland hay mares there, is to be tried this coming season.

THERE is a weanling brother to Oro Wilkes, 2:11, at the San Mateo Stock Farm that is a perfect beauty, and will be as fast as his brother, if lot trotting is any indication of speed.

GARRETT HYATT, the superintendent of Sonoma Stock Farm, says Gossiper, 2:14½, never looked better than he does at present. He was bred to some excellent mares this year.

LADY visitor at training stable: "What kind of a dog is that?" Swipe: "Sky terrier, mum." "Why, where is his head?" Swipe: "Dunno, mum; kick 'im an' see which end barks."

THE agitation about keeping the speed track in Golden Gate Park in better repair should never be allowed to diminish. We must have that work done at once.

THE talk of a track for the trotting borsemen at Alameda seems to increase every day and should the plan proposed be published we believe it will meet the endorsement of every horse owner in this part of California.

ANDREW MEBAN, the caretaker of Athanio, 2:11½, since the latter was a foal, has just returned to Fresno from Buffalo. He was engaged by Ed. Geers when Athanio was purchased, and took care of Athanio all this season.

NOTWITHSTANDING the death of John Green, of Dublin, Alameda County, well-known as the owner of Directum, there will be no change in regarding this game son of Director. He will remain in Kentucky in 1896.

It now transpires that the grand old Kansas brood mare, Lucy Woodruff, is the dam of McW., 2:17½, by Fergus McGregor. The performance of McW. makes Lucy Woodruff the dam of four in the list, including Silkwood, 2:07.

As the Palo Alto management concluded arrangements with Adolph B. Spreckels regarding Dexter Prince for the ensuing year; nothing could be done about leasing Silver Bow, 2:16. Dexter Prince is a decided success in his new home.

A HORSEMAN recently said: "I think Andy McDowell is dead gone on the Diablo family; he is in love with the horse and perfectly infatuated with his colts. He purchased two lately, and is figuring on the stakes he will win with them next season."

THE old stall formerly occupied by Electioneer and then by Palo Alto is now occupied by the grandly-formed sire Azmoor, 2:20½. Bred to the mares that suit him this horse is bound to sire good ones speed, gameness, and the very best of feet and legs.

DAWN, 2:18½, has entirely recovered from the serious illness which affected him during the Horse Show, and Mr. Agnew writes that the horse is gaining flesh every day. Dawn has a very choice looking lot of youngsters on the Agnew Stock Farm.

O. A. LOWE, one of the most enterprising young men of Woodland, has in Violin, a sister to the fast Alex Button filly Vidette, 2:16, one of the best roadmares in Yolo County. She is like her sister in every respect and may be seen on the circuit next season.

ONE of the sweetest-gaited trotters at the Sonoma Stock Farm is a bay filly by Vasto, 2:16½, out of Lizzie H., by Wyoming Chief. She is large and rangy, and has all the points of a trotter. Vasto's colts are of a high order, but this one is queen of them all.

L. H. MCINTOSH, of Chico, has some extra fine looking colts and fillies by his stallion Arthur Wilkes, 2:28, out of his Flaxtail mares. Since the breaking up of the famous Reavis Rancho, Mr. McIntosh has the only good horses in that portion of California.

SAM'L. THOMAS, of Haywards, reports the death of his two-year-old Diablo filly. She was out of a Steinway mare and was just beginning to show that, among the trotters, she was a good one, when distemper attacked her, and despite all efforts, she passed away.

THERE is a Dexter Prince colt out of Slight, 2:28½, by Electioneer, on the Oakwood Park Stock Farm that is without doubt, one of the finest and fastest youngsters ever seen there. Mr. Boyd has cause to be proud of him, for he is bred right to make a sire when his days on the turf end.

SIMON SEYMOUR, of this city, has purchased of Mr. Adams, of Fresno, a half sister to the great pacer Seymour Wilkes, 2:08½. This one is a two-year-old and is by Junio, 2:22. "A beautiful shade of bay in color and a pacer of the Seymour Wilkes style" is the way she is described.

JOHN A. RODGERS, superintendent of the trotting stock at the Santa Rosa Stock Farm, has been kept very busy sampling the youngsters there, and in his mind's eye can see some very promising ones among them. We look for John to be quite a factor in our race meetings next season.

L. LANKS HOLT and James E. Scott, proprietors of the noted Alliance Stock Farm at Graham, N. C., announce that they will sell at Fasig's auction sale in New York next February, John R. Gentry, Baronet, Governor Holt and the entire string of thoroughbred stock belonging to the farm.

At the Sonoma Stock Farm Chas. S. Neal has a Diablo colt out of a Prompter mare that is a pacer of the first class. In color he is a beautiful bay, and in conformation is a Diablo from the tip of his nose to his fetlocks. He is the object of admiration to all who see him on this splendid farm.

DENTER PRINCE was bred to forty-eight mares in 1894, and sired forty-two foals, twenty-one colts and twenty-one fillies. This year he was bred to fifty-three mares, and the average of services to each was two services. As a foal-getter, he is the most remarkable ever seen on the Palo Alto farm.

ED. LAFFERTY is undecided as to where he will train trotters this year as the track at San Jose is pretty well occupied with runners; however he can move to Geo. Polhemus' place where one of the best winter tracks in California has been made. We look for Ed to have some good material out next season.

In the matter of the Lincoln (Neb.) Driving Club against the owners of John R. Gentry and Joe Patchen for failure to live up to contract for an exhibition race, the ruling was that the contract was the same as an entry and the owners were called upon for payment of 5 per cent of the purse, $1,500.

CHICAGO road drivers are increasing in number every year, and the south side boulevards furnish snow paths unrivaled in the world. Twice each week during the sleighing season matinee races are gotten up by the road driving element, and prizes of handsome robes, whips, caps, etc., are given to the victors.

HENRY PIERCE, of the Santa Rosa Stock Farm, while on a visit to New York, shipped four very finely-bred mares he recently purchased there to his splendidly appointed stock farm in the Saddleback Mountains, Maine. Mr. Pierce never lets an opportunity pass for stocking his numerous farms with the very best.

HEROD 510 died December 3, at Preston, Minn. He was foaled 1866, and had a record of 2:24½. Two weeks before his death he was troubled with rheumatism, the first ailment of his life, and, it being impossible to afford him relief, his owner mercifully put him to death.

W. W. CARDWELL, of Roseburg, informs us that Puss, by Kentucky Whip, said to be a thoroughbred mare, is the third dam of Klamath, 2:08½. His father brought this mare across the plains. She was bred to Pinegar's Mike, the produce being a mare called Suse. Suse was then bred to Ophir, the produce being Klamath's dam.

SOMETHING will have to be done to relieve the great army of drivers and owners suspended this year for non-payment of entrance money. If the suspensions are enforced there will be no racing of any account. The only remedies are either to give up memberships in the parent associations, or forgive the debts and begin with new books.

JAMES DUSTIN has an excellent string of good ones at Palo Alto, and we are rather inclined to think he would like to go down the grand circuit in the East with them. Adhell is in his care and is improving a little every time he is worked. This colt grew very fast during the past eight months, but now he is filling out and losing that colt-like appearance he had.

HAMBLETONIAN WILKES will have a good season in the stud next year, as a large number of finely-bred mares were bred to him this season, and their foals by this grandly-bred horse will be a splendid advertisement for him. The Green Meadow Farm, where he is located, is like an emerald sea, for the rye grass meadows there are green all year—an unusual sight in any country.

THE demand for developed trotters and pacers in the east has stimulated Californians to take up their youngsters and train them. At the Palo Alto Farm where they used to have six trainers a few years ago they cut down the force to one, but this year they have two and will prepare a number of horses for the turf. There is a profit in this scheme and the management shows its wisdom by adopting it at once.

If the handsome Chas. Derby stallion Diablo, 2:09½, goes East next season the probabilities are that his owner, Wm. Murray, will take care of him and condition him for the races, and if Andy McDowell goes back he will have the first call to drive him in his races. We believe Diablo will be as great a sensation in the East as he has been here. As a sire, he will be a great loss to California if he remains in the East.

THE dam of L. A., the young Richards' Elector stallion, that all the people in Stanislaus County is talking about on account of his natural speed and the excellence of his progeny, is by Butterfield's St. Clair, out of a mare by Williamson's Belmont. Superintendent F. W. Covey, of Palo Alto, has a copy of the original papers that were made out when his dam, the Butterfield mare, was purchased at Palo Alto.

In regard to the black mare Lilac 2:26, a correspondent writes she is owned by the Wildflower Stock Farm and was sired by Clay 2:25, by Electioneer, out of Lizzie Miller by St. Clair 656 (Fred Low) second dam Mayflower, the greatest St. Clair of all. She got a kite record of 2:29½, but it was a bar. She was started this fall at the Fresno meeting to beat 2:35, and got her record at 2:26 quite easily. Lilac was bred at Palo Alto.

K. O'GRADY, of Laurel Creek Stock Farm should do a good business with his grandly-bred stallion Hart Boswell. He is the only son of Onward out of a Dictator mare on this Coast. He is a perfect counterpart of his sire, and as he is out of Nancy Lee, the dam of Nancy Hanks, 2:04, and Dictator Wilkes, sire of four, and his progeny cannot be surpassed anywhere in this State, he should make a most valuable cross for any of our so-called California-bred trotting mares.

I. DE TURK, of Santa Rosa has a number of very promising trotters by Anteeo on his splendidly appointed stock farm. He has the good, game grandson of Director called Robin, that got a record of 2:22½ this year as the premier stallion. The progeny of this young horse are spoken of very highly by all who have seen them. Mr. de Turk has a three-year-old filly by him called Roblett, out of Eveline, by Nutwood that has taken to pacing, and she is a flyer.

A LARGE number of excellent material for the circuit of 1896 is being prepared at the Belmont Stock Farm, San Mateo County. Among those there we noticed Manning, 2:16, Edna R., 2:13½, the game Sidney filly: Dictatus, looking finer than silk and better acting than ever; his daughter, Dicesse, out of Orphan Girl by Del Sur, a remarkable fine looker; Belle McGregor, by Robert McGregor, and several others that will attract attention. A number of campaigners are being negotiated for, and in 1896 this stock farm will be well represented.

ONE of the most useful horses at Palo Alto is a strongly-made chestnut gelding by Whips, out of the dam of Richard's Elector. He is used as a runner-up for the trotters, and can pull a heavy man in a sulky longer than any thoroughbred on the farm, and has had so much practice at the game he knows as much about the best places where the pupils ought to exert themselves as the drivers. He never seems to tire of the work, and when not doing this he is used as a handy horse to go to the depot or drive around the immense farm. He is one of the useful kind, and can trot close to 2:30 any time he is called upon to do so.

IN spite of assertions to the contrary it is probable that a bill permitting pool selling in a modified form and under stringent restrictions will be presented to the incoming New Jersey legislature. The bill is now being drafted by a well-known trotting horseman, and those who have seen its proposed provisions state that it will most admirably answer the purpose. There is no opening left which will allow disreputable resorts like Guttenburg and Gloucester to exist, and yet while not permitting petty gambling it will furnish an opportunity to those who may desire to speculate on the horses and can afford to do so, to bet their money openly and above board.

LA BELLE, 2:16, the game trotting mare who went through her two campaigns without a scratch, while running around a large paddock on the Arrowhead Stock Farm, which is owned by M. L. Severance near Valencia, Cal., fell in some heavy sand and cut herself badly on the quarter and also bruised a tendon, so it is feared she may not race again. The rest of the horses: Regina, Bet Madison, Don Roberto, Bonnie Director (formerly Inspiration), Irene Benefit and all the colts are doing well. We earnestly hope that the injuries to La Belle are not so serious as they now appear, and that she may appear on the circuit of 1896, as she always has in the past, leading her fields to the wire.

DURING the last four years the turf has seen fourteen trotters which have won upwards of $20,000 each, while another has won close to this amount. It is a singular fact that of the fifteen horses which have won $18,000, and over since 1892, Guy Wilkes is the only stallion with two representatives. Muta Wilkes won almost $22,000 during her first two years on the turf, while during a like period also Mary Best won $21,500. These mares are sisters and their winnings were made during their three and four-year-old campaigns. An additional honor to Guy Wilkes is the fact that his son Sahle Wilkes is represented by Oro Wilkes, a colt that as a two, three and four-year-old won over $24,000.

TIME brings wondrous changes, particularly in the horse line. Time was when the hackney had the call in his own country and for a short period was the fad, among a certain element, on this side of the water. The American trotter has beaten the hackney in the show rings, and "society" has taken him up. 'Tis the glad day so long foretold. The trotter has been the track and road horse par excellence, and as a carriage horse is showing himself superior to any other type. He learns to step high, and what is more, keeps the action up, which the hackney cannot do. Speaking of hackneys, what a mercy it was John E. Madden went to England and brought back Warlock. Left in that country, the stallion would never have been heard of as a sire. He was classed as a hackney and got the commonest sort of mares. Since his return to this country he has been bred to trotting mares, and in consequence has nine representatives in the 2:30 list, including Annine, 2:11½.

T. R. LOWE, of Madison, Yolo County, started with his crack team of trotters (one is by Dawn and the other by Stamboul) to Woodland last week. He had a wagon load of household supplies; the horses took fright at something, threw Mr. Lowe out, and dragging the wagon into a fence did some fence breaking and left a string of merchandise tangled in mud, fence posts and broken pieces of wagon material, for quite a distance. They horses freed themselves of the two front wheels of the vehicle about two miles further down the road, and kept up a first-class Ingleside gait until they were stopped five miles from where they started. Although exhausted there was neither scratch nor injury to either perceptible. Mr. Lowe says he never knew five miles of walking was so trying on his patience, and believes the good road's convention should find in him an ardent supporter. He says he will always think kindly of the tramp hereafter and believes he has a team of horses now that are in good condition to bring to the Bay District track. He never knew what a good mud horse meant before.

THE first and second generations of the male line of the famous Goldsmith family are extinct. First Alden, the founder of the house, then James, and now John. In the fleeting years it seems but a little while ago when the two sons of the noble old sire matriculated in the school of professional horsemanship. The elder was dark and handsome as a Greek god; the other a fair-haired boy, whose sunlit countenance beamed with the freshness and vigor imparted by the air of his native hills. James was a Goldsmith, but John was his mother's boy. Always gentlemen, refined and well cultured, and talented horsemen, the Goldsmith boys were models to their brethren of the craft. The circumstances of their calling kept them apart in later life, but each winter found John at the old home, at the side of the aged mother, whom he revered and honored. Devoted friends watched the progress of his disease and feared the result, but the summons came unexpected. The trotting turf has lost an honest man and the country a good citizen. Peace be to him.—Review.

THE SADDLE.

MATT BYRNES will left for Montana last week.

OREGON ECLIPSE was sent over the sticks Saturday.

PIGGOTT will not be seen in the saddle at the Bay District track.

SAM DOGGETT was fined $100 by Starter Caldwell Friday in the fourth race.

PITTSBURG PHIL and his mother leave in a few days for a sojourn at San Diego.

TWENTY FIVE books, including combination and field books, drew in Saturday.

STARTER CALDWELL's flag work has not been above criticism during the past few days.

TENACITY has some very excellent engagements, and promises to develop into a good one.

EUGENE LEIGH has added G. W. Johnson, the Western crack of 18:4, to his list of sires at La Belle.

FERRIER has been a sick horse since he came up from San Mateo, and has not regained his form of last year.

ARGENTINA will bear watching. She is rounding to very rapidly, and is a high-class filly when she is right.

RACING at Ingleside will be discontinued for two weeks after Christmas Day, to be resumed January 9th.

It is not often that one boy rides a 7 to 2, a 5 to 1 and a 4 to 1 shot in one day. That was Garner's record Friday.

P. A. FINNEGAN, president of the Blood Horse Association in pioneer days, has purchased stock in the Ingleside track.

ANDY BLAKELEY's old jumper Bassanio, is to be put into training again. The old chap has been turned out all summer.

WHEN Wm. Rysdyk bought the Charles Kent mare and her colt, he gave his note for $100 and $25 in cash, that being the purchase price.

CICERO, the great has-been, was handicapped at 125 pounds to give him a chance with J. O. C. with 148, and Bell Ringer with 154 pounds up.

ARCTIC, whose racing qualities had been leased by Wyatt Earp, is now in the Welcome Stable, the owner having concluded to race a few horses himself.

JERRY CHORN gracefully extracted the blue and gold satin bag from the wire that held the $1,500 purse, after he had piloted Sir Play to victory in the Haggin Stakes.

THE management at New Orleans decided to limit the number of starters in a race to ten, the actual starters to be selected by lot. This rule does not apply to stake events.

GARNER rode three successive winners Friday, Circe, his mount in the last race, was played some on his account no doubt. Garner rode two unplaced horses during the day.

MR. MARTIN NATHANSON, for many years turf editor of the "Chicago Herald," who is to be clerk of the scales and handicapper at the Bay District track, arrived from Chicago Monday morning.

ABOUT all the steeplechase jockeys are laid up for repairs. Allmark, Clancy, Stanford and others are among those in the repair shop, and Wash King does not feel just right since Soon Enough fell with him.

THE first declarations in the National Derby for 1895, which was transferred to the St. Louis Fair Grounds Association, by the Harlem Association at Chicago, on October 1, 1895, are due on January 1, 1896.

PRESIDING Judge Rees was called home to Memphis Friday by the death of his wife's mother at that place on Thursday last. Capt. Rees will return in time for the next meeting at Ingleside, to open two weeks from Christmas.

TOD SLOAN rode Miss Brummel and Fred Gardner Friday. He claimed he had made previous engagements for these mounts, and the claim was allowed. It is, in all probability, the last time Tod will be seen in the saddle at this meeting.

MR. A. H. MORRIS has engaged a young lady teacher to give the boys engaged in the Morris Stable some of the rudiments of an education. She began her night school at the New Orleans track on December 2d, and the novel class was well attended.

MATT STORN was taking a hand in breaking a colt Friday morning and was thrown off his feet, and his right ankle wrenched. Mr. Storn did not feel any pain at the time, but several hours later the ankle was considerably swollen and quite painful.

JOCKEY STANFORD does not progress very rapidly towards recovery. To straighten the contracted muscles of his elbow forces his dislocated collar bone out again, but it is expected the difficulty will be overcome soon and he will have the full use of his arm again.

LADY JANE, br f, foaled 1892, by imp. Midlothian—Avont Jane, died last week. She was owned by J. A. Greer, and was a frequent winner, and was close to the money in most of her starts. Her dam, bred by W. L. Pritchard, of Sacramento, was by Bazar, first dam Vivien, by imp. Leamington.

WHILE the Chicago Futurity, transferred to the St. Louis Fair Association, has been declared off, the Harlem National Derby of 1896 will be run off at the St. Louis Spring meeting as previously advertised. The attention of horsemen is called to the fact that the first declarations to the Derby are due January 1st.

FLORENCE P., in G. W. Poole's string, has a wonderful record as she won 29 races this season, commencing at New Orleans last January. While she is not classed as a stake animal, she is in the first flight of the selling plater division. She met with an accident up at Roby, but is now rounding to and will be able to race about Christmas, or a little later.

TOD SLOAN began to receive his Christmas gifts early. Tuesday afternoon he received a cigar about a foot long, and built in proportion, that came addressed in feminine handwriting. Tod's admirers among the fair sex know his weakness for big cigars.

BESSIE BISLAND started a few times recently at New Orleans only to be beaten off. Last season she was a good handicap performer, with some noted races to her credit, but she has not been in good form this year. She will make a valuable broodmare and she ought to be retired, for her best racing days are over.

BARNEY SCHREIBER increased his bank-roll nearly $5,000 Saturday. He held out Sir Play, Gallant and Service, besides backing them all liberally. Had his filly Theresia won, his winnings would have been greatly increased. That was the second close finish he has lost in two days, and in both instances he lost with the best horse.

RECENT advices from the City of Mexico go to show that R. C. Pate's racing venture is a success so far. The attendance is good, and Col. Pate's eagle eye in detecting "jobbery" was evinced recently by the refusal to accept entries from a St. Louis horseman, which met with general approval and secured the confidence of the patrons of the track.

JOCKEY MARA rode Uncertainty in the hurdle race and was in the spill that occurred at the last hurdle. He limped to the fence and leaned against it till paddock attendants came and carried him to the tanbark path going to the paddock. Then he lightly sprang from their arms and ran away. He thought that was a good way to avoid wading through the mud.

ADELE, by imp. Australian, the dam of Belmar, is now twenty years old, but is strong and hearty and evidently good for many another season at the stud. That she is a great broodmare is shown by the fact that she has thrown high-class performers to each of four different stallions, viz: Capt. Wood to War Dance; Adelbert to Macduff; Linda to Linden, and Belmar to Belvidere.

STARTER JAMES B. FERGUSON was out Sunday for the first time in ten days. Fifteen years ago Mr. Ferguson was shot. The bullet was never removed, Mr. Ferguson experiencing no trouble until a few weeks ago, when it became necessary to perform an operation, which was successfully done by Dr. Chismore. Mr. Ferguson's many friends will be pleased to learn of his recovery.

MR. W. S. HOBART was a visitor at Ingleside again Saturday, but the kick he received while riding the Gentlemen's Race on Thursday last necessitates the use of crutches. He uses them as though cross-country riding and polo-playing had familiarized him with these accessories of locomotion, and makes a very graceful, if not contented, cripple. Miss Hobart and friends were also among the spectators on Saturday.

WHEN Oregon Eclipse, Alexis and Uncertainty fell at the last jump in the hurdle race it looked as though some one must be injured, as horses and jockeys were piled up in a promiscuous heap, but all of the riders escaped unscathed. Ambrose, who rode Esperance, who fell taking the fourth jump, did not get off so luckily, for he suffered a severe fracture of the shoulderblade, which will keep him out of the saddle for some time.

ONE of the best finishes at Auckland was between the winner, Pirate, and Mantle, in the Maiden Plate Handicap. The struggle was most exciting, and both contestants displayed great gameness. Pirate is a son of the Musket horse, Brigadier and Satanela, half sister to Foulshot, that proved such a successful sire of winners in New Zealand, and is now in America, and was bred by Mr. W. Percival, Secretary of the A. R. C.

THE poolroom ordinance proposed by Supervisor Wagner was passed to print Monday by the Board of Supervisors, though Supervisor Taylor gave notice that he would move for a reconsideration at the next meeting. The ordinance proposed by the Grand Jury closing the downtown poolrooms, but permitting pool-selling within the confines of racetracks, was read by the clerk. Supervisor Wagner moved that his measure be made a substitute, with the above results.

DR. CORN, the track physician, met with a painful and, what might have been a more serious mishap, on Thursday evening last. He had already boarded the last train at the track, and just as it got under way he heard that Mr. Hobart's leg had been broken. Hastily alighting and running back towards the paddock he collided with someone going very rapidly towards the train. The doctor's nose was broken by the smash he got. He did not learn who his innocent assailant was.

GEORGE D. GIVENS, the poolseller, who was convicted of violating the Elbert ordinance, appeared before Judge Joachimson Monday morning for sentence. His attorney moved for a new trial and for arrest of judgment on the usual statutory grounds, and the motion was denied. The judge without any comment sentenced Givens to pay a fine of $200, with the alternative of spending the next 180 days in the County Jail. Notice of appeal was given and ten days' stay of execution was allowed.

BELL RINGER took up 154 pounds again Monday, won an eighth of a mile further, and beat Roh Roy, who had beaten him quite handily last Wednesday. Roh Roy was carrying seven pounds more, however, than in his last race. J. O. C. carried 148 pounds, and ran second to Bell Ringer, which stamps him about the best three-year-old jumper around these parts. Nellie G. held her speed better than usual yesterday, and Oregon Eclipse was prominent for awhile, but was dead tired when he struck the last hurdle and fell in a heap.

WHITE CLOUD's eventful career came to an ignominious close Monday, when he was tagging up a hurdle procession and fell dead at the finish. Not many years ago he was running on the flat and going up to record time, beating everything brought out at the fairs on this Coast. About a year ago he was taken in hand by Mr. R. E. deB. Lopez, who succeeded in growing a new hoof on his club foot. He was started over the flat a couple of months ago at Bay District, and showed some speed for a little ways. Recently he had been schooled over the jumps and made his second start in a hurdle race Monday.

E CORRIGAN's Tenacity has the speed and gameness that goes with his royal breeding. He is by Longfellow, out of Modesty, the winner of the first American Derby, and was bred by Mr. Corrigan. His chances of winning Friday were so little thought of by his owner and his trainer that Mr. Corrigan did not place a dollar on him.

ST. CLEMENS stood out as the race horse of the Auckland meeting. F. McManamin had St. Leger's son looking as bright as a star, and the herculean impost of 10st 4lb that he was asked to carry, proved no impediment to him winning the Shorts Handicap of five furlongs. At the Derby stand the grand sprinter appeared to dwell for a second but, as Smith shook him up in vigorous style, away he came from Pororua, who was favored with the feather of 6st 9lb. St. Clemens is a great favorite with the public, who dearly love a horse of his calibre. He is out of Satanela, daughter of Slander, the dam of imp. Foulshot, now in California.

A PROPOSITION will be made to the Pacific Coast Jockey Club, by a gentleman owning a strip of land south of the Ingleside inclosure and follow the eastern line, to put up 100 stalls for rental to horsemen, provided the Association will allow an opening to be made through their fence at the southeast corner wide enough for horses to pass through. The property referred to will be inclosed by a fence of the same height and appearance as that surrounding the race track grounds, and every precaution against fire or molestation of horses or horsemen will be provided. There is not enough stable room at Ingleside, and Dr. Masoero's thirty or forty stalls at the ocean beach are always filled.

THE steamship Manitoba, which sailed from New York for London Saturday afternoon, carried some valuable freight in the shape of a string of thoroughbreds, the property of Duke & Wishard, the Western turfmen, who will try their luck on the English turf. Enoch Wishard accompanies the horses, and will train them while abroad. The string includes Ramapo, Helen Nichols, Wishard, Hugh Penny, MacBriggs and Damsel, as well as a bay gelding, a colt and two fillies, all of which have excellent breeding. Jockey Reiff was also a passenger. He will carry the stable's colors in all races where he can make the weight. Mr. Wishard was married to Miss Grace Chadwick of Elberton two hours before sailing. The wedding took place at the Hoffman House.

JIM NEIL has filed his answer to the suit of Miss Peytonia Barry, of Gallatin County, Tenn., for the possession of, or equivalent consideration, the two-year-old colt Perhaps. Mr. Neil's answer is that he holds a bill of sale from J. L. Allcock, by whom the colt was entered as the May Viley gelding in the California Jockey Club Stakes last Spring, and whom, it is stated, had had undisputed possession of the colt since he was as big as a Newfoundland dog. He was brought out here by Allcock from Kentucky, and was quartered with the Arizona Stable horses for some time. He did not give any evidence of being a crackjack and was offered for sale. Neil paid $300 for him. After he had been conditioned and had begun to win races in rapid succession, a claim on the horse was presented by J. P. Tyree, who holds a power-of-attorney from Miss Barry. Just how Miss Barry's claim will receive substantiation is not clear to Jim, and he does not feel inclined to give up his famous mud horse.

ACCORDING to the Washington Post, Mr. S. S. Howland has made a definite and positive statement that no attempt will be made to secure the passage of a bill by Congress to legalize bookmaking in the District of Columbia, but that the English system will be adopted at the Benning's meeting. It is also stated that the Washington Jockey Club has decided to lease, with the option of purchase, a piece of property east of the stables, valued at $6,000, and that on it new stables will be erected. The grandstand will probably not be moved, though it may be enlarged and improved. A big portico will be added to the present clubhouse, and the inclosure which it occupies, between the grandstand and paddock, will be transformed into the betting paddock, to which an additional admission fee will be charged. Down below the grandstand, where the betting ring is now situated, a fine clubhouse will be erected, which will be reserved for the use of club members and guests and their families. A number of stakes will be offered for the Spring meeting, which will be held late in March or early in April.

THE California Jockey Club has issued its programme for the first half of its two-week meeting which commences on Thursday next. The G. H. Mamm handicap, for all ages, at six furlongs, and a mile and a furlong handicap, are the attractions of the first day. A selling race at seven and a half furlongs is also carded. On Saturday there will be six races, the Elmwood stakes, for two-year-olds, six furlongs, being among those to be run off. On New Year's Day there will be another six-race card, with two stake events—The Rosemeade, five and a half furlongs, for two-year-old fillies, and the Del Monte Steeplechase, over the short steeplechase course. Purse races and handicaps at the longer distances form noticeable features of the balance of the week's programme. The Pommery Sec stakes, a handicap at a mile, has been set for January 4th. The Thornton stakes at four miles, will be run later on, instead of on that date. Popular old Bay District will be visited by a large crowd every day of the meeting. Most of the stables now at Ingleside will remain there, and will send over horses to Bay District as they are to be entered.

A JURY in Police Court 3 returned a verdict of guilty Friday against George D. Givens, one of the men arrested a few days ago for conducting a downtown poolroom in violation of the law. The evidence against Givens was furnished by several policemen, who testified to having placed several twenty-five cent bets on horses a few minutes before the start of the race in which they were entered. The bets on the winning horses were paid five minutes after the announcement of the result of the race. The contention of the prosecution was that Givens did not act as a commission broker and that the money bet by the policemen could not in the nature of things have been carried to the track. This being the case, Givens acted merely as a bookmaker, and the making of a book outside of the enclosure where the race is run is prohibited by the ordinance. Givens was represented by Attorney Dunn and Regensburger. Their defense was negative and was chiefly confined to the claim that the prosecution could produce no evidence to show that the money had not been placed at the race track either by telephone or telegraphic dispatch. The jury took the view of the prosecution as the correct one, and returned a verdict of guilty. An appeal will be taken.

To those who own thoroughbreds and are anxious to make money with them, it is perhaps almost unnecessary to inform them that in order to race or to sell, it is absolutely necessary for horses to be well entered in all the leading race meetings in America, and among the most prominent of these are those to be given under the auspices of the Coney Island Jockey Club. This enterprising organization advertises its list of stake events in this issue and an announcement like this should not be overlooked. Entries will close January 2, and as we have a large supply of entry blanks containing the conditions in full of each of these stakes, we shall be pleased to send them to all who have not already received copies. As the race meetings here will end in June, horsemen should not neglect the opportunity presented by this club to have their horses named for the splendid events for which so much money will be given. This is the last notice.

Do not forget the Nursery Stakes to be run at the State Fair in 1897, entries for which will close January 1st, as well as the sweepstakes for the produce of mares bred in 1895. Owners of thoroughbreds should not neglect these important stakes, for nothing enhances the value of a colt or filly more than to have it eligible for such valuable engagements, and this is one reason why these stakes are offered. The advertisement appears in this issue, and blanks may be obtained at this office or from our representative at the Bay District track.

GOVERNOR JIM B, enemy of farmers, stock breeders and agriculturists in California, has now shown his contempt for the bicycle men (and they are innumerable) by not appointing at least one of the members of the league on the good roads convention; but then he always does the wrong thing at exactly the right time. What a lot of pleasure he must find in occupying the gubernatorial chair. His ambitions to be President of the United States are badly hobbled by his poor judgment.

In every newspaper that contains an account of the death of John A. Goldsmith, his merits as a horseman and friend are shown, and the kindest words of condolence for his widow are expressed in beautiful language.

The Depression in Prices.

"What is the cause of the depression in prices of trotters?" is a query heard on all sides, but the depression in the prices of almost everything else salable is not spoken of so often as that in regard to man's best and noblest friend, the horse. Whenever the newspapers hear of the establishment of a new slaughtering place where equines are to be killed and every portion of their anatomy put to some good, useful purpose, the advice is freely offered to "sell your horse for anything and get a bicycle; horses will never be of any value hereafter." Such sarcastic advice has a foolish sound and only shows how very apt some people are to condemn an industry in which they have no interest, and, if they had, they would not be creditable to it.

We admit prices of horses have decreased; they should never have been inflated to the figures they were. A few rich and influential lovers of a good horse delighted in saying: "I paid so many thousand dollars for that horse and I would not take twice as much for him to day." This kind of boasting elevated the prices of all other trotters among this man's rivals, and the boom got a good start. Hundreds of farmers who knew no more about breeding trotters than they did about herding sheep in Alaska, thought they would embark in the business, and mortgaged their farms, attended the sales in the East, got in the center of the large crowds that surrounded the sweet-voiced auctioneers, became enthusiastic and reckless and paid extravagant prices for horses and mares that they knew had pedigrees and that was all. They brought the animals home and learned to their sorrow that the breeding of trotters that would trot was a study which they should have spent years to learn. The colts and fillies that came were not the kind to sell for fabulous prices because there were physical deformities transmitted from the ancestors of the youngsters which they were ignorant of, and that the untraced dam was not a Shanghai Mary nor a Dolly Spanker. If there was nothing physically wrong with the youngsters it cost money to train them, and that they did not have, so in order to be relieved of the responsibility of caring for such stock and understanding more about what constitutes a trotter than when they made their first investment they sold all they had. Some of them, knowing that they had "got in on the wrong family," attended the Eastern sales and purchased other stock for very little which they knew would bring remunerative prices hereafter. The recent sales which took place in which at least 1,000 trotters and pacers were offered in a week had a tendency to depress prices, and many a bargain they secured. The classes of people who attended the sales of 1894 and 1895 were better educated regarding a first-class trotter than those who attended the sales in previous years. They had read the able turf journals, visited stock farms, attended the races, talked with owners, breeders and trainers about the best families of trotters, and in this way gathered much valuable information which guided them in their selections. They had no use for "weeds," but stocked their farms with good material.

On top of all this, and while everyone was crying hard times, caused by overproduction in every line of business, free trade, low prices of cereals, fruits, wines, etc., the instability of the silver question, and the action of the President on matters which were considered of vital importance to everyone in the United States, the horsemen had a few other things to contend with. One was the "bicycle craze," and, for a time, it looked as if our roadways would never be used except by the riders of the silent steed. Then the introduction of cable and electric roads was another serious and detrimental one to the breeders of horses which were unfit for anything else.

These were not all the "dark clouds" which hung low over the horse-breeders' heads. The best roadways around our large cities over which teams and single roadsters used to have full sway, were gridironed with railroad tracks, and with the whirring of the cars, bringing out electric sparks from the wheels, and the procession of bicycles, the dangers to life and limb increased, for unless a person was driving a perfectly sensible animal it was far from being a pleasure to venture out.

We have weathered all these storms. The equine slaughter-houses are kept busy wiping out of existence hundreds of useless range horses. The bicycle craze does not absorb the columns of all the papers as it did, and as the depressions in prices has hit this industry a body blow too, they will not be as fashionable when they get cheap. The cost for keeping a bicycle in repair for a year amounts to more than what a new one will soon be sold for.

The class of horses now being used are trained near electric cars and railroads, and, like the intelligent creatures they are, they seem to realize one they will not be harmed.

The car-horse breeders have given up this pursuit, and are now engaged in raising grain, fruits and vines on their ranges, for they are satisfied that the people have no use for a mediocre breed of horses in this age of progress.

In all our large cities the richest, as well as the poorest who enjoy a ride behind a good horse, are working hard for the building of speed drives and boulevards, and they are succeeding far beyond their expectations. The horses they are driving over these smooth roads are far superior to the majority of the old-time trotters; besides, every owner thinks his horse is the best. The demand for horses for these roads is as sure to increase as it is for trotters to go to Europe and Australia. There never will be what is called "the horseless age" as long as the leading men in all circles of this world's progress are interested in the growth of this industry, which is one of the most fascinating and healthful of all others.

California's Representative Trotters.

At the time of Senator Leland Stanford's death over one hundred horses were in training on the famous farm at Palo Alto. Many of these were taken out of training and sold in the East, and, owing to the retrenchment of expenses in carrying on the farm nearly all the employees were discharged, and the work of developing the young trotters almost ceased. Carload after carload of young trotters, stallions and campaigners were disposed of at private sale and at auction, and all the broodmares that possibly could be spared were also sold in California, and many a small breeder who was fortunate enough to secure a few of these, has never regretted the purchase.

The string of trotters sent on the circuit in 1894 was small, but it was very large compared to the one which appeared this year. It was well known by the management that some change should be made this year, and as there were so many youngsters old enough to be raced and as the demand for developed horses is on the increase, they resolved to secure the services of another trainer to prepare a string of good ones, so with the good horseman, John Phippen, they have added that other knight of the sulky, James Dustin. These trainers have in their charge nearly thirty-six head of good ones, and with fair weather and no epidemics to attack their horses, it is a foregone conclusion that Palo Alto will lead all other stock farms in California in the number of good ones it will have in training. It may be that the Eastern circuit on which Expressive, Altivo, Azote, Cobwebs and the countless other good ones that first saw the light of day at Palo Alto will have some attractions for the management of this farm this year, and a good string of fine trotters may be sent in Jas. Dustin's care, to give battle to the pick of the world on the great circuits in the East. Then, when the races end, the individuals which have been so prominent therewith will be sold and Mr. Dustin will return to prepare another lot. In the meantime, a consignment of yearlings may be sold at auction at the horse mart in New York.

The recent sale of youngsters in New York City will be of incalculable benefit to the farm, for there was not an individual sold that was not first class, and the superintendent of the farm is receiving very satisfactory letters from the buyers who are quite sanguine over the prospective speed of their purchases. This will be the story from this time on, and if the plan which we have outlined is adopted there is no doubt of the great pecuniary benefit to be derived from it as well as the securing of greater fame for all of the horses that are left here.

Monroe Salisbury states that he will not take as large a string of horses East in 1896 as he did in 1895. Andy McDowell hopes to have about five good ones. Wm. Corbitt is undecided as to what he shall do the coming year and as he has already listed for sale almost every record holder and the very best colts and fillies on his farm, there is no hope that he will send many East to be campaigned.

We want representation in the East, and while we realize the fact that the California-bred horses lead the fashion there, nevertheless, we take pride in recording the performances of those we send East from our leading stock farms and campaigned by what we call our California drivers.

HERRMANN THE GREAT'S RANDOM TRIO, MATCHLESS, COCK ROBIN, ADDIE.

EVERY horseman who visited the race meeting at Detroit last season has determined to repeat the visit this season. The pleasure these men derived from their sojourn in the city by the lake seems infectious for every horseowner who has heard a recital of the splendid treatment horses and men received at the hands of the Detroit Jockey Club, has decided to go there this year. The advertisement which appears in this issue should be carefully read by every horseowner and trainer on this coast. The conditions are liberal, purses large and races made to suit all classes and all distances. Entries will close for the summer meeting (which takes place August 11th to 22d, while there are no race meetings here) January 10th, and entries for the fixed events of 1897 will also close on that date. Read the advertisement carefully, and if you are consulting your best interests you will at once make entries in the splendid races to be given by this splendid organization over one of the best and safest tracks in America.

FOR some reason the Pacific Coast Jockey Club failed to give the Australian gate a trial at its meeting which just closed. It is hoped the officials will read the accounts of the great success attending its use at every meeting in Australasia. The newspapers from the Antipodes are filled with glowing accounts of its workings, and those who claimed at the time of its introduction that the horses would prove unruly and unmanageable, are now its warmest supporters, and those who occupied the positions of starters claim that it is the greatest improvement ever introduced on a race track, and say they would not care to start horses by the old method again. There are no complaints heard from jockeys, owners or the public since they have learned how easy this simple and safe contrivance works.

ONCE again the State Agricultural Society advertises its Occident Stake, and this time it is to be trotted in 1898 at the State Fair. This stake increases in value every year, and owners of foals of 1895 should not hesitate to make their entries at once. It's a curious fact, but nevertheless a true one, this stake is generally won by a small breeder, and to win one of these atones for a whole series of defeats for lesser purses through a hard campaign. Entries for this stake will close January 1st. Blanks may be obtained at this office or from Secretary Edwin F. Smith at Sacramento, Cal.

THERE should be little judicial delay in sending to prison for life the robbers who stopped the train near Ingleside and shot the passengers. It is a pity there is no law on the statute books in California making hanging the only penalty for stage and train robbing. The next Legislature should pass a law to that effect.

He Knows His Business Well.

"When evening lets her curtain down and pins it with a star," to no class of the community does the necessity for some place in which to spend a pleasant evening exist than is to be found in the ranks of the racing patrons. In witnessing a good play, finely mounted and well played, all the feverish anxiety that has haunted the dog is allayed, and the conflicting chances of the several turf favorites are forgotten. Then again, there is no class in the community as likely to patronize amusements as is found in the ranks of the horsemen. Generosity and intelligence are their chief characteristics. Prof. Hermann, the wizard of the world, is fortunately able to indulge his love for the noble horse, and has gathered in his wanderings in different parts of the world some of the finest of "drivers" and saddlers, and we take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the picture of his prize-winning tandem team in this issue.

THE advertisement of the Latonia Jockey Club of Covington, Ky., appears in this issue and the announcement of the stakes therein should be read by horsemen everywhere. Entries for these stakes will close January 14th, and it is of the utmost importance that all horses that are to be shipped East be well engaged at the meetings to be given by this live association. The track is one of the finest in the world, and as it is in the blue grass region, the home of the thoroughbred, those who have never attended a meeting there have no idea of the gentlemanly treatment accorded all visitors. There will be an exodus of horses from this Coast this year, and we want to see a long list of familiar names on the programmes of each day's racing. The purses are large and the conditions most liberal, so there should be no hesitancy in making entries for the same. Remember entries close January 15th.

SECRETARY CHAS. F. PRICE of the Louisville Jockey Club, thoroughly understands the value of advertising the meetings given by the Louisville Jockey Club. In this issue he advertises the stakes to be awarded the winners at the spring meeting to be held over the famous Louisville course, and, as a large number of our California horsemen, as well as those who are from the East and would not miss this meeting, intend to bring their strings of horses East this year, there should be no hesitancy on their part in making entries in time and thus have something to prepare for when they get their horses there. Besides these stake events there will be a large number of races given to suit all ages and for all distances, so horsemen who go there can rely upon getting all the races they want and need not have any idle moments. Entries will close January 15th. Do not let this date slip by.

FOR the very best made road making machinery, scrapers, plows, etc., besides the very finest of agricultural implements, at prices that are astonishingly low, we have no hesitancy in recommending our thousands of readers to communicate at once with the Deere Improvement Co., 305 and 307 Market Street, and get one of their descriptive catalogues. This firm stands at the head of all others on this Coast in this line, and it has attained that position by dealing justly with its patrons and giving full value for the money. Their goods stand every test and cannot be surpassed. See advertisement in this issue.

ATTENTION is called to the advertisement of the New Memphis Jockey Club's Spring meeting, which begins under the auspices of this thrifty organization April 9th and ends Saturday, April 25th. There are ten splendid stake events advertised, and the amounts to be dispersed among the winners should be an incentive to horsemen to make entries for them at once, for they will close January 15th. Entry blanks may be obtained at this office. Do not neglect this Spring meeting at Memphis.

Hoof-Beats.

FERRIS HARTMAN showed a game spirit Tuesday. He looked to be hopelessly out of it when he turned into the stretch, but kept coming on and landed by a neck from Lizzie H., the good thing that Garner let up on a little too soon.

CICERO was pretty tightly squeezed up against the fence the last sixteenth of the hurdle run, and J. Owens, his rider, had a gash cut in his leg. Could he have got through the old cripple would have been hot after the long end of the purse.

STARTER FERGUSON, who has been confined to the house for some time was at Ingleside Tuesday. He is feeling well after the hard ordeal he went through, and looks much better than he did before he submitted to the surgeon's knife. A bullet that lodged in his back and which he carried fifteen years, but which only recently bothered him, was successfully removed.

It was rainy at New Orleans Wednesday and the track was sloppy. The feature of the day was the Christmas handicap, for which there were nine starters. Governor Sheehan got the lead at the quarter and won in a gallop, Jamboree second, Langdon third. The distance was a mile and an eighth and was covered in 2:00.

J. O. C. is a great three-year-old timber-topper. He gave chunks of weight to everything in the race Wednesday, and ran a game finish with the aged Templemore and beat him out a nose. Templemore was in receipt of 31 pounds from the Elkton stable entry, but had to strike his colors when the Apache horse went after him. Chas. Kerr made no mistake when he secured the sire of J. O. C. for his Antrim Stock Farm.

FROM Westfield Leader (N. J.): I have had an opportunity to examine "Absorbine," manufactured by W. F. Young, Meriden, Conn., and find it to be a discutient in which full confidence can be placed. It removes all Puffs and Swellings, from a Skin Roll to a Fatty Tumor; and at the same time it strengthens the muscles without doing the least injury to the tissues, or even to the hair. I am much pleased with it, and could not suggest anything preferable. W. H. Morse, M. H. F. B. S. Sc., Chemist and Therapeutist.

CRESCENT CITY TURF GCSSIP.

Racing by the Shores of the Mexican Gulf.

[By our Special Correspondent.]

NEW ORLEANS, December 20.—With four weeks of the winter meeting a matter of record, the prospects for or against can be pretty well determined, and when I say that no previous meeting here comes near it in point of public patronage or interest, some idea of the situation can be had. The volume of visitors is forty per cent. greater than at any time before, and the amount of money wagered is correspondingly greater. While as to the sport itself, it is far and away ahead of any recorded since the Crescent City Jockey Club was incorporated.

And while on the subject of increase of public interests in winter racing here, I will mention a talk I had recently with Passenger Agent S. F. B. Morse of the Southern Pacific. Said that gentleman: "I find that the inauguration of our Sunset Limited Express trains have drawn a good many racegoers to New Orleans. You see, they can come from the Eastern and Northern cities, remain a while at the race meeting here, and then in less than three days go from the Gulf to the Pacific and find another great race meeting in full blast at the Golden Gate. I tell you, sir, that the Sunset Limited trains have stimulated winter travel to New Orleans, if I do say it myself."

And after seeing several horsemen here I am not disposed to contradict the general S. P. P. A., such a well-known owner as Alex. Shields, of Canada, told me yesterday that he came to New Orleans with his horses as a sort of trial for San Francisco. And that now that he finds his old campaigner Logan so good here he will ship his entire stable to the Bay District course, San Francisco, after the holidays. Logan, while nearly old enough to vote, has won three races here of late in the style of a good one. Both of his last performances with 123 pounds up, and as he is a cold weather horse he should do well by the golden sands of the Pacific, and the public will find Shields out for the money every time.

John F. Stewart, of Amsterdam, N. Y., owner of King Michael (a winner at this meeting) and other horses will also leave here for the Coast in a few weeks. He goes home to the Empire State in a few days, to obtain some recruits for his stable here, including some cross-country performers. In fact from what I can glean here your tracks will have quite an influx of horses from this section after the first of the year. There are about 1100 horses quartered at the course here and in the immediate vicinity, and naturally the output to other points is not apt to winter.

A daughter of Theodore Winters' unbeaten El Rio Rey won two races here this week on successive days. Mandolina, a three-year-old chestnut filly out of Othelia, purchased at Chicago last year as a two-year-old, won at a mile galloping in 1:42½, and the next day at nine furlongs hustling in 1:56. The filly, who is handled by Walter Glen, is a little thing, not at all like her gigantic sire, but can run some and stay as well. She ran at St. Louis in October and that month won a mile and a quarter dash at Lincoln, Ill., in 2:03, so she shows the stoutness as well as speed of her ancestry.

Two other California-bred horses, old Joe Courtaey and San Blas (son of Volante), are in good form here. While neither have won as yet, each have shown form to warrant brackets in the near future. San Blas ran a mile in 1:41½ at St. Louis this fall, so he is no "slow go" when he is good.

Among the visitors here is Louis Rickabaugh, the ex-owner of Lottie Mills. The latter, who now belongs to Ed Brum, blew in a race here a few days ago, and may have seen her last days. Still, nasal bleeding is not always indicative of continued disability in that line, and the famous old mare may yet regain her old form.

Jim Wood, who was at your tracks last winter, landed a sensational race here a few days ago, a mile and seventy yard in 1:45½, very fast. Jim, the black son of Blazes, had only 93 pounds up, but he ran the last mile in 1:40½, phenomena time over circular course.

Owners Irving and Chinn however had lost confidence in the three-year-old owing to his poor form here previous to the race under discussion. And although the "fritter" played Flood down from 30 to 1 to half that price on his light weight, he ran loose as far as his stable was concerned. Forget, a two-year-old with 107 pounds up, led for nearly a mile when she "backed" up and failed to be placed.

Thus far at the meeting Starter Fitzgerald's work has been steadily improving. At the outset he had all sorts of material to contend with in the matter of jockeys, horses and owners. When I say that there seemed to be a combination formed against him the first week or two, I only quote what was a matter of general comment among all hands. But the club stood by him, and as he gradually overcame all opposition, his work the last two weeks will compare favorably with any young aspirant for starting horses in the country.

Take this place all in all, the race plant is a good one. To be able to race 100 days with no legal interference and virtually no opposition is a great thing for a winter meeting, and when I add that the city poolrooms are closed at noon each day the corresponding benefit to the track can be realized.

A few years ago, the stock of the Louisiana Jockey Club was down to 30. Now there is none for sale at 175 the last bid. Needless to say that the Louisiana Jockey Club leased the track to the Crescent City Jockey Club, and the latter organization is entitled to all the credit of the present property.

Tom Stevens, who used to own that great mare, Wang, tells me that the famous old campaigner is doing well at the stud. He also has Flonimore, a useful mare, while on the turf, and dam of Buckmore and Sealrock, both owned by Stevens. He also has Queen Bird here, another winner. Stevens races almost exclusively at Latonia in the season. He was perusing a list of that Jockey Club's stakes when I met him yesterday, and was noting entries to be made by January 15th. These long lists of entries for 1896 and 1897, issued by the Latonia Jockey Club, to close the middle of January, as noted, are attracting great attention among horsemen here. The fact that $7,500 is added to the Latonia Derby must naturally act as a loadstone.

Aside from the racing, this famous old Crescent City has many and peculiar attractions for visitors. This, the only city in this wide Unity, that is unlike any other city, and those who come year after year would regret to see it ever so modernized as to lose its distinctive features.

If the French quarter of New Orleans or the Spanish architecture of its other avenues is abolished, cathedrals modernized and its picturesque population all smothered by the process of assimilation, many people would not come here—not even for the gayety, glamor and pomp of Mardi Gras.

As a matter of fact the New Orleans of the present and past are vastly different conceptions—a decade ago when yellow fever flourished it was a hideously inadequate litter of ragged streets, dilapidated street cars drawn by slow moving mules. A time when sanitary laws were neglected, and business was managed in a primitive way.

The New Orleans of to-day has 200 miles of granite streets paved with granite from New England hills. A hundred and fifty miles of electric railway. The sewerage system is nearly completed and perfect cleanliness assured.

Its new hotels, the St. Charles, Pickwith, Suinewald, are all up to date, while its French opera and dramatic interests are catered to by the best talent at home and from abroad. Its markets are replete with all the delicacies of the table, both in fowl, vegetables, and meat and fish of the finest flavor.

Great as New Orleans has been in the past it will be greater in the future for it has linked with its habits of chivalry and hospitality and the romance of its history, the spirit and enterprise that modern wealth holds forth as an incentive to prosperity.

J. W. G. CATER.

Two Palo Alto Brood Mares.

Sontag, the gray mare that trotted against Flora Temple in 1855, was foaled in 1846, and was by Harris' Hambletonian, out of a mare by Nicholas, and she out of a daughter of Long's Eclipse. She was bred to Ethan Allen in 1856, and the produce was a chestnut colt dropped in 1857 and called Seth Warner. As Ethan Allen, like the gray mare, was a sensational horse in that day, Sontag and her foal were exhibited at fairs and attracted marked attention. In 1859 she produced to Toronto Chief, a famous stallion of that period, the chestnut colt, Toronto Sontag. The latter was bred to a mare called Nellie Gray, and the outcome was Sontag Nellie, who was bred to Mohawk Chief, a son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, and produced the great brood mare, Sontag Mohawk.

At Palo Alto Stock Farm Sontag Mohawk was prolific in the stud, and she now ranks as one of the greatest producers in the world:

1879, br c Eros, by Electioneer.....	2:29½
1880, gr f Sallie Benton, by Gen. Benton.....	2:17½
1884, gr c Sport, by Piedmont.....	2:22½
1885, gr f Sonoma, by Electioneer.....	2:28
1886, gr f Colma, by Electioneer.....	2:25½
1887, gr c Conductor, by Electioneer.....	2:14½
1888, br f Norhawk, by Norval.....	2:15½

Of these Eros is a producing sire and Sallie Benton is a producing mare. Starlight, 2:16½, for instance, is by Electioneer, out of Sallie Benton. The blood of the old-time trotting queen, Sontag, 2:31, thus lives again in some of the fast trotters of the present day. You add value to a pedigree when you trace it through fruitful connecting links back to a harness horse that aroused national enthusiasm forty and fifty years ago.

The rank of Dame Winnie as a speed-producer also steadily advances, to the confusion of the theories once put forward with dogmatic emphasis by J. H. Wallace. She is a thoroughbred, by Planet, out of Liz Mardis, by Glencoe, and has five with records of 2:23½ and better, and three with records faster than 2:20.

Palo Alto, b. b. by Electioneer.....	2:08½
Paola, b. h. by Electioneer.....	2:18
Altivo, b. h. by Electioneer.....	2:18½
Gertrude Russell, b. m. by Electioneer.....	2:23½
Big Jim, b. g. by General Benton.....	2:23½

The fastest of these made his record to high-wheel sulky, and is a great sire of speed for his opportunities. When brother Wallace thinks of Dame Winnie he must feel like kicking himself for having proclaimed so long and vigorously that every new drop of thoroughbred blood was detrimental to trotting speed.

Do You Follow Jockeys?

Those who believe in following jockeys' mounts may be interested to know that previous to the Middle Park Plate day on Loates, the Pilot of the Derby winner, steered no less than sixty-four losers in succession says a London writer.

Commenting on the matter Gale's Mirror remarks: "All great riders have their runs of bad luck, however, and this it is that makes it a certainty for the bookies who bet against jockeys' mounts. Fred Archer, Charley Wood, Mornv Cannon, T. Loates and other leading professionals have broken banks at one time or other by a persistent run of bad luck, and to suppose that there is a royal road to fortune by following jockeys' mounts is absurd.

"We can recall a memorable instance that occurred many years ago of a backer who went broke—stone and utterly—in three weeks by following George Fordham's mounts on the martingale, or 'playing up,' system. Up to the date of his downfall the gentleman in question had seldom risked more than a five on a race, but having gone into the matter, as he thought, philosophically, he determined to follow Fordham on a certain system to win big money. 'He is a certainty' was his remark, and he proceeded to bet accordingly. His first transaction was a hundred, and that resulted in his favor.

"To curtail a long story he commenced by winning close upon a thousand, and emboldened by this success had a century on George the first time he rode again. Next time he had two hundred, the third four hundred, and then eight hundred. Still George kept losing. 'I shall get it all back,' said the confident speculator, and he went on doubling as long as the funds held out, and the money could be invested. Not once in that fatal three weeks did George Fordham pilot one horse victoriously, and his unfortunate follower 'did in' £30,000! Many living sportsmen can vouch for the accuracy of this story, and doubtless not a few knew Mr. Williams, who was the hero, or rather the victim, of it."

RILEY GRANNAN beat three races Tuesday, and made a big winning on the day. He had one bet of $3,000 at even money on Montana with Hughes & Co.

A LOT of money was burned up on Walter J. Tuesday, though with an even break he would have been very close to the money.

Which Brought the Highest Prices?

J. B. O.—To decide a bet, will you please tell us which brought the highest prices at the recent Palo Alto sale in New York City, those by the trotting-bred sires or those by the half-thoroughbred?

Answer—In order to answer this, we publish the following, and our inquiring subscriber can see which wins:

Sire.	Thoroughbred and Trotting Blood.	Number Sold.	Average.
Palo Alto.....	Dam thoroughbred.....	8	$748
Azmoor.....	Dam thoroughbred.....	6	585
Whips.....	Dam thoroughbred.....	4	450
Boxwood.....	Dam by Belmont, thoroughbred.....	2	442
Piedmont.....	Grandam by Grey Eagle.....	1	400
Bernal.....	Trotting bred.....	1	360
Truman.....	Grandam thoroughbred.....	2	355
Paola.....	Dam thoroughbred.....	3	301
Laughton.....	Grandam thoroughbred.....	4	236
Advertiser.....	Trotting bred.....	1	200
Lottery.....	Dam thoroughbred.....	2	165
Nephew.....	Trotting bred.....	2	155
Good Gift.....	Dam thoroughbred.....	1	150
Alban.....	Trotting bred.....	1	150
Amigo.....	Dam by Wildside, thoroughbred.....	2	140

The result as shown will cause some heart aches as the average of 26 by half thoroughbred sires is $522.00. The average of 9 by sires carrying a quarter thoroughbred blood, $359, while the average of 11 by trotting bred sires such as Advertiser, Nephew and Bernal, all producers of speed, only averaged $201. The half trotting-bred sires are represented by over twice as many colts and fillies as the trotting bred sires, and still they average over two and a half times as much in price. It may be argued that the trotting bred colts and fillies were an inferior lot, but such was not the case.

There was seven of the get of Advertiser offered, three of the lot were out of mares by the great Nutwood, and though untried as broodmares, the late Senator Stanford thought enough of them to pay $4,400 for the three.

The other dams represented having foals by Advertiser were Cecil (dam of Cecilian (2), 2:22, and Electric Corn, 2:18½) by Gen. Benton, Emma Robson (dam of Rowena (2), 2:17; Emma R., 2:28½; Emaline, 2:28½; Attractive (2), 2:32, a filly that trotted this year a fifth heat in 2:19, timed officially as second horse). This mare Emma Robson is also the dam of Emir, a full sister so the colt sold, and Mr. Shuit, superintendent of Mr. John Shults, publicly stated that he had driven Emir a 2:08 gait, and still Robson brought but $350.

Magna, by Clay, dam Marshra, by Planet, and Celia, by Fallis, dam Celia by Gen. Benton, were the other two mares represented.

Nephew was overlooked, he had two good two-year-olds, one a black gelding out of Lina K. (dam of Electryon, 2:24½, and Coquette, 2:29½), by Don Victor.

The other a filly, out of Aileen Aaron, by Liberty Sontag, a son of Piedmont.

The filly by Bernal was out of a young mare by Dexter Prince, grandam Princess (dam of Alejandre, 2:15½), by Nutwood. The yearling by Alban was out of Sontag Dixie, one of the great broodmares.

It can not be said that the trotting sires were inferior, as Advertiser, 2:15½, is the sire of Adbell (1), 2:23, and Nordica (3), 2:19½, the only two of his get trained for a season at Palo Alto.

Bernal, 2:17, is the sire of Aria (3), 2:16½, the only one of his get ever trained at the home farm, and she was the crack racing filly of California for 1895 and was unbeaten.

Alban is sire of Seylax, 2:16½, a fast and game race horse, Almoner, 2:26½, and Hilarita, 2:29½.

Nephew is credited with Beauvy Mac, 2:14½, Vina Belle, 2:15½, Voucher, 2:21½, Elden (3), 2:19½, and sixteen others.

The highest price paid for a yearling was $1,250, for Azmol, son of the half thoroughbred Azmoor. The dam of Azmol is the young broodmare Novelist (2), 2:27, as yet untried as a producer.

The highest price paid for a two-year-old was $1,000, for Metella, daughter of the half thoroughbred Whips. The dam of Metella, Matron, is an untried broodmare.

The highest price paid for a three-year-old was $350 for Susie Azmoor, a daughter of the half thoroughbred Azmoor. The dam of Susie Azmoor produced Lord Stanley, 2:28½.

The highest price paid was $3,300, for Rio Alto (4), 2:16½, a son of the half thoroughbred sire Palo Alto.

The dam of Rio Alto is a great producer of speed from all sources, but as her great success has come from Palo Alto, though she was bred to Piedmont, Norval and Azmoor, we must give the hero of the Lone Pine the credit for the prominence Elsie has attained as a great broodmare.

Louisville Jockey Club Stakes.

The New Louisville Jockey Club has announced its stakes for the coming spring meeting of 1896. There will be twelve days' racing, beginning on May 6th. Ten valuable stakes will be run, including the Kentucky Derby, $6,000; the Clark stakes, $4,00, add the Kentucky Oaks, $3,500. In addition to these fixed events, Secretary Price announces the following stakes, to close on January 15th:

The Debutante Stakes, $2,000, for two-year-old fillies, four furlongs.

The Cadet Stakes, $2,000, for two-year-old colts and geldings, four and a half furlongs.

The Burlington Stakes, $2,000, a selling sweepstakes for two-year-olds, five furlongs.

The Maiden Stakes, $2,000, for three-year-olds that have not won prizes to January 1, 1895, six and a half furlongs.

The Schulte Stakes, $2,000, for three-year-olds, one mile.

The Louisville Handicap, $1,000, for three-year-olds and upwards, one mile and a sixteenth.

The Frank Fehr Stakes, $1,000, for three-year-olds and upward, selling sweepstakes, one mile.

Names Claimed.

PLEASANTON, December 24, 1895

The Merriwa Stock Farm claims the name of "Luck" for the chestnut colt by imp. Merriwa from Mr. and "Richmond" for chestnut colt by imp. Merriwa Little Rose.

GEORGE HOWSON, the well known ex-jockey and trainer, is taking a much needed rest, and John Wendover, formerly second to Matt Byrnes, is now training the Owen Bros. string.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

The round-trip ticket to the Newark Coursing meet will cost $1.00.

There will be an open coursing meeting at Sacramento on January 12th. Nominations at $5 each. John Grace will judge and Jas. Wren will slip.

John Grace must have ridden no less than from 80 to 100 miles a day while judging the coursing meeting at Merced, and the majority of the time at the top of his horse's speed. It is his good riding, combined with his excellent judgment that makes him so popular. He used six horses and they all earned their oats.

The Newark Coursing Park will be re-opened to-morrow under the management of T. J. Cronin. The draw will take place and the nominations will close after we go to press; but it is thought at present writing that no less than fifty-two dogs will be nominated. The new Interstate Coursing Club and the majority of the lovers of legitimate coursing will support Mr. Cronin in every way in their power and a successful winter's coursing is assured. John Grace will judge and Jas. F. Grace will slip.

A scientific journal undertakes to give a sound reason for the affection popularly bestowed upon dogs by mankind, young and old. It is because the dog is at once the sincerest flatterer and the most successful cheerer that the human race ever had. A good dog always gives us the feeling that we are a sort of a god. No other animal does anything of the kind. The cat treats us an inferior, and the horse will treat us a dear friend, not a divinity. The dog, moreover, imparts something of his peculiar gaiety to us in a way that is irresistible. He mingles his suggestion of gaiety with his flattery, for he not only leaves his dinner untasted to walk with us, but the mere fact that we are apparently giving ourselves the pleasure of a walk, raises him into such a delirium of delight that the sight of it puts all our dumps and blues to such reproach that we shake them off in very shame. And when we don't walk, but sit moodily at home, the dog curls up lovingly at our feet and looks up now and then into our eyes, and "glides into our darker musings with a mild and healing sympathy." Yes, there is solid reason for the fondness of man for dogs, and it will never come to an end until either men or dogs become very different beings from what they are now.—Dog Fancier.

The Cropping Question.

I consider the effect of the expected new rule of prohibition of cropping dogs will be a death blow to Great Danes. The reasons for my opinion are substantially the same as advanced by the able delegate of the Great Dane Club, Mr. Clifford Wood. What I would like to add are few facts, however, which are especially for the benefit of those who demand this move of the American Kennel Club on the ground of cruelty.

The higher a dog is bred the stronger his inclination to degenerate. The better quality of long eared dogs of the day, bloodhounds, St. Bernards, mastiffs, etc., are to an alarming degree subject to ear diseases, which never, or very seldom, occur in a cropped ear; fifteen per cent of them suffer from canker, and it would be interesting to know what an immense amount of canker medicine is sold alone by one firm, Spratts Patent. Now what would you rather have, a dog suffer from the brief pain of amputation of a tissue so low in its order in its anatomy (of which I will presently speak) or the dreadful effects of a malignant disease? Let us judge by the effects. Great Danes are free from ear diseases without any care being bestowed upon them, while the other breeds, in spite of all attention, suffer. What right have we to correct or interfere with nature, and why not leave it to her to remedy things? might be asked. But I claim that as long as nature will not of its own volition produce fancy stock, and as long as it remains for human tastes and human efforts to produce it, just so long it should be our privilege to take care of the abnormalities thus produced.

Now for a few words as to the microscopic anatomy of the ear. On examination it will be found that the bulk of the ear consists of yellow elastic cartilage in which no nerves or nerve endings of any kind nor blood vessels are to be found. As the ear is not cut at the root, but perhaps at a point medium between base and apex, we do not cut any of the aural muscles, but we take away a part which is practically dead when compared with an organ of high character. Furthermore, who ever heard of a fully grown Great Dane being cropped? The operation is performed on ninety per cent. between the ages of from two to three months, at which time the sensibility of the brain is not so fully developed by any means as at full growth, and taking this and the above fact together should convince the most chicken-hearted individual that this barbarous (?) method is in reality not as painful as pulling a child's teeth as they become loose to make room for the permanent set. I would not give a fig for a dog that could not stand it.

It is surely not nearly as painful as subsequent ear diseases, etc.

This onslaught on the rights and this interference with the exercise of the judgment of breeders and owners of dogs by the American Kennel Club has been instigated principally by the so-called Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The aim of the American Kennel Club is the elevation of the different breeds of dogs, each breed being judged under a standard approved by the A. K. C. The object of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is to take care of the curs which run around homeless. How can two such organizations meet on a mutual basis? If they do, it is apparently the case on this question, it suggests at once either one or the other has departed from its constitutional principles. Who has betrayed its supporters in this?

A. K. C. or the S. P. C. A.?

Great Dane or bull terrier men, who have drawn up standards for the respective breeds want to insert the clause that no cropping should be practiced, then it behooves the American Kennel Club to vote on this motion. Until that time comes it should attend to its own and not to the interests of a diametrically opposed organization, and make capital for them in addition to the many flimsy pretenses upon which the S. P. C. A. now exists, for instance, the regular summer craze of "mad dog." If the American Kennel Club accomplishes its objects, i. e., the increase of thoroughbred dogs, just so the usefulness of the other society diminishes. Barring accident, every thoroughbred dog has a master who takes care of the valuable animal, having paid and cared for it; and the homeless dogs and the society which lives upon their existence became an unnecessary evil.

If the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals wishes to widen its scope and really endeavors to become useful, let it protect the most abused of all animals, the human race, against cruelty. At the present time the Great Dane breeders and fanciers are more abused, and they feel it much more keenly than their dogs feel the cropping of ears at the proper time.

As long as I was a member of the American Kennel Club I always believed in making as few laws, especially arbitrary laws, as possible, and in allowing a certain extent of self-government among the members. There seems to be a remarkable absence of such sentiment now.—A. H. Heppner, in American Field.

Dogue de Bordeaux.

The old saying that there is nothing new under the sun is once more corroborated by Mrs. Mary A. Jagger, a well-known St. Bernard authority in England, who has contributed a letter to our contemporary, The British Fancier, on the animals which lately have been sprung on the fancy in Great Britain as something new and very desirable. The sponsor in England of this "new breed" made merry at the Boston terrier's expense, and recently we gave Boston terrier fanciers the cue that their opportunity to turn the tables was at hand. Our surmise that the dogue de Bordeaux was nothing more than a bulldog mastiff mongrel is confirmed by Mrs. Jagger, and if it attains popularity with such a conservative and thoroughbred-loving people as Queen Victoria's subjects we shall be much surprised. Mrs. Jagger's letter is as follows:

"Being present, though not an exhibitor, at the Kennel Club show, I naturally went to look at these dogs hench, and found, in my idea, a bull and mastiff and a mastiff and bull—in the former the bull type predominating, and in the latter the mastiff. Thirty years ago, and further back than I can remember, a similar type of dog was very common in my village, as well as in the surrounding small towns and villages. They were descendants of those once famed for their pinning powers in the hulling, a sport that lingered long around here after being forbidden by law (the hollow where the bull fights took place is still intact). Some of the dogs were larger than others, the large size, having more mastiff in the cross; but whether large or nearer the bull terrier in size, they were invariably named bull and mastiff. Those who have read Charlotte Bronte's 'Shirley' will remember her description of Tartar, which is an exact word painting of one of the dogs hench last week at the Palace show. They would be as common then in Hawthorne's about here, and therefore familiar for description. Breeds change rapidly on the show bench, but often linger in their purity in remote places. When these dogs were no longer required for the hulling, they were in great requisition for night dogs at the mills, guards underneath carriers' carts and yard dogs for the isolated homes on the hillsides, beneath which roofs the manufacturing and agricultural businesses were carried on side by side. When a child, I was fond of visiting a village character known as 'Dog Ben' or 'The Slipper.' He was the descendant of a family once in great request in the hulling as slippers; that is, holding the dog that was to attack the hull, and only allowing the animal to go at the most favorable moment. (The name still clings to the family). A refined and insipid personage would have named this man a low, vulgar person; but I look back upon him now as one of our racy, original characters, so fast dying out in my native village. I remember distinctly his well-made, active brindled bull bitch, as well as many of her progeny, whose sire was invariably a mastiff, small in comparison with present-day show specimens but similar in type and size to the Lynne Hall breed of mastiffs. The dog was known to the country side as Towzer—an alert guardian at one of the old homesteads where the spinning-wheel whirled on the hearth and the handloom clacked in the chamber overhead. The progeny of this cross—some black noses and some fawn—were almost an exact copy of the smaller fawn brindled dogue de Bordeaux benched. 'Dog Ben' had a photograph of a small bull and mastiff famed for its 'pinning' powers in the hulling, hung over the fireplace in his cottage. I saw a photograph, but it was a silhouette, as our village had not heard of photography in those days. The dog's outline was in black, but I knew his color was brindled fawn, as 'Dog Ben' often excited my childish interest by relating to me the dog's exploits in the hulling. The likeness was not unlike the description given of Rah by Dr. Brown in 'Rah and His Friends,' only smaller in size. Years ago I was angry with myself that I did not preserve the rosewood mounted silhouette of this small bull and mastiff that the old man gave to me when he had to go to the workhouse, but now I am more than angry with myself. I read the fanciful character given to these dogs a few weeks ago, but if we take Charlotte Bronte's description of Tartar's disposition, or Dr. Brown's of Rah, we have a true knowledge of these dogs' character that I remember so well. As I look upon the dogue de Bordeaux as one and the same with the old bull and mastiff, I venture to say the description of Tartar's character applies equally as well to them. How much better would it be if our leading exhibitors in the show world would turn their attention to the standard breeds—as advocated by you in your criticism of Mr. Vero Shaw's excellent article—in place of introducing cheap novelties in the shape of foreign street curs. In our collies, fox-terriers, spaniels, pointers, etc., there is a wide field for honest work in breeding back to original type. Perhaps the dogue de Bordeaux may be a distinct breed, but after all there is nothing newer than the old."—Am. Field.

The $500 and 500 Dog Rules.

NEW YORK, December 20, 1895.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The American Kennel Club, at its meeting held yesterday, rescinded the $500 and 500 dog rules, so far as the territory west of the 95th degree of longitude is concerned. Yours truly, AMERICAN KENNEL CLUB,
A. P. VREDENBURGH, Sec.

A Smart Dog.

One summer afternoon a group of children were playing at the end of a pier that projects into Lake Ontario, near Kingston. The proverbial careless child of the party made a backward step from the pier into the water. None of his companions could save him, and their cries had brought no one from the shore, when, just as he was sinking for the third time, a superb Newfoundland dog rushed down the pier into water and pulled the boy out.

Those of the children who did not accompany the boy home took the dog to a confectioner's on the shore and fed him with as great a variety of cakes and other sweets as he could eat. So far the story is, of course, only typical of scores of well-known cases. The individuality of this case is left for the sequel.

The next afternoon the same group of children were playing at the same place when the canine hero of the day before came trotting down to them with the most friendly wags and nods. There being no occasion this time for supplying him with delicacies, the children only stroked and petted him. The dog, however, had not come out of pure sociability. A child in the water and cakes and candy stood to him in the close and obvious relation of cause and effect, and if this relation was not understood by the children he resolved to impress it upon them. Watching his chance he crept up to the child nearest the edge of the pier, gave a sudden push which sent him into the water, then sprang in after him and gravely brought him to shore.—Philadelphia Times.

SALES.

Dr. C. M. Selfridge (Oakland) has sold a cocker spaniel dog pup by Woodland Duke (Champion Black Duke—Woodland Jude)—Reah S., to J. H. Turner, on December 21st.

WHELPS.

Chas. Dresser's (San Francisco) hull terrier bitch Mazy, whelped Dec. 5th, 6—1 dog, to John D. Spreckles' bull terrier dog.

THE GUN.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Black brant are still very plentiful at Tomales Bay.

The only thing certain about snipe is their undoubted toothsome-ness on the table.

Chas. Greene was at Point Reyes on Sunday and caught a basket full of small steel-heads.

In the neighborhood of Calcutta hags of forty couple of snipe are a common occurrence.

John Butler was at Throckmorton Lagoon on Sunday and caught a fine lot of small steel heads.

Squirrels must be very plentiful near Point Reyes. One hunter bagged nine fine, fat greys on Sunday.

The scheme of combining the clubs in one large blue rock ground does not seem to gain much headway.

The third match between A. H. King and J. G. Messner was won by the former with a score of 81 to 83.

Duck shooting was very fair on the Alameda marshes last Sunday. Some good hags were made at Alvarado and Mt. Eden.

The steelhead trout vs. salmon case has been postponed again. It will probably come up before Judge Low some time next week.

The duck hunters who made their headquarters at Bell's ark at Espinosa report seeing thousands of ducks on Sunday morning last, and the hags made were for the most part very good.

Little Willie—I was going fishing on Sunday, but my papa wouldn't let me. Minister—That's the right kind of papa to have. Did he tell you why? Willie—Yes, sir. He said there wasn't enough bait for two.

The Russian river should be in fine condition for steelhead fishing to-day. On Monday the river was falling very rapidly and clearing. The run has been the best for many years. No fish were caught on Monday, the water was too muddy.

If it has not rained at the headwaters of the Russian river the steelhead fishing should be unexcelled. If you go to Duncan's Mills to-day, don't forget to stop at the El Bonito. Mr. Morgan, the proprietor, is an angler himself, and makes his hotel a regular angler's resort. His rates are reasonable, boats free to guests and the table is first-class in every respect.

The annual meeting of the Board of Governors of the California Inanimate Target Association was not held on Saturday evening last for the good and sufficient reason that only four members were in attendance. We would suggest to this association that they change their meeting night. Saturday night is certainly the worst night in the week to get the members together.

The cabin erected at the mouth of Horan's Slough and occupied by two men who guard the obstruction placed there by the Cordelia Shooting Club, was burned Saturday night, and it was with difficulty that the guards escaped with their lives. Club officials assert that the fire was incendiary, and suspicion rests on well known poachers. An investigation will probably be made, says the Record-Union. [This would, of course, be a natural solution of the problem, but we are inclined to think it an accident. If the "poachers" are guilty we sincerely hope they will be caught and prosecuted to the full extent of the law.]

E. H. Williams made a fine bag of snipe near Shelbyville on Sunday.

Harry Weiss killed thirty-six ducks at Point Reyes on Sunday and Monday.

Sprig are very plentiful at Rio Vista. One hunter killed 98 in one day recently.

John and Arthur Lemmon and Chas. Sutton killed 60 ducks at Tobin's Lake near San Pedro on Sunday last.

R. H. Liddle, W. J. Hynes and Chas. Wands shot on the Suisun marsh near the Drawridge on Sunday and killed 58 birds.

Capt. Cummins, Chas. Greene, Jos. Dieves and wife and several enthusiastic anglers went to Duncan's Mills on Thursday to fish for steelheads.

Shooting and Fishing's Christmas issue is a gem. We notice, among other interesting articles, a story by "Dick Swiveler" on woodcock shooting.

Donald McCrae and W. McCrae went up to Bells Ark at Epinosa on Friday last and killed 105 ducks, 10 geese and 10 swan, on Saturday and Sunday.

There was a quarter of an inch of ice on the ponds on the Suisun marsh last Sunday morning and the majority of the ducks went to the big sloughs in consequence.

The person holding ticket number 1622 has won the gun at R. Liddle Co.'s drawing. The draw took place on Christmas eve and the gun will be presented to the bearer of the ticket on presentation of the same.

Edgar Forster and S. A. Sharp killed ten ducks near the mouth of Petaluma creek on Sunday. The Alameda County Sportsmen's Club was well represented at McGills' on Sunday, but the bags were for the most part small.

The shooting at Alviso, Mowry's and Mt. Eden should be good to-morrow. The ducks appear to be leaving the Sonoma marshes, and for many years the shooting has been at its best about this time of year at the Bridges.

W. J. Hynes and a couple of friends were using the new "Monarch" smokeless for duck shooting on Sunday last at Suisun and they are very much pleased with it. It is very quick and gives great penetration with slight recoil.

J. S. Fanning, who has been traveling in the South for the "Gold Dust" Co. has returned, but will go on the road shortly. W. R. Robertson will soon return from his Northern trip. They both report greatly increased sales of "Gold Dust."

W. N. Wetmore and C. W. Debenham were at the Pastime Club, Alviso Bridges on Saturday and Sunday and bagged 120 teal, sprig, widgeon, black jack, gadwall and spoonbills. They report seeing a great many salmon trout in Coyote Creek.

There is some talk of Martinez Chick's forfeiting the "Gold Dust" championship medal to some shooter in this vicinity where there will be some chance of its being challenged for. W. O. Fendner would be the proper man to hold it.

The only white moose ever seen or known to be killed in the State of Maine, fell during the recent open season in that State to the gun of Mr. Sargent of Crafon. As a matter of course, Mr. Sargent prizes his albino moose very bigbly, for it is a rare specimen.

The New A. K. C. Rules.

The $500 rule has been rescinded and all cities and towns west of the 95th meridian may hold shows under A. K. C. rules and offer diplomas or ribbons if they cannot afford to offer cash. The 95th meridian runs through the Eastern boundary of the Dakotas and Nebraska, a few miles west of Kansas city in Kansas and cuts off a portion of Indian Territory and Texas.

This rule will unquestionably be of great benefit to the doggy interests of this coast. New clubs will spring up and small shows will be held in the principle towns.

The 500 dog rule is quite another matter. The rule has been rescinded and champions may be made in classes where there is no competition whatever. The amendment proposed by the Coast fanciers, that the rule be changed from 500 dogs to 300 dogs or 250 would have suited this coast admirably, but to rescind the rule altogether was a grave error. We have often expressed the opinion that the old rule was a poor one at best, as a 500 dog show may contain many very weak classes and a small show have strong classes of the same varieties but the old rule was certainly some protection while the present is absolutely none. However, it will tend to stimulate a somewhat lagging interest and we can only hope for the best. It will certainly tend to fill our challenge classes.

Daring Robbery Near Ingleside.

At 6:45 P. M. Wednesday, as Reuben H. Clark, cashier of the Ingleside bar, accompanied by John F. Bronner, clerk of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club, while riding to the city on the Mission street cars from the track, were held up by four highwaymen armed with Winchester rifles. The latter fired upon the track employees and wounded both. Clark, who had a sack containing about $800 tried to save it by offering resistance was so badly wounded in the foot that it is feared that member will have to be amputated. Bronner was only slightly wounded in the hand. Officer Joseph like Reuben Clark emptied his revolver at the robbers, and before he could reload was shot through the thigh. The robbers seized the sack and disappeared. The car which contained a number of passengers, gentlemen and ladies, proceeded on its way to this city, where surgical aid was summoned.

A large force of detectives were at once sent to the scene of the robbery and have been scouring the surrounding country all night, but so far have met with no success in finding the highwayman.

This is the boldest street-car robbery that has ever occurred in this city, and there is no doubt the robbers knew who Clark was, and also knew that he was in the habit of carrying a sack of money to the city after the races each day, and knew the car he would take.

The California State Veterinary Medical Association.

The California State Veterinary Medical Association met in the lecture room of the California Veterinary College—a department of the University of California—at the corner of Post and Fillmore Streets, on Wednesday, December 11th, 1895, at 2 o'clock P. M.

The meeting was called to order by the Secretary—Dr. R. A. Archibald—who stated that in the unavoidable absence of the President and Vice-President, it would be necessary to elect a President pro tem, whereupon Dr. H. A. Spencer of San Jose was chosen as President pro tem.

The regular order of business was then taken up.

The annual report from the Secretary revealed the fact that the Association, both numerically and financially, was in a flourishing condition.

The election of officers for the ensuing year are as follows: President, Prof. F. W. Skaife, San Francisco; Vice President, Dr. H. Lemke, Bakersfield; Secretary, Dr. D. F. Fox, Sacramento; Treasurer, Dr. F. E. Pierce, Oakland. The newly elected secretary being absent, Dr. Tbos. Maclay was chosen as secretary pro tem.

Dr. H. F. Spencer of San Jose, then read a very interesting paper on "Ulceration of the Mucous Membrane of the Mouth."

Dr. R. A. Archibald of San Francisco, read a very learned and interesting paper on "Contraction of the Horse's Foot."

Prof. F. W. Skaife also read a very interesting paper on "Psychology."

The several papers brought forth a very lively discussion. On the following day, December 12, 1895, the members of the association witnessed some very interesting operations at the College Hospital, which is conducted by Dr. R. A. Archibald, the ex-Secretary of the association.

GEORGE MILLER, who rode Bright Phoebus in the Christmas handicap, was very wrathy, and justly so, at Jerry Chorn. Jerry was up on imp. Star Ruby, and just before the turn for home was made, deliberately cut Miller's mount off. But for this, the latter thinks, he would have given Libertine a strong argument. Both Chorn and Macklin are prone to do a great deal of crowding and bumping in the races in which they ride and a good, stiff line imposed would, perhaps, work a benefit.

The Occident Stake

OF 1898
A Trotting Stake for Foals of 1895
CALIFORNIA STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY

To be trotted at the California State Fair of 1898. Entries to close January 1, 1896, with Edwin F. Smith, Secretary, at the office in Sacramento. One hundred dollars entrance, of which $10 must accompany nomination; $15 to be paid January 1, 1897; $25 to be paid January 1, 1898; and $50 thirty days before the race. The Occident Cup, of the value of $400, to be awarded by the society. Mile heats, three in five, to harness. First colt to receive cup and six-tenths; second colt, three-tenths, and third colt, one-tenth of the stakes. Five to enter, three to start, otherwise N. T. A. rules to govern.

Remember you are not held for full amount of entrance in case colt goes wrong; only forfeit payments made, which relieves you from further responsibility and declares entries out.

This stake is growing in value each year. In 1895 it was worth $2,400, and for 1896 will be in excess of that amount.

Remember the date of closing is January 1, 1896.
C. M. CHASE, President.
EDWIN F. SMITH, Secretary.

Training The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed and liberally illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm."

Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

"Gold Dust" Smokeless Shot Gun Powder.

THE BEST SHOT GUN POWDER MADE.

Its claims for superiority are as follows:—

- FIRST It is not affected by heat, cold, moisture or age, and will not detonate.
SECOND It will not cause headache.
THIRD It is under all conditions the safest powder in use, as it contains no nitro-glycerine or gun cotton. It will not explode unless confined and ignited by fire, as in the loaded shell in the gun.
FOURTH It has a light recoil and great velocity.
FIFTH It is the quickest and has the greatest killing power at any distance.
SIXTH It gives the best pattern at any and all distances.
SEVENTH Its action is the most uniform in all respects.
EIGHTH It can be used in cheap paper, or brass shells with any primer.
NINTH It is the cleanest powder in use, and if the gun is not cleaned for weeks after using, a dry cloth is all that is required for that purpose, when it will be noticed that there is no corrosive action, but, on the contrary, the residue has preserved the metal. The residue does not accumulate with long continued shooting, there being no more after filly shots than after the first. (After shooting other powders, the gun barrels should be wiped out and cleaned before using "GOLD DUST.")
TENTH It is the cheapest powder to use, as every package sold contains full weight (16 oz. to the lb.); and each pound contains more than double the number of loads to the same bulk of any other powder (with the exception of one brand, which sportsmen generally hesitate to use, considering it dangerous).
